Mayor Wants Silence

Punishment Hikes Policeman's Beat

Loudermilk was ordered Friday to walk back and forth between police headquarters and fire headquarters as punishment for remarks which offended Mayor Leland Larrison. In a note placed on the police bulletin board, Larrison warned Loudermilk's penalty would be extended 30 days for each newspaper account of Loudermilk's treks.

* * *

"I set the punishment. I don't think it's too unusual," Larrison said.

Loudermilk makes the trip twice every hour between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. daily. The fire and police stations are about two-thirds of a mile apart.

"It's not so bad once you get used to it," he said, "but I'm not, yet."

* * *

Neither the mayor nor Loudermilk would say what the remarks were which offended Larrison. But Larrison, who said Loudermilk's hikes will probably end about the first of the year, indicated that, if Loudermilk made any more such remarks, he could look forward to punishment hikes for the rest of Larrison's term, three years and some months.

Larrison said, "This type of punishment has been used around here for years and years. It is normal procedure, but we don't put it out to the public."

Grits Cheer Chief:

Wilderness Days Done

By IAN STREET, Legislative Reporter

PENTICTON — More than 1,000 wildly enthusiastic Liberals Saturday acclaimed Patrick McGeer as the leader who will bring the B.C. Liberal party out of the wilderness where it has languished for a generation, and he replied: "Look around you and know each other, because you are the people who are going to make the next government in British Columbia."

He received slightly more than 68.6 per cent of the 1,002 valid votes cast by the delegates. Mr. Gardom, a late entry in the race, ran strongly in the final stages of the campaign but couldn't make any significant inroads into the committed delegate strength for Dr. McGeer.

FIRST TASK

Immediately afterward, Dr. McGeer told a press conference his first task as provincial party leader would be to prepare for the next B.C. election.

He said he would take a leave of absence from his job as associate professor in the faculty of medicine at the University of B.C. and become a full-time party leader in about a month.

Asked when he thought the next election would come, Dr. McGeer said that was up to Premier Bennett and the reporters present knew as well as he did that it could not be predicted.

'WE'RE READY'

"We're ready for spring, or fall, or next week," he said.

At the windup convention banquet Saturday night, Dr. McGeer told the audience he felt the personal financial affairs of influential political figures must be "completely open" and said he intended to make public his salary as party leader in the near future.

In his speech to the convention, Dr. McGeer said the purpose of the party is to form the next government in this province, but that it is not his final goal.

The next Liberal government, he said will be unparalleled for quality in the history of B.C.

He recalled that 27 years ago former premier Duff Pattullo had predicted the Liberal party which he led would not be the power in the province for another generation.

HIGHEST GOALS

"That generation of wandering 'in the wilderness' has passed," Dr. McGeer declared. "For the first time in 27 years we have the strength to aim for the highest political goals in our province, and to know that we can achieve them."

He criticized the Social Credit administration for accumulating hundreds of millions of dollars in B.C. Hydro bonds and $150,000,000 worth of cash and short-term notes while the province lacks classrooms, adequate housing and sufficient hospital beds.

"The dominating goal of the present government, the government that rules our society today, is the accumulation of wealth. Our task is to convert the wealth of government into enrichment of people.

MIND, SPIRIT

"That enrichment is not measured in dollars. It is not measured in corporate securities. That enrichment is measured in qualities of human mind and spirit. It is measured in the excitement of our environment and the security of our society."

Education and research must be the twin keys to a new prosperity for all British Columbians, said Dr. McGeer.

"In the past, government in B.C. has encouraged feats all of one mould — the mould of Paul Bunyan. In the future we shall also encourage feats of the mould of an Albert Einstein or an Alexander Graham Bell. We shall take full advantage of science and technology to

B.C. Civil Servants Changing Mood?

Militants Win Seat Majority

By DON COLLINS
Labor Reporter

VANCOUVER — Militants have won a majority of seats on the executive of the B.C. Government Employees Association.

It was their only measure of success at the 11,000-member association's two-day convention that ended here Saturday. They placed eight men on the 13-man executive.

Members of a hard-core group had said before the convention they would seek to win leadership from the moderate element that has guided the association since its beginning 25 years ago.

Shot Down

Until Saturday afternoon they had met with one failure after another.

On Friday several of their resolutions, including one aimed at what they considered the weak leadership of general secretary Edward P. O'Connor, were shot down.

And Friday night Norman Thornber, who is seeking Mr. O'Connor's job, was ejected from a closed meeting. He was attending the convention as observer, but said he couldn't remain in the closed meeting with other observers because he is a paid association worker.

Action Mood

Mr. Thornber is business agent in Victoria of the unlicensed marine branch.

As the votes were being cast Saturday, Mr. Thornber said in an interview he thought his group had "started the delegates thinking."

"This may be the beginning of a change. The delegates have demonstrated in there that they are in a mood for action."

However, not only the militants were responsible for that mood.

The man the Thornber group has opposed — Mr. O'Connor — told the delegates Saturday morning that he was surprised none of them had spoken out against the provincial government's decision last week to reject all wage appeals that had been made on behalf of the civil servants.

Teeth Sought

"I thought you would have been flooding the microphones at this convention," he said.

By the afternoon they had taken his advice and were attempting to put teeth into a resolution that would demand government action on the wage matter.

The intention was to tell the government they wanted the issue handed over to the newly-appointed mediation commission. Premier Bennett announced Friday that he intended to have the civil service commission study the matter in time to bring in recommendations prior to next January's budget.

The resolution — in its preliminary stage — also threatened economic sanctions

Signs Spur Fights

Violence is increasing daily between supporters of U.S. third-party president candidate George Wallace and opponents, mainly youthful. This sign led to fistfight at Buffalo rally Friday, after which street gunplay wounded one man. More fighting and ripping of similar signs occurred Saturday in rallies at Cleveland and other cities. No Blow to Olympics Strikers' Promise

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The National Students Strike Council, which claims to represent nearly 500,000 students, said Saturday it had no wish to disrupt the Olympic Games and planned in the future to confine demonstrations to school grounds. The games begin Oct. 12.

The statement followed the death of four more persons wounded in Wednesday's bloody gun battle between police and students. This raised the death toll to 35 since Wednesday.

A student leader, Miguel Yoldi, said at a news conference that all future student demonstrations would be confined to campuses and secondary school territory "so that we can avoid future assassinations of our people."

SAID BEFORE

Newsmen pointed out that the strike council had issued such statements in the past, but that they were followed by further bloodshed. Yoldi explained that if all demonstrations were on university or school property, police would agree to stay away.

Twenty - nine persons were killed in the gunfight at the Plaza of the Three Cultures, and more than 60 were seriously wounded. On Friday a sniper and one of his two victims died in an isolated shooting incident in the same square.

Officials said Saturday afternoon there had been no reports of violence in 24 hours. The International Olympic Committee reiterated that the Olympic Games would begin as scheduled on Oct. 12 despite a prom-

Lesage Leads Way On Language Vote

MONTREAL (UPI) — Quebec Liberal leader Jean Lesage, in what many delegates to the provincial party convention termed a "long-awaited show of leadership," Saturday won approval of a controversial resolution supporting establishment of French as the "priority language" in Quebec.

After a drawn-out debate in committee during the day, the convention approved the motion in a unanimous voice vote at night.

Many delegates praised Lesage for his personal intervention in the afternoon to win approval of the resolution in a packed meeting of the cultural affairs committee. "Lesage proved his leadership by intervening" and "Lesage showed he was the real leader" were among comments voiced by delegates after the prolonged committee session.

Delegates from the English-speaking wing of the party attempted to gain passage of an amendment which would have recommended that the provincial and federal constitutions be amended to guarantee "equal language rights for all"—particularly, to protect rights of Quebec's Anglophone minority.

Two Down Two to Go

Relief pitcher Joe Hoerner was only one of many St. Louis stars Saturday when Cards beat Tigers in Detroit 7-3 to take 2-1 edge in baseball's World Series. Game at 10 a.m. PDT today renews first-game rivalry of pitching aces Bob Gibson of St. Louis and Denny McLain of Detroit. See also Page 13.—(AP)

Non-Voters in Greece Losing Car Rights

ATHENS (AP) — Greeks who failed to vote in last Sunday's constitutional referendum without valid reason will not be entitled to a driver's licence or renewal of their old one, the government said Saturday.

Defaulters also will not be able to obtain or renew an automobile circulation permit or sell or trade their car.

Douglas Tells Party:

Four Provinces Hold NDP Hope

OTTAWA (CP) — T. C. Douglas urged the New Democratic Party Saturday to concentrate its political efforts during the next four years in the four provinces where it can make "substantial gains," B.C., Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Each will have a provincial election in the next three to four years, Douglas told a meeting of the party's federal executive. The minimum aim should be for the NDP to form the government in at least two provinces and the official opposition in the others.

This would give the party a "very good springboard" to head into the next federal election, probably about 1972.

Douglas said the party can't waste time because the popularity of Prime Minister Trudeau is being drained away "much more quickly" than expected.

He said this was due in part to Trudeau's "own heavy-handedness" and in part to his acceptance of economic thinking which will mean "very substatial" tax increases.

BEST CHANCES

The NDP should not forget the Atlantic provinces, Quebec and Alberta, where it has been blanked repeatedly in federal elections. But it certainly should concentrate its resources in the four provinces where it stands the best chance of success.

Saskatchewan and B.C. are the provinces where the NDP should aim at forming the provincial government, Douglas said.

Frankness Secret Matter

OTTAWA (CP)—The New Democratic Party federal executive voted 19-9 Saturday to close its meeting to reporters after members decided they wanted to do some frank talking about party strategy and potential new leaders.

Winnipeg North MP David Orlikow led the majority by saying the executive is meeting to plan a 1969 leadership convention. Tommy Douglas says he won't run again and people in the running must be discussed—"but I sure as hell am not going to do it while the press is here."

Main Post Office Stamped 'Slow'

BILL THOMAS' NOTEBOOK

Sunday

STAMPS OUT: At 4:35 p.m. Friday, our man behind the lens, Jim Ryan, went into the main post office. He counted 18 wickets, but only six open for business.

He waited in line for 10 minutes to get a stamp. He also got mad. There is no parking outside the building and the meters on the side street are for 12 minutes only.

Mr. Ryan would like Prime Minister Trudeau to cut back the post office operation here by two-thirds, as this is obviously the level at which it functions.

It really is annoying when so many of the sections are closed while the customers back up and fume.

□

PITY POOR TOSH: Remember last summer in Bastion Square, how Pat Kelleher ran his fruit barrow and spent most of his time standing for photographers in his pearly suit?

He and his wife Doris did a good business and helped get people into the commercial backwater. Now he has been laid off and is looking for work. With three children to support, he needs a job.

He really got the pip when he was laid off just as the last three weeks of fine weather started.

Next year, the pearly hopes to get a stand for his fruit barrow near the new provincial museum. Two new barrows are on the way from London's Covent Garden market. He got his start as a barrow boy in London at Shepherd's Bush market, but he has also worked as a furniture mover.

□

SMOOTH SHOW: The Red Lion now is featuring a pleasant double act in Tink and Judy Robinson. The husband-and-wife team sings and dances its way through a smooth, easy-going show that seems to delight the patrons.

Mr. Robinson is an accomplished tap dancer and does a routine that at once explains the art and also entertains the customers. Judy Robinson sings standards with a pleasing style.

The Robinsons have just completed a season in Barkerville and will be here this week.

HOME WANTED: When Anthony J. Else decided to expand his club A.J.'s at the foot of Fort Street, he opened up the Barrel Room.

A well-wisher decided he needed a couple of large barrels, just to set the tone of the room. The casks are so big one won't even go through the door. The other got as far as the lobby.

They look like the things African hunters used to carry full of brandy in case they died on safari and had to be pickled to get home.

The term describes what occurs when a car travels fast on a wet road: the tires actually ride on a cushion of water, losing contact with the road and reducing braking and steering power.

The engineers have found hydroplaning is related to tire pressure.

The soggy motorist now works out the square root of his tire pressure and multiplies by 10. This gives the speed at which the hydroplaining effect takes over. If the tire pressure is 25 pounds then the square root is five. This multiplied by 10 is 50 so the effect takes over at 50 miles an hour. Really, it's much easier to drive with caution.

WHY NOT? There have been complaints that hundreds of wild animals will die when the big Peace River dam is flooded. Why not allow hunters to crop the game for sale to hotels? It would be quite a gourmet treat to be able to offer filet of moose or roast saddle of venison on the menu.

If the animals are going to waste, this might be an answer.

THINK CANADIAN: The Blackball Ferry advertises trip prices in dollars and cents at the Wharf Street terminal. But Canadians get a nasty shock when they go to buy a ticket. The prices are not in Canadian funds but in foreign currency. Why should Canadians have to pay exchange for their tickets? This is a company operating in Canada and the national currency should be good enough.

From the letters and calls it would seem quite a few Canadians are riled by this.

Your Good Health

Gout Blamed on Uric Acid

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: Our son, 20, is away at school and the doctor says he has too much uric acid. That's what causes gout, but he says gout is no longer associated only with the big toe, but with all of one's joints.

What causes uric acid? Can it be eliminated, and how? How serious is it? Is diet as well as medication important? — Mrs. W.H.

Gout has been associated with the big toe, because that is the commonest place for an attack. It can attack other joints.

Excessive uric acid (which also contributes to kidney stones, and should be controlled for that reason, too) results from a metabolic disorder, but the exact process is not yet clearly known.

Dear Dr. Molner: I noticed the letter about using 5 or 10 per cent formaldehyde solution to prevent excessive sweating of the feet. I tried everything, including that, with one of my sons, but nothing worked until a friend told me to try wool socks — but they must be all wool, to absorb. That solved it for us. — C.W.

Thank you. The same methods don't always work for everyone, but the wool socks idea is sound and has been used by others.

Dear Dr. Molner: I just had an operation to remove a calcium deposit in my spine. Why don't M.D.s suggest a diet to help avoid recurrences? — W.S.H.

Because, sir, it isn't calcium in the diet which causes calcium deposits. These deposits occur because of some injury, irritation, or infection. The body needs calcium. The calcium is deposited in the course of the healing process.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do you think taking two aspirins and a wine glass of 20 per cent wine is harmful? I take that before I go to bed because it makes me go to sleep and I feel good in the morning. I am 81 and in good health but nervous. — Mrs. F.D.

At the age of 81 a good sleep is far more useful to you than any possible harm that could come from such a modest sleeping potion, so don't worry about it.

Militants Win Seats

if the mediation commission request wasn't met.

However, it was referred back to the resolutions committee for rewording.

Economic sanctions, mentioned as a possibility last week by Mr. O'Connor, would likely be in the form of a slowdown on the job, some observers feel.

Mr. O'Connor, who has headed the association since helping to found it ~~in 1945,~~ has tendered his resignation but has agreed to remain in the job for a year after a replacement is found.

At 60, he was both under attack and well defended at this convention.

Those who work closely with him say he is an extremely intelligent man who on more than one occasion has won cases for the association while arguing points of law—even though he is not a graduate lawyer.

'Work With Him'

On Saturday, Howard Phillips of Victoria told the convention: "Just work with him— have him prepare your brief—have him present it. I can tell you this: I'm glad he's on my side."

The militant group sees Mr. O'Connor as a man who has failed to take proper action in times of trouble, particularly during the ferry strike earlier this year.

The marine branch was unsuccessful with a resolution calling for election of the general secretary, instead of the present system of hiring.

An opposition slate of officers it drafted Friday for nomination Saturday proposed Mr. Thornber as general secretary. But, since the resolution went nowhere, neither did Mr. Thornber. Meanwhile, he has applied for the job which has been advertised through a firm of management consultants.

No Top Jobs

While the militants did well during the election of the executive, they failed to get anyone elected to the top jobs that are separate from the executive.

Norman Richards of Victoria was elected president by a 66-41 vote over Edward Bodner, a psychiatric nurse from Essondale who was on the opposition slate.

Mr. Bodner lost again when he challenged for the job of first vice-president. He was beaten 57 votes to 41 by Gordon Boyd of the Vancouver-New Westminster branch who had been second vice-president.

In an interview later Mr. Bodner said a number of delegates told him they would have voted for him if he hadn't alligned himself with the Thornber group.

First Ballot

"I think that if nothing else, we have started a lot of people thinking here," he said. "I think you will see a changed look about the association."

G. R. Whitehead, another marine branch man on the opposition slate, won the first ballot against moderates William Bailey of Oakalla and John Hawes of Victoria during voting for second vice-president. He didn't have the required 50 per cent majority and lost to Mr. Bailey when the bottom-place runner, Mr. Hawes, was removed from the list for the second ballot.

Mrs. Nancy Person of the Vancouver-New Westminster branch retained her job as secretary.

On Executive

The eight militants on the executive are: Wayne Dermody, Fraser Valley; Roy Lavigne, Essondale; Donald Shirling, Cranbrook; Mr. Bodner; Saul Romalis, of the social workers branch; Donald Anderson, Comox; G. N. Puttock, Vancouver-New Westminster and Mr. Whitehead.

All but Mr. Lavigne, a strong militant, were on the opposition slate.

ise of more violence and unrest threatened by something called "The Army of Liberation."

The statement of this "army," distributed Friday, declared "war against the criminal government of President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz." It promised that foreign athletes would not be attacked, but recommended that "the foreign public not come to the Olympics because it will be necessary to carry out a large military operation against the government."

NO CONNECTION

A spokesman for the student strike council at the University of Mexico told reporters his organization had no connection with the "Army of Liberation."

Students in Mexico City have been on strike since July 30, demanding abolition of riot police, firing of three top police officials, a guarantee of university autonomy and compensation for persons injured in the rioting.

Government spokesmen have charged that Communists, anarchists, criminals and hooligans are taking advantage of the turmoil, now in its third month.

Teacher Strike May Resume

NEW YORK (AP)—New York City teachers will begin voting Monday on whether to again strike the 1,100,000-pupil school system here in the lingering and bruising struggle over who is to run the schools.

The dispute concerns efforts to decentralize the city's vast school system, the nation's largest, giving broad control to the local communities.

Soviet Missiles Aim at Peking

By COLIN CHAPMAN
London Sunday Times

LONDON — The Soviet Union has established several new missile sites on the Chinese border in outer Mongolia, leaving China in increasing apprehension at the possibility of invasion.

Russia has had mobile ground-to-air rocket batteries manned by mixed Russian-Mongolian crews near the town of Choibalsan, 300 miles east of Ulan Bator, for some time.

What does appear to be new in the area are ground-to-ground missiles with a range of between 2,500 and 3,000 miles, stationed on the Chinese frontier near Buir Nor, 200 miles farther east.

These new missiles are, according to reliable sources, exclusively under Soviet command. The area is completely cut off to outsiders. But is now is said to be linked by a special railway to the Soviet Union. The railway line runs directly from Irkutsk to the missile zone, thereby bypassing Ulan Bator.

There are said to be two types of missiles, "Scamps" (the NATO code name), carried on track vehicles with a range of 2,500 miles, and "Scrooge", a slightly longer land-based missile with a range of 3,000 miles.

These put the Russians within range of some United States navy bases in the Pacific, but they also cover the vast Chinese industrial area in Manchuria with its concentration of armament industries and nuclear research stations. Distance from the missile sites to Peking is only 700 miles.

Exiled General Returns, Avoids Meeting Thieu

SAIGON (AP) — Gen. Duong Van Minh returned from a four-year exile Saturday and raised some eyebrows by ducking an immediate meeting with President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

"Today is for my family," said the popular general, known as Big Minh, as he declined a presidential helicopter sent to fly him to the palace.

OFFER STANDS

He left observers guessing whether it was a snub or simply Big Minh's well-known ability to forget appointments and go his own unpredictable way.

Minh, who led the 1963 coup that overturned South Vietnamese strongman president Ngo Dinh Diem, has an offer from Thieu to become a senior presidential adviser. The government hopes to capitalize on his popularity, but also fears that popularity.

LOW KEY

Whether he will accept Thieu's offer is unknown. The two men have scheduled a meeting Monday and some kind of announcement is expected then.

Although Thieu is counting on Minh to strengthen support for his government, the homecoming was kept in low key. Until Minh's plane landed Thieu's official spokesman denied that Minh was even on the plane from Bangkok.

There were no street demonstrations or other outbreaks that the government had partially feared.

Minh's popularity with the ordinary Vietnamese is undeniable. Many feel he would easily have won the presidential race a year ago had the military regime permitted him to return at that time.

DECISIVE VOICE

Although he was largely a figurehead in the 1963 coup, Minh is credited with having a decisive voice within the military at that time and was the popular benefactor of the coup.

Americans Hunt Struggling Cong

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. infantrymen probed through canals and hip-deep, paddy mud today for surviving stragglers of a Viet Cong battalion crippled in a two-day battle.

The U.S. command said the enemy battalion—with some 400 men—lost 138 known dead after being trapped in its Mekong Delta base camp 58 miles southwest of Saigon. Since the normal battle ratio is two or three wounded for each man killed, that would indicate few guerrillas got away unscathed.

The command earlier had reported 169 enemy killed in the Friday-Saturday action, but that figure was lowered to correct reports.

In Saigon, the nightly curfew was eased from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. for the first time since the Tet offensive last Feburary. Residents filled streets and parks, gaily lighted with holiday lanterns, to celebrate the eve of Tet Trung-Thu, the mid-autumn festival.

The official Vietnam Press announced Saturday that the South Vietnamese cabinet is discussing amnesty for the more than 52,000 government soldiers who deserted this year.

'Killer Was Drunk'

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP)—Nigerian officials and foreign military observers argued Saturday about who was to blame for the killing of four European relief workers gunned down in Okigwe Monday when Nigerians took the town from retreating Biafrans.

The International Red Cross in Geneva claims a drunken Nigerian soldier killed the four—a British couple, a Yugoslav doctor and a Swedish Red Cross worker—when they sought refuge from the fighting along with six other workers.

MACHINEGUN BURST

The charge said the workers were beaten and robbed before the four were caught in a burst of machinegun fire.

"The killings were unprovoked and inexcusable," said the investigating team in a report released Saturday at a news conference.

"We reckon there was probably a case of mistaken identity," said Yutu Gobir, secretary of Nigeria's defence ministry. He added that crossfire was involved in the incident.

EACH WORE BADGE

Maj.-Gen. Henry T. Alexander, one of the investigators, said soldiers still were engaged in fighting around Okigwe, 25 miles north of Umuahia, last stronghold of Biafran secessionists in Eastern Nigeria.

Threat to Cut Biafra in Half

Federals Try for Pincer

LAGOS, Nigeria (Reuters) — Federal troops of the first and third divisions are trying to link up on the strategic Owerri-Okigwi road in an attempt to cut Biafra in two and separate the breakaway state's last remaining city from its only jungle airstrip.

Informed sources here say that if the move succeeds, it would split Biafra into two sections, one to the east of about 1,750 square miles and the other, to the north and west, about half as big.

The move also would separate Umuahia, the last Biafran administrative centre, from a 75-foot-wide airstrip at Uli-Ihiala, known as Annabelle.

Owerri, captured Sept. 16, is about 30 miles from the hillside township of Okigwi, which was taken two weeks later.

According to persistent rumors in Lagos, the Biafrans have one other secret airstrip near Umuahia. But it was understood that it was only big enough for light aircraft, and possibly was intended as an escape route for leading secessionists.

OMUHIA, Biafra (UPI) — Biafran leader Lt. Col. Odemegwu Ojukwu said Thursday night his breakaway state's military situation was improving and there was a feeling "that one could turn the tables" on Nigerian federal troops in the civil war.

Speaking to a group of foreign journalists at his residence here, Ojukwu said he was scouring the earth "for any arms I can lay my hands on."

Facts you should know about the new driving law

Section 126A of the Motor Vehicle Act is now in effect in Greater Victoria and the County of Victoria. This new law eliminates tickets and fines for driving offences under the Motor Vehicle Act for British Columbia licensed drivers, and institutes a system of Violation Reports. These Reports, unless disputed, or if disputed but confirmed by a magistrate, will be filed with an individual's driving record at the Motor Vehicle Branch, and will provide the basis for more effective surveillance of offenders by traffic authorities.

What happens if you are stopped for a traffic violation?

If the violation is covered by the new law, the police officer will complete and sign a Violation Report. A copy of this Report will be served to you in person or by mail. The Report specifies the violation of which you are accused, and tells you where a notice of dispute may be delivered. The police officer will ask you to sign an acknowledgement of receipt of the Report but, this signing in no way affects your position if you decide to dispute the Report.

What is done with your violation report?

Unless you deliver a notice of dispute to the person named in the Violation Report within seven days, your Report will be forwarded to the Superintendent of Motor Vehicles. If you failed to sign for the Report – or if there is no evidence that a police officer served the Report – you will be notified by mail by the Superintendent. You have fourteen days from the date of receiving such notification to deliver a notice of dispute to the Superintendent. If a notice of dispute is not received within fourteen days, a copy of the Violation Report is filed with your driving record at the Motor Vehicle Branch.

What happens if you dispute a violation report?

As mentioned, you may deliver a notice of dispute either within seven days of receiving a Violation Report from the police officer or within fourteen days of notification by the Superintendent of Motor Vehicles. In either case, the notice of dispute and a copy of the Violation Report are referred to a Magistrate. After a hearing, in which full opportunity to present evidence is allowed, the Magistrate determines whether the offence has actually taken place. If the Magistrate is satisfied that the offence has occurred, he will inform the Superintendent of his decision. But in no case shall the Magistrate record a conviction or impose any penalty.

What is the penalty for repeated violations?

All Violation Reports – unless successfully disputed before a Magistrate – become a permanent part of an individual's driving record at the Motor Vehicle Branch. For repeated violations, the Superintendent of Motor Vehicles may take any of the following steps.

1. Issue a warning to the offender.
2. Call the offender for an interview and, when deemed necessary, require the offender to take a driver training course.
3. Suspend the offender's driver's licence outright. Before this step is taken, the offender is given the opportunity to show why this should not be done.
4. Require the offender to appear before a Magistrate who, after reviewing his record, determines whether the offender's driver's licence should be suspended.

Which offences are covered by this new law?

The new law applies to all driving offences under the Motor Vehicle Act involving public safety, such as speeding and careless driving. It does not apply to the more serious driving offences in which criminal charges might be laid. Nor does it apply to minor traffic offences, such as over-parking, for which tickets will still be issued. In all cases, the precise nature of the alleged violation is specified on the Violation Report.

This law is designed not so much to punish offenders as to prevent driving offences. Remember – safe driving is your responsibility, too.

The Hostiles

ON TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1, the People's Republic of China entered the twentieth year of its tortured life under the guidance of Mao Tse-tung. And as far as the outside world can tell, the prospects of harmony and hope for the masses are still remote.

The only really impressive thing about the celebrations of the national day was the massive rally in the Heavenly Peace Square. There were half a million there to hear Chairman Mao and his heir apparent, General Lin Piao. Many carried huge photographs of the leader they venerate and all waved his little red book.

If the Chinese masses, reached by radio, had hoped for any clear enunciation of a program for their betterment, or for assurances of development of the nation in peace, they were disappointed. Because the only pledge given them was for war.

"We definitely will liberate Taiwan," said General Lin. This would be the beginning of a new political era, he promised.

Across the narrow seas, on the other side of the Formosa Strait, the ageing Marshal Chiang Kai-shek may have listened to this confident prediction. Ironically, he himself recently made the same sort of promise to the people of Communist China whom he believes to be receptive to the idea of a restoration of Nationalist China, surviving on Taiwan.

"We will return to the mainland," he declared.

Whether the Nationalists would be welcome or not is something for conjecture. But it is certain that the people of Formosa would regard any "liberation" from the Communist mainland "as would a calf liberated from the stockade by a tiger."

Formosa has a booming economy. Its standards of living are the highest in Asia, next to Japan's. It is a land attractive to foreign investment, and its peasants have been encouraged and assisted to purchase their own land. They are prospering. There is no such thing as unemployment. There is no hunger. Education standards are relatively high, and improving.

The very last thing the people of Formosa want is a dedication to Mao's Thoughts at the point of a bayonet.

It is not likely the risk is very great. There have been gestures of aggression before now, with the shelling of the coastal islands of Quemoy and Matsu in the late 1950s and a final furious bombardment in 1960 during the time then-President Dwight Eisenhower was visiting Marshal Chiang in his capital, Taipeh.

But warnings against invasion attempts from the United States and the presence of the powerful 7th Fleet effectively persuaded Peking to abandon its belligerency.

That does not mean, of course, that Chairman Mao or his successors would not contemplate a Formosan adventure at some time in the future if and when the United States withdraws its protection for one reason or another. But it would be a formidable task even then.

Formosa, with Western arms and a highly-trained defence force, is well equipped to defend itself against any crossing from the mainland a hundred miles away.

The leaders of Nationalist and Communist governments would be well advised to forego their plans and threats against each other for the welfare of their own people, of all Asia and the world.

Not for Export

TWO SCULPTURES in the Canadian Pavilion at HemisFair, in San Antonio, were presented to the mayor of the Texas city on Wednesday by the Canadian ambassador to the United States. It is perhaps not singularly appropriate that one of these "permanent reminders" which will linger on after the end of the exposition is a working water wheel sculpture symbolizing Canada's vast water resources: not unless it is openly intended to beckon Texans or their investments north. For it cannot correctly be interpreted as hinting at Canadian readiness to channel water to the thirsty lands of the south. Not yet.

The Science Council of Canada has chosen, or fallen in for, an inauspicious time to present to the federal government a proposal that there be a great increase in expenditure on water resources research. When the government is almost desperately trying to cut back spending, and when several scientific endeavors have been among the first to feel the knife, the prospect of quick action on the council's proposals is dim indeed. The council would have the amount spent on water resources research by the government and other agencies in the past year, $8,400,000, raised to $25,000,000 by 1972-73 and to $75,000,000 by 1978-79.

But if the Science Council falls short of its aim of convincing the country that a quick additional infusion of money into water research is mandatory to avoid waste of resources, at least its advice on the matter of possible water export will remain sound. This is that Canada should not embark on any export program without knowing the full extent of its present resources and of its future needs.

B.C. Gives a Lead

BRITISH COLUMBIA lawmakers may feel they have given Canada a valuable lead by introducing at the beginning of 1968, the new Consumer Protection Act.

The Ontario government has been sufficiently impressed to introduce a largely similar measure which is aimed at giving protection to householders who may have signed a doorstep contract as a result of high pressure methods.

In the case of the British Columbia act such a doorstep contract may be rescinded within three days. In Ontario the rescinding period has been reduced to two days but in practice it gives the unwary signer a second chance.

In addition Ontario, like B.C., is enforcing registration of all peddlers and other door-to-door salesmen so that a close grip may be kept on their ethics.

The experience so far in British Columbia has been good. A great deal of court litigation, or at worst hardship, has been avoided.

While it is true that the new regulations of Canada's most progressive provinces may impose some problems of red-tape for the reputable firms which specialize in itinerant selling, few of these organizations have found their business activities crimped as a result. Indeed in some cases, the new protection afforded by the act has improved sales by giving the doorstep consumer added confidence.

Governor-General Out of the Shadows, Proves a Man of Enormous Versatility

THINK of a governor-general in living memory who began his term deeper in the shadows of public suspicion-bordering-on-dislike than His Excellency Roland Michener.

Difficult?

Impossible.

Then think of a governor who in so short a time has emerged so far into the sunshine of public approval-edging-delight.

Easy.

The same Roland Michener.

Recall the circumstances of his appointment to Rideau Hall by the former prime minister, Lester Pearson, to replace General Georges Vanier, the popular French-Canadian hero of two world wars, suddenly dead in office.

Roland Michener had been recalled from India where he had been Canadian high commissioner, a small man, snickered a horde of critics, to fill such a large pair of shoes as the GG's.

All the governors-general before Roland Michener had been titled Britons or, as with the pair preceding him, Vincent Massey and General Vanier, gloriously distinguished Canadians.

* * *

Roland Michener was the first former — what's more, defeated — politician in the honorable company of 20 governors since Confederation.

A plain, political partisan.

Elected a Conservative MP for Toronto-St. Paul's in 1953, he became Commons Speaker after re-election in '57, held the post on his '58 campaign success, lost both the House seat and chair in the '62 vote.

Many Conservatives, including former prime minister John Diefenbaker and some of the cabinet, grumbled a lot privately, and even a bit publicly that Roland Michener as speaker had been less than impartial. Straining for neutrality in the Commons chair, he had leaned so far over backwards to be fair to the Grits he had verged on the unfair to the Tories, they complained, and may even have contributed to their downfall.

In the year that followed Michener's defeat, John Diefenbaker, still prime minister, if in a minority position, did nothing for him — at least gave him no appointment.

* * *

That, as things turned out, was left to the new prime minister, Pearson, a year after the Liberal election victory and the Conservative defeat in the '63 election — seeming to give some confirmation to Tory suspicion that the Grits had "rewarded" Michener with the posting to New Delhi as Canadian high commissioner.

The move to Rideau Hall as GG — the Queen's Man in Ottawa — came in the spring of Centennial '67, again with Lester Pearson bestowing the honor and reconfirming old Conservative grudges.

Likely very well aware of these hostilities, Roland Michener went to work on what Prime Minister Trudeau calls "public involvement" in affairs of state.

Each GG has his own style.

With Vincent Massey it was the arts and an approach to things cultural in a way that appealed even to the wrestling fans.

He threw an up-beat party for the press the very afternoon he arrived in the capital, receiving his guests in slacks, sports shirt, suede jacket and loafers. He poured the drinks himself, and bounding across to the piano turned the vice-regal welcome into a swinging sing-along.

He went on from there to ski, snow-shoe, swim, hunt, fish, golf, play cricket, slide down fire station poles, rushing out on one alarm to join a bucket brigade. There was no stopping him as he went on and on, to, among other things, teach the Queen square dancing, fly his own plane, drive his own jeep, canoe on the Coppermine, kayak in the Mackenzie delta.

Roland Michener is even more the activist. He hasn't been in Rideau Hall a full two years, and already he's jogged with a high school track team, walked — then, with a sprained ankle wheel-chaired it — in the Oxfam 50-mile trudge, shot with the Bisley marksmen, worked out with the Mobile Force commandos, skied an opening five in the 120-mile Ottawa-Montreal cross-country marathon, gone a few pool lengths with a collegiate swim team, piloted a government executive jet and co-piloted an armed forces' 'copter, done high-kicks and push-ups for morning set-ups beside his rail car on trips, tuna-fished, goose-hunted, pole-vaulted and broad-jumped with a public school track team.

Additionally, he golfs, plays tennis, skates, skis, snow-shoes, plays squash, shoots billiards, curls, dances square and round, plays classical and jazz piano, and all with respectable expertise.

Measure of the man's skill was his throwing of the first rock opening the world championships last spring at Pointe Claire. The curling buffs rather expected him to either put the rock through the backboards or stall in front of the hog line. He put it smack on the button.

As GG he's made it, and now has it made.

Quebec Court Upholds Decision Denying English to Students

By CHARLES MAGILL
from Montreal

FOR the first time people of the English-speaking community in Quebec province are beginning to organize themselves in protest against increasing agitation, both outside and within the Quebec parliament, by French-speaking separatists and their sympathizers.

Recently several thousand English-speaking Canadians from Quebec converged on Ottawa in motorcoaches to protest about the end of English instruction in St. Leonard district school, Montreal.

It was announced last week that the Quebec Superior Court upheld the legality of the decision of the St. Leonard school board in Montreal to "phase out" the teaching of English in the school. Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols said: "There is no law compelling Quebec school commissions to offer instruction in both official languages."

* * *

This decision has been greeted with dismay by large sections of the community here, and interpreted as reflecting increasing Quebec government support for the ends of the separatists, who want the province to secede from the federal structure.

The court's verdict means that children at the St. Leonard school will not learn English and many people here feel that this decision could have a decisive effect on other school boards in Quebec, and eventually eliminate the teaching of English in schools here altogether.

Many English-speaking Canadians in Quebec, most of whom live in Montreal, feel that inroads are being made into their constitutional right to choose English for their children's education if they wish.

Organizations like the Imperial Orders of the Daughters and Children of the Empire, and several newly-formed groups, have sprung to oppose what they call "creeping French domination, especially in matters of language."

Pat Burns, a well-known political broadcaster in Quebec, told me that people from the English-speaking community are beginning to organize themselves for the first time as a direct result of increased French separatist influence.

He said: "I don't believe there will be violence, but there will be more organized protests like the St. Leonard demonstration in the future. Formerly the English-speaking section believed that the government of Ottawa would never allow Quebec to move away from the federalist idea, and an official policy of bilingualism. The momentous St. Leonard decision has, in my opinion, shattered their confidence.

* * *

"I expect an increasing backlash from the English community, but it will be moderate, disciplined and democratic. The march on Ottawa earlier this month was the first organized demonstration made by the English community. There was a degree of nervousness before General Charles de Gaulle made his famous 'Vive Quebec libre' speech, but as a Canadian I fear new developments in our special internal problem.

"Already capital investment has been reduced in Quebec because companies were not confident that their capital would be secure. These recent events will increase this trend, and Quebec will come off worst in the end."

Madame Andree Ferretti, leader of the Front Liberation Populaire, a separatist organization which is considered extremist by the two main separatist parties — the MSA (Mouvement souverainte association) and the RIN (the Rassemblement pour l'independence nationale) — believes that the recent death of provincial Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec (a French-Canadian despite his name) will have an immediate impact on the French province.

* * *

She says: "Nobody in the Quebec parliament and within the National Union Party can hold the forces of federalism and separatism together as Johnson could. He held together powerful divisions within his own party, the National Union Party, and to a lesser extent his influence even spread to the opposition party, the Liberal Party. With Johnson's death, I expect the divisions within the two major political parties to widen, and as a direct consequence I expect many people to join the two main separatist movements."

In official government circles in Quebec and in Ottawa there is a growing feeling that Premier Johnson's death has brought even nearer a clash of force and sympathies between the federal government and the Quebec government.

Science Supports Sewage Treatment

THE world's scientists have now laid it squarely on the line. Either we DO something about pollution or we perish in our own fouling.

On the local scene, the weight of scientific opinion (as distinct from engineering opinion, which we obviously could not follow) favors the treatment of all sewage.

It would seem then, that, in simple terms, this is where we stand:—

The scientists tell us WHY we have to do it.

We already have the engineers who know HOW to do it, and we have in the Shortt-Elliott proposal (Daily Colonist Sept 28) a way of obtaining the funds without costing us a penny in taxes!

Although this all sounds too good to be true, there is absolutely nothing — apart from a squawk or two from the land manipulators — to prevent it becoming a reality.

W. G. SMITH,
937 Balmoral Rd.

A Case for Sewage Compost

In our efforts to solve the problems of pollution I think that we should pay more heed to the biologists than to the politicians or engineers.

Dr. Marcus Bell has proposed that sewage be composted and sold as fertilizer.

This serves a twofold purpose. It decreases pollution of waterways to a large degree, and it feeds our soils with organic material that is essential for the growth of healthy, nourishing vegetables.

There are many methods of composting both sewage and city garbage, and these have been used effectively in many parts of the world — Holland and the Scandinavian countries and to some extent in England, also in the U.S.A.

There is the Eveson method, that economically composts all garbage and sewage, efficiently and hygienically.

Cost? Well, sewage systems and proposed treatment plants are going into many millions; with no returns, and great danger of health hazards.

Composting returns valuable fertilizer.

At a recent meeting of the Pender Island Farmers' Institute we passed the following resolution: "That this Farmers' Institute is opposed to any waterway, be it lake, river or ocean, being used for the disposal of sewage, treated or otherwise."

We feel that this is a matter which should concern all agricultural organizations.

MRS. EVE SMITH,
South Pender Island.

No Room in the Oceans

You say the ocean is big — So was the land; now look at it. Would you wait until you've duplicated New York harbor? Or will you achieve the insight of realizing that man soon must become responsible for his own detergents, his own wastes. Mother Earth can no longer handle the burden of our irresponsible attitudes. We have prostituted the land; are we to lay waste to the sea in the same negligent manner? Existing now is an inverse proportion which favors man, not the sea. This did not exist with the land until recently. Man has become powerful, and needless to say, plentiful. His abilities to upset and destroy ecological systems is beyond compare. Now, with an enlarging population, advanced methods, and seemingly little insight, man can turn the sea into the same garbage heap that he's made of the land.

Canadians, at this point, may laugh. Looking about, they see only lush green mountains, pure freshwater streams, and what seems an endless supply of sea water. Endless they say these resources are — Canadians are naive if they persist in thinking this way. This was the attitude which existed in the States, whose cities and waters are rapidly degenerating into irreparable condition.

It seems simpler, more economical now to dump the waste into the sea. But now disappears into the future all too fast. And those actions which appeared so simple and expedient in the present may have irreversible consequences in the near future. Those who expend foresight and effort in the present make a future whose past is not so unpleasant to reflect upon.

Cautious Neutrality Advised

These people crying about the starving children of Biafra and saying the government should send over troops etc. to take aid in one way or another, I wonder if they really know what they are asking?

Send food sure. (It's been done). But to send troops — well, honestly. Can't you just see it. Britain pulls out of there and drops her colonies and Canada starts an empire — because that's what we'd be doing because we'd be accused of meddling in Africa as we would never be able to get out. And the cost of keeping those troops in there — oh boy, and the people here crying for the government to do this and do that. I think the government here is doing the right thing — it should be the black African states that should take the initiative, especially with all the racial tension in the world today. All these sob sisters are doing is stirring up more hatred by asking our government to send troops.

God help us if we do — as the attitude of other African states would be disastrous for Canada.

I hate to see children starving too, but if the Biafran people or the Nigerian people have no heart to help their own people — then why should we risk racial tension and wars by sending in troops?

I know that the government has to think of all angles and it doesn't want to commit Canada to a war in Africa — whites against blacks even although Mr. Stanfield, if he was prime minister would have us mixed up in it, even although we can't afford it or wouldn't want it.

ALL FOR FAIR PLAY.

Price Discrepancies

When I arrived in Victoria recently, it didn't take me long to find out that food generally is much more expensive here than where I came from. Maybe Victorians are unaware that prices are a lot higher, even local products involving no freight.

But the thing that provokes me is the wide disparity of prices among the stores. How come that a certain brand of milk can be sold at one place for 6 tins for 79 cents, while another charges $1.14 for the same quantity? The store where I am obliged to deal prices celery at 19 cents per lb. whereas other stores charge only 19 cents per bunch. At my store, at 19 cents per lb. a bunch would cost anywhere from 38 cents to 45 cents, as I found by weighing.

While local salmon is sold at some stores for $1.15 per lb. (which is far too much!), my store has the effrontery to charge $1.29. After buying sweet potatoes at the same store for 53 cents per lb. I saw them advertised elsewhere at 2 lbs. for 49 cents.

These are but a few examples of how we are 'being taken'; I could quote many more, but these will be sufficient to make my point.

Considering that such a large proportion of our residents are retired people existing on small and fixed incomes, one would think that the food stores wouldn't want to extract the last nickel from folks who can ill afford it—or do they?

INDIGENT.

"We Could . . . Throw Them Out"

(This correspondent writes in support of Gorde Hunter's comment regarding a firmer control of university extremism in The Colonist, Sept. 24.)

. . . Let's also support Premier Thatcher's good decision to close Saskatchewan's universities if the need arises. Not only would it get rid of the undesirables, but it would bring home to the other students too busy with their own concerns that they must accept the responsibility of voting intelligently in student elections as other citizens must do in municipal, provincial and federal elections.

The Czechs must be wondering why we are standing around allowing these avowed Marxists to despoil our efforts when we could so easily throw them out.

Here's my Tiger, Gorde Hunter.

At 80, Harry Joins The Diamond Rush

* * *

By JULIE KRUGER from Caracas

The last thing Harry Fry Buckner of Detroit wanted to do when he left the automobile business at the age of 80 was retire to a front porch rocker in a sunny rooming house.

Taking his life savings out of the bank, he headed for the diamond and gold-rich Venezuelan Gran Sabana where adventure still beckons.

The Gran Sabana is a lost world of jungle bordering Brazil. Traveling is done by airplane or dugout, and no greenhorn trespasses without a trustworthy guide.

Since the beginning of the century, the Gran Sabana has been combed by prospectors who pan the sand of the black headwaters of the Caroni River and its tributaries in hopes of that one perfect find.

They dream of the 115-carat diamond found by Jaimie Hutton in 1940 that was eventually cut in New York into stones worth $200,000.

Less than a month ago, on the Parupa River near the jungle outpost of Uriman, a "bomba," or diamond strike, brought thousands of miners and Harry Buckner on the run.

The diamonds will be exhausted sooner or later. Gran Sabana gems occur in the shallow sandy banks of black waters where the river has deposited diamonds on its way to the sea. None has ever been found in rock.

Harry Buckner hasn't struck it rich yet. In fact, he's $16,000 poorer. He lost his equipment when his dugout overturned 15 minutes from the mine.

"I guess I'm jinxed, but I'm hooked to the life," said the robust, white-haired octogenarian.

Four-Day Weekends Pop Up

By RICHARD JACKSON from Ottawa

Despite a 90-minute storm of united opposition, the cabinet Monday begins rationing its time in the House of Commons.

Only Prime Minister Trudeau will put in the regular five-day working parliamentary week.

The other 26 members of the cabinet — Paul Martin, the 29'th is in the senate — will make it a three-day parliamentary week.

* * *

Fifteen of them have so arranged the cabinet's work schedule for the commons that they will have four-day weekends.

All, except Sen. Martin, will attend when they have legislation before the house.

The prime minister's timetable as he presented it, appears to apply only to the daily question period.

But all MPs, government and opposition alike, agreed that if a cabinet minister doesn't have to show up for the question period, he's not likely to appear for the rest of the working day.

And the question period, as house veteran NDP whip Stanley Knowles pointed out to the prime minister, is "prime time" for parliament, the hour in which an alert opposition "can keep a government on its toes."

The prime minister tried to convince the opposition that it too would benefit from the time-rationed cabinet work week.

* * *

This way, he said, they would know who among the ministers was going to be in the house on what days.

That way they could sharpen their question-shafts with assurance of being able to be on cabinet target.

But the opposition — Conservative, NDP and Creditiste alike — was having none of this.

Conservative house leader Baldwin noted that the rules specified that the cabinet was required to be in the house to answer questions.

"That means all of the cabinet," he said, "not just some of it, but each and every minister of the Crown."

* * *

He charged that this rationing of cabinet time in the commons was "a contrived contempt of the house."

Stanley Knowles noted that the same rules made it obligatory for "every MP to attend unless granted leave of absence by the house itself."

The rule, he conceded, really, was "violated every hour of every day" — but it was "defiance" of parliamentary tradition that the prime minister should "deliberately" lead the breaking of the rule, "and at the top, at the cabinet level."

* * *

The prime minister fired back. Taking a quick house count, he noted that the cabinet, right at that very moment, had a better attendance record that the opposition.

Only four of 14 Conservative front-benchers were at their desks, he observed, and the NDP ran between 25 and 50 per cent of strength.

It might be, he conceded, that they were busy elsewhere in the public interest.

* * *

"Or golfing," cracked Conservative MP Jack Horner of Crowfoot, in obvious reference to 27 members having been absent at mid-week, playing golf with reporters from the Press Gallery.

Former Conservative leader Diefenbaker snorted that the prime minister was "spouting conglomerate nonsense" in trying to bamboozle the opposition that the rationing of cabinet time in the commons was for the Conservatie-NDP-Creditiste benefit.

The opposition, said he, didn't need "that kind of help" from the government.

"I would like to be there when the cabinet plays the ouija board to see which of the ministers will be in the house to answer questions," he laughed.

But when all the protesting and name-calling was done, the prime minister emerged the winner: The cabinet's time-rationing starts Monday.

B.C. Drinking Laws

Reform?—Outside Chance

* * *

By IAN STREET

* * *

There is an outside chance, I would say, that the government is really planning to liberalize drinking laws in British Columbia.

But it's one of those subjects on which to even hazard a guess is courting disaster.

Former attorney general Robert Bonner said last session appeals for more liberal drinking laws "weren't falling on deaf ears." His successor, Leslie Peterson, shies away from a direct answer on this question, but even he this week indicated the matter was under review.

* * *

Premier Bennett, the man who has the final say, isn't committing himself. He simply answers all questions with the stock rejoinder, "When the premier is ready to make an announcement, he'll make one."

But with a crucial provincial general election coming up sometime in the next year or two, I wouldn't be surprised if new drinking laws were one of the "policies for a new era" of Social Credit administration that the premier keeps boasting about.

If so, how far is he likely to permit the government to go?

Would the new laws, if they come, for instance permit Sunday opening of liquor-selling establishments? This is unlikely. Mr. Bennett recently expressed a view that people can drink as much as they wish on Sundays in their own homes and studiously ignored the question of Sunday licencing.

* * *

It is possible that restaurants may be permitted to serve wine and perhaps cocktails with meals on Sunday.

But there seems to exist only the remotest prospect of any significant departures from present drinking practices.

The government has turned thumbs down on the sale of beer and wine in supermarkets, despite vague assurances by then agriculture minister Frank Richter some time ago that this would come some day.

* * *

Live entertainment and dancing in taverns, public bars in legitimate theatres, even the swapping of our present beer parlors for cosy neighborhood pubs — all seem beyond hope.

Make no mistake about it, however; the pressure for change is there and the government is very sensitive to it.

At the last session there was one rather lengthy and very lively debate on liquor in which members on both sides of the house expressed strong views in favor of liberalization. That's when Mr. Bonner made his hopeful-sounding remark about their pleas not falling on deaf ears.

Then the premier, who was absent at the time, came back and dismissed the whole affair with a scornful remark about B.C. fighting to the end against the "cocktail-hippie society" and that seemed to end that.

The news this past week that Col. Donald McGugan was being retired by the government next March 31 (he is his 80th year and growing forgetful and more than usually cantankerous) has given rise to renewed hope that it signals a change in our drinking habits.

* * *

This assumption, I think, is being unfair to the colonel, who in his own inimitable way has done much over the past 17 years to bring about what liberalization in drinking we now enjoy. He, after all, is only interpreting and carrying out the policies set by the government.

What is needed, as Mr. Bonner observed on that occasion last session, is a change in the government's philosophy of licencing — and that doesn't seem to be in the cards. It may come, but if it does this will be a pleasant surprise.

With the appointment of Col. McGugan's successor there may be a return to the three-member Liquor Control Board advocated in the Stephens report 16 years ago. But Mr. Peterson has indicated this, too, is unlikely because he says it has been tried and failed.

* * *

We are probably going to get a lot more pious talk about not allowing private firms to peddle "booze" while the government remains apparently quite content to sell all the liquor a person might want to buy, by the bottle, provided they get stinko at home or somewhere else out of sight.

Unless, of course, Mr. Bennett really is bothered about the prospects of losing the next election, to the extent that he will listen to what the majority of people want.

School Trustees' Convention

It May Chart New Courses

* * *

A LOOK AT LEARNING

By BILL STAVDAL

* * *

Some conventions are little more than ritual social events while others chart new directions. The 64th annual convention of the B.C. School Trustees' Association, which begins today in Vancouver, may well be one of the latter sort.

Several factors arising in the past year support this estimate.

There is B.C.'s new education finance formula, implications of which are still emerging.

* * *

There is the plain evidence of restlessness along school boards at the government's severe restrictions on school construction.

There is a change of BCSTA leadership coming this week, with the practical certainty of a more militant attitude in future.

And for added interest, Donald Brothers tomorrow will deliver what amounts to his maiden speech as education minister.

* * *

B.C.'s education finance formula was completely changed last winter by amendments to the Public Schools Act. The details are too involved to spell out here but two aspects have raised concern among the executive of the BCSTA.

One is the apparent averaging effect of the new formula. Districts which previously have offered better-than-average education and special services are afraid that the formula is going to penalize them.

* * *

Under the new legislation they are hampered in raising any great amount of extra funds in addition to the provincial average amounts.

Clouding this issue is the fact that the government is easing the new legislation gradually into effect. Special adjustments were made this year to soften the impact, and so the ultimate picture isn't clear.

Another feature of the new legislation is the relative ease with which municipal councils and disgruntled taxpayers can obstruct a school board from raising more-than-average taxes.

The BCSTA executive has proposed several resolutions opposing these aspects of the new Public Schools Act. Trustee response on the convention floor will tell how the legislation is regarded at the grassroots.

* * *

Coquitlam is short 71 classrooms and more than 4,200 pupils are on shifts this fall. A recent meeting of 2,500 parents, teachers and students was told that the government has allowed the district to spend only $2,500,000 of $8,000,000 in referendum funds approved by ratepayers.

Premier Bennett's subsequent rebuff to the district will be remembered on the convention floor of the Bayshore Inn. Island trustees whose schools also are feeling the pinch will have plenty to say.

Of major interest this evening will be the farewell speech of BCSTA President Frank Beinder of Trail.

* * *

Mr. Beinder, who works in public relations for Cominco, is one of only two men to have been elected to second terms as BCSTA president. In the past two years he has practised the soft sell in dealing with the government, feeling that there is no point in fighting an impregnable administration.

Lately, however, he has shown signs of exasperation. In mid-August he criticized the government for spending money in other areas while holding back money from schools.

"After cutting school construction below minimum acceptable standards and accepting new schools without adequate supporting facilities it is most disconcerting to find that many millions of dollars in appropriated funds remained unspent at the end of the last fiscal year," he said.

* * *

"New programs appear to have been offered for Indian affairs, highways, social welfare and even for amateur athletics, though school gymnasium construction has virtually been halted."

Now that he is leaving the presidency and is free to be as candid as he likes, Mr. Beinder is apt to deliver some strong words this evening.

Education Minister Brothers is first on the speaker's stand tomorrow morning. His performance will be closely watched.

* * *

Chances are he will follow the custom of his predecessor, Leslie Peterson, in having some good news to announce. The government maintains a studied coolness toward trustee requests but at the same time watches public opinion closely.

A logical guess is that Mr. Brothers will announce some easing of the school construction blockade.

This would dampen the powder of government critics among the trustees, but only temporarily. The man most likely to succeed Mr. Beinder is James Campbell of Saturna Island, vice-president of the BCSTA and much more outspoken.

* * *

Mr. Campbell, a Liberal candidate in the last provincial election, strongly opposed the new education finance formula.

Beinder, Brothers and Campbell will influence the thinking of British Columbia school boards in the coming year by their pronouncements of the next few days.

Inadequate Preparation Harmful

Is Your Child Ready for Hospital?

By RAY KERR

When five-year-old Susie didn't get her breakfast one day while in hospital, she thought she was being punished.

She started crying in confusion, not knowing what she had done wrong.

Later that morning, eight-year-old Johnny was frightened by a doctor in a surgical mark. To Johnny, the doctor looked like a monster in one of his comic books.

TERROR CAN LINGER

For some children, the terror of a hospital remains even after they go home.

"The experience of going to hospital often leaves emotional scars on a child, which may persist long after physical health has been restored," warns a pamphlet produced by the federal health and welfare department.

It adds that, "Of course, many a child does come through hospitalization without such apparent ill effects but the hazard is always present."

"The danger is that in one devastating event his whole feeling of security can be undermined. It's not only that he's uncomfortable and in pain in a strange place, but if—when he needs them most—his parents seem to have deserted him, or deceived him, serious damage may be done to his personality."

CLOSER SCRUTINY

Nursing schools are becoming aware of the problem and many throughout Canada are beginning to work closely with the Canadian Mental Health Association.

"There's no time for a story or a good night kiss in the ward," the Boston film explains. Parents are urged to visit frequently.

"Some parents don't come because their children cry when they leave, but tears don't last."

The film explains that the frightened child often makes the mother feel guilty. It also points out that one lonely child often meets the needs of another child in hospital.

The British film shows an open ward where older children stay without parents. However, parents can visit as often as they wish and stay as long as they want.

The mothers give the children meals, comb their hair and perform other small tasks.

PREPARE FOOD

Along a corridor, partitions are set up and mothers with small children stay in these cubicles. These mothers prepare special food for their children, take temperatures and do other tasks "which means there's more time for the nurses to devote to those without visitors."

The mothers gained comfort by talking to each other and their anxieuty was further lessened because they were present when the doctor visited the child and they could discuss the case.

The film points out the child (in this case a 20-month-old girl) was the same secure child she was at home. The experience for the mother was strenuous but satisfying.

NURSE-TRAINING

According to the Canadian Mental Health Association, the films are expecially valuable in the training of nurses. The association points out that under the Canadian system, the hospital nurse must take the place of the mother.

Some Don'ts

The federal health and welfare department advises parents to avoid these errors in preparing a child for hospital:

- Don't bribe him. He may decide the reward isn't worth it and he'll just stay home, thank you.
- Don't lie about his destination. The circus was never like this.
- Don't tell him it won't hurt a bit — if you want him to believe you again.
- Don't let him see your own concern and anxiety.
- Don't discuss the operation with another adult in the child's presence.
- Don't expect hospital rules to be suspended for you.

The department adds that parents who tell their children what to expect in hospital and who visit their children frequently, help to allay many fears.

Tom Thumb Safety Village

New Concept in Safety for Students

By JIM BRAHAN

A new concept in safety for Greater Victoria school children will open at Colwood Oct. 19 when the South Van Isle Lions open their Tom Thumb safety village.

The 16,000 square-foot village complete with miniature buildings ranging from stores to banks, paved streets with traffic signals and crosswalks, will have 11 micro automobiles cruising its streets.

* * *

"The village is designed to train school children in a program of safety to be followed especially on their way to and from school," says Wesley Austin, club president.

He said there is a safety village in Hamilton, Ont., operated by the city's safety council. There is a similar setup in Vancouver operating under a playground program with instruction by Vancouver city police.

* * *

Mr. Austin said the village will be used mainly by Lower Vancouver Island's three school districts' Grade 2 children.

"The pedal-operated cars will only carry about that sized child," Mr. Austin said.

"Grade one youngsters are in the main taken to school and picked up again by parents," he said.

* * *

There are approximately 4,000 students in Grade 2 throughout the capital region.

The village with its tiny streets, intersections, and buildings, allows students to see at a glance how accidents happen.

They will be instructed in bicycle safety by using the miniature roads with the white-painted traffic lanes and turn arrows. Instruction will be given on the new international traffic safety signs.

The safety village is located near Centennial swimming pool on the Defence Department property on the south side of the Old Island Highway near Colwood corner.

Mr. Austin said the village was started last year.

"The weather caught up to us and delayed the project.

* * *

"The land had to be drained. There is quite a bog there and it took 4,000 yards of fill before we could get going," he said.

The village is the second part of a large recreation complex proposed for the site.

The first venture was the $220,000 Centennial swimming pool which opened about a year ago.

The pool was sanctioned by ratepayers of Langford, Colwood, Glen Lake, Happy Valley and Metchosin, in a landslide vote in November, 1966, which went 75 per cent in favor of the pool.

* * *

"We have led the Greater Victoria area with our swimming pool, and now we have led the way with our safety village," said John S. Williams, swimming pool commission secretary.

"It will be a real asset to all lower Vancouver Island school children.

"It will give them practical instruction and demonstration on traffic regulations and safety.

"I would like to see it eventually become part of normal school instruction," Mr. Williams said.

* * *

Tht pilot program for the village will be undertaken by Sooke School District's safety patrols.

Waterfowl Conservation Issue Shows Wood Ducks in Flight

By FAITH ANGUS

California artist Stanley W. Galli has created a handsome design for the waterfowl conservation issue of Oct. 24. It is the first in an annual series that will promote the need to protect wildlife. The 6c stamp will honor Ducks Unlimited, an organization that has spent nearly $15,000,000 on waterfowl conservation projects in the United States. Two wood ducks are shown in flight on the five-color stamp printed in ivory paper.

* * *

The 6c Arkansas River navigation stamp was released Oct. 1, and Oct. 9 the first-day ceremonies will be held in Seattle, Wash., for another 6c commemorative honoring the 11th-century Norse explorer Leif Erikson. There is a large Scandinavian settlement in Seattle where Leif Erikson Day is celebrated Oct. 9 and a statue of the "discoverer of America" stands in the waterfront district. Another statue of Erikson by the American sculptor Stirling Calder, which stands in Reykjavik, is reproduced on the metallic brown stamp.

Another look at Scott's new Volume 1 for 1969 shows steady increases for Australian issues and consistently higher quotations for New Zealand stamps in the 1855 Chalon portrait design. No. 1 keeps its $2,000 price for unused copies but the used price goes to $1,100. The perf. 12½ carmine of the 1 penny of 1864 goes to $1,750 unused and $1,200 used while the perf. 13 variety (No. 34a) is $1,850 unused. There are many increases in Niue, No. 1 moving to $100 mint, or used $70, last year.

* * *

Nearly every stamp of the Northwest Pacific Islands advances in price. The inverted vignette variety of the 7½ pence stamp of Tonga's 1897 series (No. 47) is listed at $1,000. There are a number of small advances in prices for early issues of Papua and New Guinea. Pitcairn Island commemoratives show small boosts, even for 1966 issues. Nauru No. 1 and 2 remain at the 1968 figure but No. 3 leaps to $8.

Eleven stamps of Guyana have been listed as minor varieties with sideways watermarks and have been assigned No. 7a through 19a. No. 203b through 213a has been assigned sideways watermark varieties of Hong Kong.

* * *

Jaipur's 1904 first issue (N. 1-3) has been rewritten and expanded in the 1969 Vol. 1, and Soruth's first issues have also been revised.

A number of missing color varieties have been noted for Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Malta and Malaysia, all for stamps produced by photogravure in multicolor. Few are priced.

Arctic Mercy Flight Repulsed by Nature

LONDON (CP) — An attempt to evacuate an injured British explorer from an ice floe has been abandoned and he now will have to stay there during the arctic winter, the committee for the British trans-Arctic expedition said Friday.

Canadian flyer Weldy Phipps Friday made a 1,000-mile dash to the expedition's camp in an attempt to rescue injured Allan Gill but was unable to land due to ridged ice.

With the six-month-long Arctic night setting in, Gill, who has a suspected slipped disc, will have to stay with the three other members of the party as they float over the North Pole.

"Only a serious worsening in Gill's condition will force us to make a second rescue attempt," said the expedition headquarters here.

Gill, 37, the party's geophysicist, seriously injured his back in a fall last month. Plans were completed earlier this week to evacuate him after arguments between party leader Wally Herbert and headquarters. Herbert wanted Gill to stay but was over-ruled by the London committee.

The expedition's spokesman said there is no immediate cause for anxiety.

NEXT MARCH

"The question of a spring landing will be decided next March," he added.

Phipps, a charter pilot based on Cornwallis Island, flew his twin-engined Otter aircraft from Isachsen on one of the Elizabeth Islands on the edge of the Arctic Circle. He had been weather-bound for days.

He refuelled at the American floating weather station T-3, more than 800 miles into the Arctic Ocean, and then flew on 150 miles to the camp.

BASE CIRCLED

After circling the base for some time trying to find a place to land he gave up and returned to Resolute Bay, his Northwest Territories base. His Otter plane had no skis and needed smooth ice to land.

The four-man expedition left Point Barrow, Alaska, last February on their epic walk across the Arctic icecap, hoping to make the long hike across the top of the world to Spitsbergen, Norway, in 16 months.

McGeer Elected

He pledged the party would work for a united province, strengthen the free enterprise system, provide sound fiscal management without recourse to "novel economic schemes," be aggressive in its resource development, and end the feud between B.C. and Ottawa.

CONGRATULATIONS

The new leader was first congratulated by predecessor Ray Perrault, 42, who resigned to seek the [redacted] federal seat last June, and then by his defeated opponent and other MLAs and MPs.

Mr. G[redacted] that the convention make the election of the leader unanimous, which meant that the vote was never officially announced.

"With complete dedication, without qualifications, and without any reservations I move that this election be made unanimous," he said.

In his speech to the delegates Mr. Gardom said he wanted a Liberal government with meaningful policies which would shape B.C. into a participating society. He accused the Socreds of developing "apartness and division" among the people and said he would toss out the old rivalries — "the weary, dreary theory of government by 'big daddy.'"

WIDE REFORMS

He also proposed extensive legislative reform including establishment of a Hansard and a daily question period and said if the people wanted broadcast debates, more liberal liquor laws and Sunday sports he would not oppose such moves.

The convention elected West Vancouver lawyer-businessman Russell Brink, 31, as B.C. party president, succeeding Lawrence Jolivet, who retired after two terms. Four men sought the party's top administrative post and one withdrew after making his speech.

Mr. Brink, who was Dr. McGeer's campaign manager when he first won the Point Grey legislature seat in a 1962 byelection, said he will devote substantial time to party duties but could not make it a fulltime job. He said he will "start immediately working on building a basic team."

RESOLUTIONS

Policy resolutions approved by the delegates favored establishment of an ombudsman's office, a study of the Ontario housing authority, senior government sharing in the cost of anti-pollution measures, and guarantees of a free choice of education in French or English for all British Columbians.

U.S. Releasing Reservists

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 16,000 Air National Guardsmen and air reservists in units called up this year following North Korea's seizure of the intelligence ship Pueblo will be phased back to civilian life by next June 30, the Pentagon announced.

In addition, the air force said it would release about 1,500 reservists and guardsmen called on an individual basis.

Highway Of Litter

GREEN LAKES, Wis. (UPI) —Americans are generating litter at a rate of 76 tons a minute, or 40,000,000 tons a year, the Wisconsin Natural Beauty Council was told Friday.

"That much litter would cover a highway from New York to San Francisco one foot deep in litter made up of old tires, cans, bottles, cigarette packages, picnic lunch remnants, newspapers, candy and gum wrappers, old mattresses, discarded car carcasses, rags and discarded clothing and other components," said Smith Rairdon.

Czech Defence Chief on Radio

'Optimist' Predicts Pullout

VIENNA (AP) — Czechoslovak Defence Minister Martin Dzur said Saturday he believes "the major part" of foreign troops will leave Czechoslovakia territory within three weeks.

Speaking over Czechoslovak radio, Dzur said he had negotiated this with Soviet Defence Minister Marshal Andre Grechko at Mukacevo, Carpatho-Ukraine. He did not disclose the date of the talks.

"I am convinced that by the 50th anniversary of the foundation of the Czechoslovak Republic on Oct. 28 the overwhelming majority of foreign troops may be expected to withdraw."

But Dzur added that the Prague leaders would have to reciprocate. He apparently referred to Soviet demands for ouster of liberal functionaries still active in party and government and for a more strict observance of the newly-introduced censorship.

The defence minister did not mention the talks between the Czechoslovak and Soviet party leaders that ended Friday in Moscow. The talks resulted in agreement on stationing some Warsaw Pact troops in Czechoslovakia.

He said the Czeshoslovak army would help the government prepare for "the highest possible number" of foreign troops to withdrew from Czechoslovakia.

He added that he had been an optimist throughout his life and "I am still an optimist, though this may have a sad ring."

Most western estimates put the number of Russian and other Warsaw Pact troops currently stationed in Czechoslovakia at between 500,000 and 600,000. Austrian military sources said Friday that according to information available in Vienna the figure was between 330,000 and 350,000.

At Least 135 Perish In Himalayan Slides

CALCUTTA (UPI) — At least 135 persons have been killed in recent Himalayan landslides, officials reported today.

The latest slide Friday followed storms which dumped almost 1½ feet of rain in 52 hours on northeastern India and cut off much of the area from the outside world.

Officials said the dead in the Indo-Tibetan Border town of Kalimpong alone reached 100 and included many Tibetan Buddhist monks housed in hillside monasteries.

Army helicopters mounted operations to rescue persons marooned in areas isolated by the landslides and drop food supplies to them.

Doctors Want More Say Regarding Pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — A resolution to be submitted to the B.C. Medical association this week will ask that more power to negotiate doctors' fees be placed in the hands of rank and file members.

It will ask the annual convention in Kelowna to permit full membership ratification of agreements with the provincial government.

In a letter to the 2,600 BCMA members, Dr. E. A. Horniman of Cloverdale, a member of the executive committee, said:

"Once more we have fallen sadly behind the indices in our latest negotiations for a fee increase."

Dr. Horniman said doctors sought a 9.9 per cent increase in fees starting Jan. 1 but a negotiating team sent by the committee to Victoria was able to get only 6.75 per cent.

He said government orders-in-council, which are the "rules of medicare," give the government limitless power to rule the medical profession in B.C.

FULL SUPPORT

Dr. Horniman says his resolution already has full support of the New Westminster Medical Association.

He said no strike would be necessary to enforce demands and if unable to come to an agreement, doctors could practise outside the medical care program until public opinion forced the government to meet demands.

Resolutions will be discussed Tuesday at the convention, which continues Monday through Thursday with about 300 doctors expected to attend.

Asked to comment on Dr. Horniman's proposed resolution, BCMA president-elect Dr. R. M. Lane of Victoria said a similar proposal was made at the convention two years ago in 1966 and it was virtually ignored.

Bond Issue Announced

Block Industries, the Vancouver real estate firm, has announced the terms of its new convertible bond issue.

The bonds will be convertible for 10 years into common at the rate of $30 a share.

Rally Splits Into Factions

Club-Swinging Police Seize Wallace Haters

By UPI

Club-swinging police tried to end fistfights between Wallace's supporters and his detractors as the third party candidate left Cleveland's municipal auditorium where his speech before 6,000 persons touched off scuffling.

GUNPLAY FRIDAY

Wallace flew to Cleveland from Newark, N.J., where a fight in a white crowd of 5,000 broke out. In Buffalo, N.Y., on Friday night, gunplay erupted following a Wallace rally.

A 20-year-old Buffalo man was wounded in the back by a bullet. His brother, 18, an anti-Wallace demonstrator, was one of four persons who had been arrested earlier on charges of assaulting a man outside Buffalo's memorial auditorium.

FILTH ATTACKED

But the Cleveland violence was worse. Even before the candidate spoke, Wallace supporters wrenched signs from the hands of his detractors and people in the crowd shouted "get that filth out of here" while police seized two demonstrators, one white and one Negro.

This was the first violence in the 1968 political campaign since the bloody clashes between police and demonstrators at the Democratic national convention in Chicago a month ago.

Observers said about 300 anti-Wallace demonstrators and 2,000 of his supporters were massed outside Cleveland's auditorium and as the candidate left the hall between 15 and 20 fistfights broke out.

One policeman was seen standing over a demonstrator with his club rising and falling. "Murderer!" shouted a girl hysterically at the police. At least two women were knocked to the ground.

HECKLERS HIRED

Meantime, the Nixon camp accused the Humphrey camp of chartering six buses to haul hecklers to Richard Nixon's presidential campaign rally in Hartford, Conn., Friday night.

Accusing the Democrats of "hitting below the belt," Robert Ellsworth, Nixon's political director, said he had "incontrovertible evidence that Humphrey's people paid for six chartered buses" to transport several hundred college students who shouted anti-Nixon slogans at the Republican candidate's rally. They were the first large group of hecklers Nixon has encountered in his campaign.

NOW WHINING

In reply, the Democratic national committee said: "Republican leaders who stood by in satisfied silence when Hubert Humphrey was subjected to unprecedented abuse are now whining about an incident or two which disturbed their candidates. Our campaign workers around the country are aware that the vice-president and his campaign leaders are opposed to heckling or any other disruptive tactics.

"If Nixon's people believe that with our limited funds we could or would be diverting money to pay hecklers they are ridiculously mistaken."

WITH ROCKEFELLER

Ellsworth made his charge as Nixon toured the crowded suburbs of fast-growing Nassau County on Long Island, N.Y.

Riding in a motorcade with his chief competitor last July for the nomination, New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, the candidate made stop after stop in perfect October weather before what he called "wonderful crowds" whose votes he will need to overcome the expected Democratic margin in New York City.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Democratic party officials made public two state polls which they said showed "signs of a definite upward movement" in Humphrey's campaign.

LIP-BITING pose was best Third Party candidate George Wallace could muster for running mate retired Gen. Curtis Lemay as they surveyed riotous scene at Buffalo, N.Y., political rally Friday night. Included in crowd of 10,000 was party of 18 from Ontario under banner which read "Canadians for Wallace."—(AP)

Lady Bird Supports Humphrey

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mrs. Lyndon Johnson did Saturday what her husband has not yet done formally — issue a strong call for the election of Hubert Humphrey.

She also pledged to work actively for a Humphrey victory in November.

"I believe we are forgetting the real issue which is at stake in America this autumn," Mrs. Johnson told a standing-room-only gathering of nearly 1,000 Democratic women.

Laurentide Resumes Dividends?

Mr. L. Goeglein president said at the annual meeting Friday the company had made $487,000 in the first two months of the fiscal year. The last dividends, which are cumulative were paid in 1966.

'Bishop' Nabbed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Devernon Legrand, a self-ordained clergyman and self-appointed bishop, was arrested Saturday on charges of kidnapping and rape after a woman claimed he held her prisoner for seven months.

Legrand, 43, is founder and overseer of the "Church of St. John," a four-storey building in Brooklyn.

He was accused of having kidnapped a 23-year-old British-born blonde and having held her prisoner for seven months. In the past 12 years Legrand, a Negro, has been arrested a dozen times.

Police found four unregistered handguns in a search of the church. Three were loaded.

'Rising Tide in Education May Sweep Out Socreds'

By IAN STREET
Legislative Reporter

PENTICTON — The provincial government was heavily criticized Friday for its failure to carry out adequate research into educational programs in B.C. public schools.

Speakers representing the viewpoint of both school trustees and teachers — one a delegate to the Liberal convention here and the other "an outsider" —mounted the attack at a convention workshop of education.

Coquitlam school board chairman Ed Murphy, a delegate, told the group, "I feel rightly or wrongly that there is a tide rising in education in this province which, if the provincial government doesn't take notice, will simply sweep it into the sea."

Mr. Murphy said the fact that 4,300 children are on shift in Coquitlam schools can be blamed on the "absolute refusal" by the government to make adequate plans to meet future growth.

While Ontario this year will spend up to $30,000,000 on research in education, he added, this provincial government will spend virtually nothing. Even the B.C. School Trustees Association has earmarked $100,000 for research this year.

RECENT REVISIONS

The government's research programs should encompass the effects of recent curriculum revisions and also things like school construction and purchase of school sites, Mr. Murphy said.

"In a growing area like Coquitlam, if we don't purchase sites for new schools in an area before it is built up, they are going to cost 10 times as much money when we expropriate."

He added, "The present policy of this government is that it doesn't believe in land speculation. But surely if the local planning board and school board can say, three years in advance, that the site for a new school is needed and we can buy it at a much cheaper cost—that isn't speculation."

SCHOOL BUDGET

James Cairnie, assistant director of the B.C. Teachers Federation, said although he was not a Liberal he hoped a Liberal government would earmark 1 per cent of the province's total school budget for research in the field of education.

From the present $170,000,000 budget for primary and secondary schooling, that would amount to only $1,700,000 a year.

Now, he added, the education department only spends the sum of $170,000 in this general area and perhaps the money actually spent on research amounts to one 250th of 1 per cent of the total education budget.

"Research is fundamentally an act of faith," said Mr. Cairnie. "We live in a province with a government that lacks faith and hasn't yet got the religion of research."

Just Society Slogan Often Meaningless

PENTICTON (Special) — A Liberal convention workshop was told here Friday that Prime Minister Trudeau's slogan "the just society" has no meaning in northern B.C.

Allan Bate, a Prince George criminal lawyer participating in a workshop discussion on human rights, said where he practices law "in many areas the administration of justice stinks."

He urged the Liberal party to consider pressing for legislation providing for the appointment of prosecutors in various outlying sections of the province to ensure no serious criminal charge is laid without due process in law.

INDIAN PERSON

"I would not want to be an Indian person within several hundred miles of some of the areas where I practise," Mr. Bate said.

"The police often take a side. I have continually seen Indians going before lay magistrates on some extremely complicated charges. They don't know what they are doing. They plead guilty then don't get bail.

"Maybe it's minor, but when you see this over and over again you wonder if there is any just society."

OTHER LAWYERS

Other lawyers taking part in the workshop discussed the high cost of legal aid. John Caldwell of Campbell River, said the working man earning $400 to $500 a month with three or four children and a wife to support couldn't possibly afford to hire a lawyer if he needed one.

"We now have medicare," he said. "Soon we are going to have to have legicare."

Another speaker, Mike Harcourt of Vancouver, proposed appointment of not only prosecutors in certain areas but also defence attorneys who would be able to assist those who couldn't afford to hire a lawyer.

IN ALL CASES

The services of such attorneys, he suggested, should be available in civil as well as criminal cases.

"The Liberal party," he said, "advances the just society in middle class terms. It has got to stop talking in cliches and realize the problems that really face the people. The Economic Council of Canada has come out with the fact that one-third of all Canadians are poor . . . they live in anguish and despair. We mustn't forget that."

Blaiberg Rejects New Offer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—The world's longest-living heart transplant patient, Dr. Philip Blaiberg said Saturday he would not consent to a second heart switch.

Released from Cape Town's Groote Schuur Hospital 10 days ago after recovering from lung and liver complications which nearly cost him his life in June and July, Blaiberg commented on a report quoting Dr. Christian Barnard as saying he would perform a second transplant on the retired dentist.

Barnard said the process of rejection of his present heart could be slowed but not stopped.

Vague Title Causes General Confusion

HARRY YOUNG's Business Topics

The Greeks may have a word for it, but according to the National Research Council of Canada, the English do not.

Involved is a new post created by that august and learned Ottawa body. The title it has chosen is one which cannot be translated from French into English.

A few days ago Dr. Schneider, president of NRC, issued a news release announcing a Delegue General had been appointed to look after policy and planning.

ACUTE ACCENTS

The title as printed is not strictly correct because five of the "es" should have acute accents atop them, and my typewriter does not have them.

I wrote to Dr. Schneider asking him to be good enough to supply me with a translation into English of the title.

A letter from J. R. Keyston, executive assistant to the president, arrived a few days later. It said.

"Dear Mr. Young.

LETTER REPLY

"Dr. Schneider has asked me to reply to your letter of Sept. 18, concerning the translation of Delegue General.

"The simple answer is that there is no English equivalent. In seeking a title for the new position none of the suggested English titles were suitable, either because they did not describe the position adequately, or because they were already used by NRC with very specific connotations.

"It was for this reason that the French title of Delegue General was adopted.

SUGGESTION

"Since NRC will not be using any English equivalent I would suggest that 'Delegue General for Policy and Planning' be used."

As the National Research Council appears to be stumped for an interpretation of the title, if not the duties of its new officer, and as this English-speaking newspaper is stumped for accents acute and grave or cedillas in its typesetting machines, I decided to set up my own research council in the matter.

THE DICTIONARY

The office French dictionary helped.

Delegue (plus the three accents) is translated as delegate, deputy or proxy.

General (plus two accents) is translated as general, universal or vague.

THE OPTION

Thus we have the option of calling the new NRC official a variety of names. He could be delegate general (which may be what the NRC really wants to call him); or he could be the universal deputy.

On the other hand, some might prefer to call him the Vague Proxy, because I am not at all impressed with Mr. Keyston's mumbo-jumbo explanation, and suspect that the NRC is either playing bilingual politics, or is trying to create another position that possibly, on economic or rational grounds, should not have been made at all.

NO CHEESECAKE PLEASE

The employment manager of an Ontario firm recently found himself liable to fines on four different counts because of an application form he sent out to a job seeker.

He was told by an official of the Ontario Human Rights Commission that the application form he had sent out was illegal:

- Because the applicant was asked what organizations he belonged to;
- What church he went to;
- How often he attended it;
- He was asked to send a photograph of himself.

All of these are illegal in Ontario, and indeed in practically every part of Canada, except Newfoundland, where there is no anti-discrimination legislature at all.

British Columbia goes along with the majority except that the jurisdiction is not binding on the crown or its corporations. And like other provinces, B.C. exempts discrimination when it comes to employing domestics.

AGE BARRIER

B.C. forbids the use of age as a barrier to work for those in the 45-65 range, while in Ontario the 40-65 age group is similarly forbidden ground in hiring discrimination.

Quebec makes it an offence to make sex a barrier to employment, but it takes some of the bite out of it by declining to include "equal pay for women" legislation.

MORE MERGERS SEEN

During the past few months many British Columbia industrial companies have been absorbed by mergers or other form of amalgamation with other firms.

The process is likely to continue, and at an increased rate, because British Columbia has suddenly arrived as an industrial entity with a rich, built-in economy and a growth potential better than in most districts in Canada and the U.S.

Those who live in the province have known this for many years, but the barrier of the Rockies has kept the news from spreading.

THINGS CHANGING

Things are changing. Progressive companies both in Eastern Canada and the U.S. have come to the conclusion there's money to be made in the province.

The easiest way for utter strangers to crash a market of this description is by buying a company which is already in existence and has a good reputation.

"There are dozens of small companies in British Columbia which are going to benefit from the rapid growth of the province economically," said one investment man. "I know of several companies just now considering takeover bids. In many cases they will find the offers so attractive that they cannot afford to refuse."

□

BONDS SICK AGAIN

The bond market took a turn for the worse in September, after having promised to do better in August.

The 40-bond average compiled by McLeod, Young, Weir and Co. showed a yield of 7.72 per cent at Sept. 30, compared with 7.65 per cent in August.

A spate of new issues at "under-the-market" levels, which caused much juggling of portfolios, was largely responsible for the lower September bond prices. The weakness was intensified by news from Ottawa that budget estimates had been too low and that a balanced budget this year was improbable.

□

ONE MILLION ISSUES

A task force of 40 investigators spent the past summer making a comprehensive list of all securities issued and outstanding in the United States.

The answer came to at least 1,000,000. On file were more than 900,000 government and municipal securities alone.

The American Bankers Association sponsored the program by setting up a committee on uniform security identification procedures, and by next year it hopes to have all the securities positively identified by an eight-figure numbering system. In this way all securities handlers will be able to make positive identification immediately.

Dogfish Niche Found

OTTAWA (UPI) — There is good news for gourmets of that tasty palate tickler, the Alaska black cod.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis says that "the lowly dogfish, scorned by fishermen as a nuisance to their nets and rejected as a food fish by cooks" could be used as food for the black cod.

Davis said the shark-like dog forms a "thriving diet" for black cod raised in captivity.

"Other foods have been tried but so far the dogfish seems to provide the best results," he announced.

Quebec Studies Bankrupt Firm

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Paul Dozois says the province is investigating the bankruptcy last month of a Montreal investment firm, Corporation Fonciere de Montreal, to determine whether fraud or illegal acts were involved.

The firm was declared bankrupt in Quebec Superior Court Sept. 24 after failure to meet commitments to creditors. The action was launched by Royal Trust Co., trustee for an undetermined number of debenture holders, after payment of $2,630,078 fell in default.

Dozois said in a statement that the investigation was started Sept. 9 by the new provincial department of financial institutions, which he also heads.

The department had been informed Sept. 4 that the Montreal firm was in financial difficulty.

Dozois said the department will take the appropriate action when it gets a report on the investigation. He gave no indication when this would be.

Driver Killed

LANGLEY (CP) — Edward Doyle Twemlow, 45, of Aldergrove, was killed when a pickup truck overturned two miles east of this Fraser Valley community. Police said the driver of the pickup escaped serious injury.

'Defence Needs Critics'

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Canada's national defence policy needs a strong civilian voice of criticism, the Canadian Armed Forces personnel chief said Saturday.

Lt.-Gen. Edwin Reyno told the 18th annual convention of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association "there is room in Canada" for constructive criticism.

"I'd like to see the RCAFA develop such a voice," he said.

At Friday's session, David Golden said Canada is the fastest expanding country in the air-space industry and Canadian air power could easily return to its war time capacity.

Golden, president of Air Industries Association of Canada and a former deputy minister of defence production and deputy minister of industry, said: "Canada is one of six or seven countries in the world in which all phases of the aerospace industry are carried out. The Canadian package is highly competitive on the world market."

French Disapprove of Fiat Bid

De Gaulle Trying Hard To Hold onto Citroen

PARIS (AP) — President de Gaulle held a top-level government meeting Saturday on the proposed merger of the French auto firm, Citroen, and the Italian giant, Fiat. The French government opposes a merger.

De Gaulle discussed the Fiat-Citroen matter for an hour with Premier Maurice Couve de Murville, Finance Minister Francois-Xavier Ortoli and Industry Minister Andre Bettencourt. The ministers declined comment.

TIRE GIANT

Informants said de Gaulle and his ministers worked out the basis for a settlement but would not elaborate. It has been said the government was seeking a "French solution"—meaning it would try and avoid any foreign intervention.

Couve de Murville is expected to meet Francois Michelin, president of the tire company which now holds Citroen, early next week. Then Michelin probably will meet de Gaulle and no formal decision can be expected before the end of the week.

While de Gaulle opposes the proposed merger, which would result in domination of the French firm by the Italian car builder, there is doubt he can stand firm against financial arguments put forth by Citroen and Michelin.

HEAVY DEBTS

Citroen's debts reached $116,000,000 last year, about half of which was owed to the government. The French firm, with a yearly output of 500,000 cars, can hardly compete with other European companies, but a merger with Fiat would make the joint company the third biggest in the world, with a production capacity of 1,800,000 cars a year.

Also, the growing deficit of Citroen may lead to a reduction of the firm's manpower, and this is a sensitive point because unemployment in France is steadily rising.

ALLIANCE WITH RENAULT

It is reported that the "French solution" suggested by government officials would mean forming an alliance with Citroen and the two other French manufacturers, Renault and Peugeot. But the three firms are said to be reluctant to work together.

Fiat is said to be ready to acquire about 30 per cent of Citroen's stock as a starter.

Some French business quarters believe a Fiat-Citroen merger would help the European car industry compete with American firms. They also say that in case the French government vetoes a merger, Fiat may turn to West Germany's Volkswagen for some kind of arrangement which would put the two firms far ahead of competitors in the European market.

CITROEN FAN

De Gaulle's main reason for opposition to the merger is based on the prestige of the Citroen firm as a national constructor of advanced technical models. The firm's problems were due mainly to an unagressive marketing policy. De Gaulle has long been a Citroen fan, and travels almost exclusively in Citroens in France.

Absorbtion Of Dosco Draws Near

MONTREAL (CP) — Sidbec, the Quebec government agency established to set up a steel industry for the province, will absorb facilities of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. Ltd. "in a few weeks," Sidbee President Jean-Paul Gignac said Friday night.

Mr. Gignac, addressing the fourth annual meeting of Quebec and Maritime locals of the United Steelworkers of America here, said the "future of the Quebec workers employed by Dosco" had been a prime consideration in the decision to buy Dosco rather than set up its own iron smelting subsidiary.

The Quebec government has authorized the purchase by Sidbec of almost 3,000,000 outstanding shares of Dosco for $32,500,000.

Week on the Prairies

Dampness Cuts Into Crop

Cool, wet weather on the Prairies from mid-August to mid-September cut Canada's estimated 1968 wheat harvest by more than 20,000,000 bushels to a still-healthy 627,927,000 bushels, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports.

The Aug. 15 estimate was 649,615,000 bushels but even then farmers were anticipating difficulties in getting it all harvested in the face of adverse weather.

The bureau's crop correspondents reported that by Sept. 15 only one-quarter of the Prairie grain crop had been harvested.

Since then occasional brief spells of good weather have permitted some swathing but at least two weeks of good, dry weather is needed to complete the bulk of harvesting.

Brash, Young Cougars Drive to Second Win

Inexperienced, but brash and driving, Victoria Cougars last night laced New Westminster Royals, 10-5, for their second straight victory of a promising season that started Friday night.

Led by their smallest player, Grant Evans, who turned in a hat trick, the Cougars jumped into a 5-0 lead at the end of the first period, and were never threatened. They led 8-2 at the end of the second, with the Royals getting the bulk of their goals when it was too late.

DISPLAYS POLISH

Evans, who came here from Kamloops Rockets where he was a league star last year, provides a large part of the polish that should knit together the fine-looking band of former juveniles recruited by Doug Anderson. He should get all the help he needs from experienced players like John Van Horlick, Adrian Blais and Len Barrie, both from Penticton, and Dave Williams, one of only three returnees from last year's disappointing squad.

Up from juvenile ranks in Portland, Ore., Doug Gibson impressed with a brace of goals. Bolstering the defence are Gerry Bond, a newcomer from Kamloops Junior B, and Laurie Moore, from Kimberley. Moore, on last night's showing, will be an unrepentant charger who should be one of the bucks of the league.

Ron Grahame, back again, made his first start of the year and was steady throughout in goal. With some luck and better support he could have had a shutout, and a crowd of 3,421 booed lustily on the five goals that did go in.

BROKE UP RUSHES

Van Horlick, moved back on defence, played a good game, and his speed lets him come back to cover up as few defencemen can. He cost Grahame a goal when he went seeking revenge once, but also saved several when he broke up two-on-one rushes. He blasted well from the point and got a goal on a good drive.

Four juvenile graduates were impressive, with Bruce Cowick and Grahame Brown of Esquimalt flashing some good form, Victorian Bob Merluk often looking dangerous, and Lon Miles from Port Alberni midgets providing some aggressive drive.

ANXIOUS TO WORK

Barrie, Brown and Moore were the other Victoria scorers.

The Cougars are big and aggressive, most of them skate well, and all of them seemed anxious to go all out — all categories that last year's team had little depth in.

Perhaps the best indication that this is a different type of team came in the fact that they frequently carried the play when a man short, and had good offensive thrusts even when they were two men short.

EDGE IN CHANCES

An indication of the play was the fact that a busy Maurice L'Heureux had 37 saves, to 27 for Grahame.

Five players split the scoring for New Westminster — Mike Andruff, captain Terry Thomson, Peter Kosuk, Ken Love and Wes Prior.

New Westminster took nine penalties to seven for Victoria, but the game was bristling with rough action and serious trouble threatened several times.

At Kamloops, a two-goal performance by rookie Larry Simon gave Kamloops Rockets a 4-3 win over Vernon in the first game of the season for both clubs.

FERGUSON JENKINS, the big righthander who was chosen as Canada's male athlete of 1967 after a 20-13 season with Chicago Cubs, did even better this season although his record was 20-15. It should have been 25-10, Jenkins qualifying as one of the tough-luck pitchers of the season by losing five games by 1-0 . . . most valuable player in the Western Division of the National Lacrosse Association this year just has to be Wayne Goss, the New Westminster speedster who scored 53 goals and had 40 assists without benefit of being on the odd-man team and was handily the outstanding penalty-killer in his division . . . Frank Inda, who rode that fine race on Treasure's Glory in the B.C. Derby a week ago, is former Oregon sheepherder from Spain . . . if college football players had a union, Oregon State fullback Bill Enyart would be in for a lot of overtime pay. He carried 50 times against Utah, but it paid off in 299 yards and three touchdowns . . . Joe Kapp, who got off to such a great start by leading Minnesota Vikings to successive victories over Atlanta Falcons and Green Bay Packers had some trouble against Chicago Bears and Gary Cuozzo got some game time. However, there is no argument but that Kapp looked exceptionally poised and able against the Packers, beating them with the ball control they usually use so effectively . . . Vancouver Canucks have been stumbling around a bit in pre-season games but Joe Crozier hasn't had all his players and things will be different later on. The Canucks shouldn't be far away at the finish, may even be good enough to win the Western Hockey League championship . . . Al Millar, however, won't be part of it. The former Victoria Maple Leaf goalkeeper has been reclaimed by Phoenix Roadrunners after starting in the Vancouver training camp . . .

DON McKETA, who had such an unfortunate time of it here trying to make a success out of the Steelers, may just have hit Continental Football League paydirt in Spokane. The Shockers drew an announced 12,500 fans on Sept. 29, and rewarded them with a 24-17 upset win over Seattle Rangers. It was quite a reversal. The Rangers won the first game between the two clubs, 44-10, but the outstanding play of quarterback Jesse Kay and end Pat Brennan, two players who had been suspended by McKeta, turned things around . . . fullback Fred Figueroa, who had two tests with Winnipeg Blue Bombers this season, is playing for Orange County Ramblers, who again appear to be the power in the Continental League's Western Division . . . in view of Health Minister Loffmark's stand on pleasure boats discharging toilet wastes, can't help wondering if the boat-owners who have nothing fancier aboard than a bucket will take it to heart and go ashore in times of need . . . University of Washington got off to a thrilling football start this season when sophomore Ron Volbrecht kicked a 51-yard field goal with five seconds left to earn a 35-35 tie with Rice Institute, but Rice coach Bo Hagan is still fuming. He claims game pictures show that Washington ran off seven plays in 11 seconds during their late rally and accuses the timekeeper of "bleeding the clock" . . . Willis Travel Service is experimenting next Saturday with a special service for horse-racing fans anxious to have one last fling at Vancouver's Exhibition Park. Return fare will be $7.50 with a bus leaving the office at 1720 Broad Street at 10 a.m. and returning on the 9 p.m. ferry, guaranteeing a full day at the races. Further information may be had by calling 385-4312 . . . and basketball fans will have a chance later this season to see four National Basketball Association games in Vancouver. Seattle Supersonics will play in Vancouver against Baltimore Bullets on Monday, Oct. 21, against Milwaukee Bucks on Monday, Nov. 25, against New York Knickerbockers on Sunday, Dec. 29 and against San Diego Rockets on Wednesday, March 12. The Sunday game is at 2:00 p.m., the others at 8:15 p.m. Top ticket price is $4 and tickets may be ordered at the T. Eaton Co.

GAR TAYLOR, showing remarkable recuperative powers for a skip, has been released from hospital and is well on his way to recovering from injuries suffered in a fall . . . it appears that Vidal Carlin, latest quarterback importation made by B.C. Lions, may never appear in action. It's said he wants a contract which will allow him his freedom at the end of the season so that he can make another try in the National Football Club or get a chance in the American League. The Lions can hardly be expected to agree to that . . . Portland Buckaroos of the Western Hockey League have been the most successful club in professional hockey over the last eight years, winning 322 games . . . Guyle Fielder should reach another milestone before the end of the month. He needs only nine points to become the second player in professional hockey to reach 1500 points. Gordie Howe, of course, was the first . . . either St. Louis Blues are in for a bad time in the NHL this season or Canada's rebuilt national team is better than expected. The Nationals' sweep of a two-game exhibition series was quite a surprise . . . as badly off as they are, B.C. Lions have at least three players who deserve serious consideration when the Western Football Conference selectors vote for an all-star team. Offence-tackle Ken Sugarman, corner-linebacker Greg Findlay and rookie defence-back Rich Robinson have had great seasons. And if it wasn't for the presence of George Reed, Lion-rookie Jim Evenson would likely be the fullback choice . . . and who could have forecast that this football season would see the likes of linebacker Garner Ekstran and end E. A. Sims cut by clubs battling for the third playoff spot in the West? . . . Lionel Heinrich, who was a Western Hockey League regular with Victoria Cougars in the 1956-57 season, is now one of the best thoroughbred trainers in Canada and this year has saddled winners in about one out of every three races in which horses were entered.

Olympics Win Boxla Opener

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Gaylord Powless scored five goals Saturday night as Detroit Olympics defeated New Westminster Salmonbellies, 21-12, in the first game of the National Lacrosse Association final series.

Olympics outhustled the Western Division winners all through the game. New Westminster outshot Detroit but the Detroit crew fired only dangerous shots at two New Westminster goaltenders.

Second game is set for Monday night and the third Tuesday.

Salmonbellies started with Les Norman in the nets but replaced him after he had surrendered 12 goals. In the Detroit nets, Merv Marshall stopped 45 shots from weary New Westminster players.

Visitors Too Tough For Ailing Vikings

Vancouver Meralomas defeated University of Victoria Vikings, 19-3 in an exhibition rugby game Saturday at Centennial Stadium. Vikings were close in the first half, trailing 6-3 at half-time, but the powerful visitors wore down the injury-riddled university team in the second half.

Barry Burnham led Meralomas, kicking a penalty goal and two converts. Fred Sturrock scored two trys while John Mitchell and Jim Boivin scored one try each to account for Vancouver's points.

ONLY VIKING SCORE

Vikings lone score was made by Ted Hardy on a 45-yard penalty kick at three minutes of the first half.

In second division Victoria Rugby Union play, Barbarians edged Oak Bay, 13-12, and Cowichan played to an 11-11 tie with Crusaders.

LEADS BARBARIANS

Paul Copeland led Barbarians with two trys. Ray Ramsay kicked two converts and George Jones scored a try to account for the winner's other points. For Oak Bay, Vince Calender kicked two penalty goals while Jerry Karaginis and Jim Lang scored a try each.

In Vancouver, UBC frosh defeated University of Victoria Saxons, 17-3, in a B.C. Junior Inter-collegiate Rugby League game Saturday.

In Pre-Olympic Meet

World Records Bettered

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuba's 400-metre relay team bettered the listed world record a second straight day while four other Olympic marks were bettered and one tied in the windup of a 27-nation pre-Olympics track and field meet Saturday.

The United States made its first competitive appearance in this 1½-mile high city as the U.S. women's 400-metre relay team was outclassed by Holland, Cuba and Britain.

Cuba's 400-metre men quartet, anchored by sprint star Enrique Figuerola, again was clocked in 38.8 beating out Russia which placed second in the same heat in 39.3.

The existing world and Olympic mark is 39.0 set by the United States in the 1964 Tokyo Olympics.

Olympics records also were surpassed on a regulation track near the Olympic Stadium where the 19th Olympiad starts Oct. 12 in the discus, 200-metre sprint, hammer throw and women's 80-metre hurdles and one tied in the 110-metre hurdles.

Russia, which Friday won three field events, demonstrated strength in the same category Saturday, with triumphs in the hammer throw, triple jump and women's long jump.

Russia took 1-2-4 in the triple jump, won by Viktor Saneyev with a formidable leap of 5 feet, ¾ inches, and Tatiana Talisheva of Russia won the women's long jump with 21 feet, 2¾ inches.

The Olympic discus mark was bettered with a 201-feet, 11-inch toss by Lothar Milde of East Germany, while in the women's 80-metre hurdles Australia's Maureen Caird skimmed to a 10.4 clocking, shaving two-tenths of a second off the Olympic mark.

In the men's 200-metre, Australia's Peter Norman did a 20.2, shading the Olympic record of 20.3 by Henry Carr of the U.S. in 1964.

Cougars gave their fans plenty to shout and wave about Saturday as they trimmed New Westminster, 10-5, in their home opener. Cougars' goal No. 6 has just been scored by No. 12, Doug Gibson in this action.—(Jim Ryan)

EDMONTON — Playoff positions in the Western Football Conference were all but settled Saturday night when Edmonton Eskimos scored a 13-5 victory over the inept B.C. Lions to practically clinch third place.

The Edmonton victory followed a loss suffered by Winnipeg Blue Bombers in Hamilton earlier in the day and left the Eskimos six points ahead of the Lions and seven ahead of the Bombers with the schedule nearing its end.

REMAINING GAMES

Winnipeg and Edmonton both have four games left. The Lions have five to play, meeting Winnipeg and Saskatchewan in Vancouver, and Toronto, Montreal and Calgary away from home.

Coming off three fine efforts against Hamilton, Saskatchewan and Ottawa, Lions went into the game with hopes high for a victory but didn't come close because of what might have been their poorest offence display of a season which has been featured by a lack of scoring punch.

SHARED DUTIES

Paul Brothers, who probably wasted his last chance, and Jackie Parker each quarterbacked half the game with Brothers taking the first two quarters.

Neither got much protection and neither was able to move the club after Brothers started off with three successive first downs. The Lions got across the centre lie only five times—once in the first quarter, twice in the second quarter, once in the third quarter (because of a long kickoff and a clipping penalty on the runback) and once in the fourth quarter.

DEFENCE WASTED

Beaten here and there by the fine running of Jim Thomas and Charlie Fulton, the scrambling quarterback rookie, the defensive Lions came up strong when it counted.

They held the Eskimos to a converted touchdown, set up by an interception, a field goal and three points conceded after wide field-goal attempts by Pete Kempf.

The successful field goal was set up when the Lions allowed Randy Kerbow to recover his punt and one of Kempf's one-point field-goal kicks was set up when the Eskimos blocked a punt.

With dropped passes and dropped quarterbacks a feature of their attack, the Lions could do no better than give Ted Gerela field-goal chances from 54 yards (short) in the first quarter, from 44 yards (one point) in the second quarter, from 44 yards (three points) in the third quarter and from 41 yards (one point) in the fourth quarter.

Eskimos were never behind. They led by 1-0 after the first quarter, took a 9-1 lead into the third quarter and were 12-4 starting the final 15 minutes.

Turning point, as it turned out, came in the late stages of the second quarter.

Trailing by 1-2 and on their own 43-yard line after some great play by their defensive club had brought field position, the Lions were victimized Gerry Griffin intercepted a pass thrown by Paul Brothers.

The defence yielded a first down but appeared to have the situation own to a field-goal try when Charlie Fulton threw short trying to hit Thomas on a second-and-10 play. Thomas braked quickly and John Griffin ran into the Edmonton speedster.

Officials called pass interference for a first down on the two-yard line. The defence club rolled back two running plays but Fulton went over on third down after a brilliant fake to Howie Schumm.

Kempf's convert made it 9-1, and the Lions never got close to winning although Gerela's successful field goal brought them to 9-4 early in the third quarter. Kempf's field goal made the margin eight points, meaning the Lions had to score twice.

They managed to get within 37 yards after Eskimos got to 13-4 but when Gerela missed the field goal which would have put them within a converted touchdown of winning, with five minutes left, the bells tolled.

Record for Coffey As Hamilton Wins

HAMILTON (UPI) — End Tommy-Joe Coffey, setting a Canadian Football League record along the way, Saturday led Hamilton Tiger-Cats to a 23-13 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers which put his club in a first-place tie with Toronto Argonauts in the Eastern Conference.

Accepting five passes, Coffey set a CFL career record of 467 catches and scored 17 points to take the CFL individual scoring lead with a total of 84.

It was the third win in eight days against Western Conference clubs for the Ticats, who defeated the Eskimos in Edmonton the previous Saturday and followed that with a victory over B.C. Lions in Vancouver on Monday.

Result boosted the Hamilton club one point ahead of Ottawa Rough Riders, who battled today with the Argonauts for the conference lead.

Neither club could generate much of an offence in the cold, windy conditions. All of the scoring in the first half was done by the placekickers, Coffey kicking 37 and 26-yard field goals and getting a single point from a 40-yard field-goal try and Pierre Guindon answering for Bombers with 44 and 42-yard field goals.

Coffey boosted the Hamilton lead to 9-7 in the third quarter with two wide field-goal attempts as the Winnipeg defence continued to cope with the Hamilton attack. But things changed when a knee injury forced the retirement of linebacker Phil Minnick, the key man on Bombers' stop team.

Then Coffey took over to get his record. He had sneaked up on the previous record of 466 catches set by Dick Shatto of Toronto with two first-half receptions, then sparked a 60-yard touchdown march with three consecutive catches.

The first was for 25 yards, the second for 13 and the third for eight yards, a touchdown, the record, and a rousing cheer from the 18,123 chilled fans.

He kicked the convert for a 16-6 lead, but the Bombers struck back as fullback Gene Lakusiak broke through for a 22-yard touchdown run and Guindon kicked the convert to get within three points in the first minute of the fourth quarter.

Speedy halfback Dave Fleming, timing his move perfectly, scored the clinching touchdown midway through the quarter by accepting a long pass from Zuger for a 41-yard scoring play.

Brock Ties One Record and Nears Another

St. Louis speedster Lou Brock beats throw of catcher Bill Freban of Detroit to shortstop Mickey Stanley for one of three stolen bases in Saturday's game. The three thefts in one game tied a series record and gave Brock six for the series, one short of the record he set last year. He now has 13 career series stolen bases, one short of Eddie Collins' mark.

Brewer Successful In Alcan Defence

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Gay Brewer, a pugnosed Texan, shot a final round 69 Saturday and successfully defended his Alcan golf title with a 72-hole total of 283.

Brewer, a former Masters champion from Dallas, was 13 under par for the par 74, 1,140-yard Royal Birkdale layout on the shore of the Irish Sea.

Peter Townsend, a 22-year-old British whiz kid who held the third round lead, slipped to a 73 for 286 and second place in the $200,000 tournament. He blew his chances in a hurry, taking a bogey five on the first hole and a double bogey six at the second.

Bob Murphy, the paunchy former amateur champion from Nichols, Fla., finished with a 72 for 287 and a tie for third with 41-year-old Gardner Dickinson, who shot a course record 67—seven under par.

TOOK CHARGE

Brewer, one stroke off the pace going into the final round, wasted no time in taking charge. He birdied two of the first three holes, and picked up two more birds on the back nine before taking his only bogey on the par four 15th. He got that back on the final hole, clinching the $55,000 first place money with a birdie.

Dickinson, the lean and leathery Ben Hogan prototype, made an early charge with an incredible 29 on the front nine, seven under par. He had seven birds, including four in a row on six and nine.

"I went out in a 29 and back in a wheelbarrow," he quipped.

Dickinson's round broke two course records, the 29 going out and the 67 total breaking the record of 68 set by the late Tony Lema in the British Open in 1965.

He had only 25 putts and one-putted 11 greens in the balmy weather.

Bobby Cole, 20-year-old South African, shot a final round 68 for a tie at 288 with Peter Butler of England, 72, and New Zealand's Bob Charles, 71.

Bill Casper, the leading money winner this season in the United States, managed a 70 for 293 and U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino had a 75 for 296.

U.S. Keeps Title Canadians Fifth

MELBOURNE (AP) — The United States Saturday retained the women's world amateur golf championship, finishing the 72-hole event with a total of 616, five shots ahead of Australia. France, with 622, was third.

DETROIT (UPI) — Tim McCarver and Orlando Cepeda, the hitting flops of last year's World Series, got the Tiger Stadium artillery range in their sights Saturday and bombed Detroit with a pair of three-run homers to give St. Louis Cardinals a 7-3 victory and a 2-1 edge in this series.

The explosive Tigers, who outhomered the Cards 185-73 during the regular season, were supposed to have the power edge in the first series game in 23 years at Tiger Stadium, which has such short power alleys.

BEATEN AT OWN GAME

But McCarver blasted into the stands in the fifth inning and Cepeda lined his shot in the seventh, enabling the Cards to beat the Tigers at their own game in this pivotal third contest.

Detroit also got two homers, a two-run drive by Al Kaline in the third and Dick McAuliffe's solo blast in the fifth, but the losers got only two other hits off winner Ray Washburn and reliever Joe Hoerner to the dismay of the capacity crowd of 53,634.

REMATCH TODAY

The Cards now have an edge in the best-of-seven series with Bob Gibson, who has won six straight series games, ready to duel Denny McLain again in the fourth game today. Gibson struck out a record 17 while winning the opener Wednesday.

The world champion Cards, favored to win their third world series in the last five years and their second straight, battered loser Earl Wilson — who didn't allow either homer — and four Tiger relievers for 13 hits after collecting just 12 hits while splitting the first two games.

BROCK RAMBLES AGAIN

Fleet Lou Brock started Wilson's downfall as he singled and promptly stole his third base of the game — tying a series record he equalled last year — on the first pitch to Curt Flood. It was the 13th stolen base in World Series play for Brock, leaving him one short of Eddie Collins' record.

McCarver, who was the hitting star of the Cards' 1964 series against the Yankees with a .478 average and a three-run game-winning homer in the fifth contest, slumped to just .125 last season against the Red Sox.

After getting only one hit in seven trips in the first two games, McCaver stepped up to face reliever Pat Dobson with two on and two out in the fifth inning and the Cards trailing, 2-1. The 6-foot-1, 200-pound catcher from Memphis cracked Dobson's 2-2 pitch into the second deck in rightfield to put the Cards ahead, 4-2.

FIRST SERIES HOMER

Cepeda, who had never hit a world series homer, came up in the seventh inning with two on and none out, to face Don McMahon, with a record of just eight hits in 58 at bats in three World Series, including a 2-for-11 mark this year.

After winning the MVP award last season, he also hit just .125 against Boston as he tried in vain to reach the short Boston left field wall. But Saturday he picked on McMahon's first ptich and lined a drive into the lower deck left field seats over Willie Horton's head to end his series' frustration.

The homer made it 7-3 and that was the end of the scoring as the Tigers got only one hit off Hoerner the last three innings.

Jets, Chiefs Score Wins

At Buffalo, Jim Stenerud missed two field goal attempts, then kicked four in a row to give Kansas City Chiefs an 18-7 win over Buffalo Bills.

Next game: Today — Firefighters vs. Columbus.

VANCOUVER — Victoria O'Keefes moved into third place in the Pacific Coast Soccer League on Saturday, balancing their record at 2-2 with a 6-3 romp over Eintrach at Callister Park.

In Saturday's other match, University of British Columbia Thunderbirds vaulted into the league lead, three points ahead of O'Keefes and one point ahead of Firefighters, by blanking Croatia, 5-0, at UBC.

TRAILED BRIEFLY

O'Keefes, improving steadily, just had too much experience for Eintracht, a newcomer to the PCSL this season along with Croatia.

At that, it took the Islanders a half to get untracked. They trailed by 1-2 before going on a splurge which netted five goals in less than 30 minutes.

Victoria scoring was shared by Marty Taylor, Peter Brett and Ike MacKay, who hadn't been expected to play.

Each of the trio scored twice, MacKay opening the scoring and later coming up with the 3-2 goal.

After MacKay's opening goal, Glen Johnson scored to put Eintracht on even terms for the first 45 minutes. Then Franz Walls put the Vancouver club ahead early in the second half.

Then Taylor got O'Keefes on the way with his first goal, MacKay slipped in his second scoring shot and Taylor provided what was to be the winning goal.

Biely's Grand Bolero Wins Juvenile Crown

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grand Bolero overcame a classy field of two-year-olds and a steward's inquiry to win the $5,000-added Juvenile Championship at Exhibition Park Saturday.

The Kentucky-bred colt, owned by Vancouver construction man George Biely, withstood a stern challenge from Ballistic Missile to prevail by a neck. Royal Hula was third, two lengths back.

The stewards posted the inquiry sign but decided after viewing the films that Grand Bolero had not interfered sufficiently with Ballistic Missile to change the order of finish.

The victory was Grand Bolero's fourth in eight starts. He has never finished worse than second. In picking up $4,275 for owner Biely, Grand Bolero ran the 6½ furlongs over a sloppy track in 1:19 3-5 and paid $3.60, $2.70 and $2.50.

Bowling Roundup

Victoria Tenpinners Join New Canadian Federation

By KING LEE

Canadian tenpin bowlers now have their own association, the Canadian Tenpin Federation.

The new group was formed at a meeting in May in Winnipeg which was attended by Bruce McDiarmid and Hazel McLeary, representing the Victoria Tenpin Association and Victoria Women's Bowling Association. It allows Canadian bowlers to participate in international competitions under the auspices of Federation Internationale Des Quilleures (FIQ), a 45-nation organization, but does not alter the fact that ABC cards are required for league bowling.

Membership in the federation, which will cost 10 cents per person for the season, is optional for ABC bowlers.

ELEGIBLE FOR EVENTS

By joining Canadian tenpinners will become elegible to enter local zone, provincial and national tournaments with a chance to participate in any international competition such as the American zone, which will be held later this season in Puerto Rico.

These tournaments are not to be confused with the annual Victoria men's zone rolloffs, which are sponsored by Brunswick of Canada and which send a representative from B.C. to the Canadian Masters tournament.

Subsidization of the 10 cents membership fee is expected from bowling equipment manufacturers and bowling proprietors' associations.

THIS IS "OFF" YEAR

The FIQ holds international tournaments every two years and this is an "off" year. During these off-years, the ABC and the WIBC sponsor U.S.-Canada "Friendship Matches" which, when they are held in Canada, are usually hosted by Toronto or Montreal. Vancouver has drawn the honor this year, and the matches will be held at Brentwood Lanes from Oct. 21 to 26. Vancouver will send its best against picked American ABC and WIBC teams.

Mrs. McLeary is organizing a charter bus trip to the matches, for Saturday, Oct. 26 only, and anyone interested in going may telephone her at 384-3087.

PLANS CHARTER TRIP

She is also organizing a charter trip to the WIBC national convention and tournament, which will be held in San Diego in May, 1969. This will be an eight-day excursion that includes three days in Las Vegas, Nevada. Cost for non-bowlers is $175 and, for women entering the tournament $199. Deadline for reservations is Nov. 1 and Mrs. McLeary will accept instalment payments from bowlers intending to compete, the entry fee to be used as the first payment.

An explanation of the new Canadian Tenpin Federation and local tournament rules for the current season will be given at a general meeting of V.W.B.A. Sunday at Mayfair Lanes at 8 p.m.

Secretaries of all women's leagues are urged to attend.

Gibsons Recreations is holding a 10-game singles fivepin tournament Sunday, Oct. 27 with an entry fee of $20 and a first prize, for a minimum of 40 entries, of $220. It is an 80 per cent handicap event with a 300-pin maximum for the 10 games. Highest average as of Oct. 18 with a minimum of 15 league games bowled will be used and the scratch average will be 270. Tournament starts at 11 a.m.

Nashua Filly Wins Stakes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mrs. Whitney Stone's Shuvee, whose only previous victory was scored in a maiden race, came from far back in a field of 11 2-year-old fillies at Belmont Park Saturday to win the $130,650 Frizette Stakes by a neck.

The chestnut daughter of Nashua ran down favored Gallant Bloom in the final drive to pick up a winner's purse of $93,650 in the mile race.

Arsenal Loses Lead Fans Pelt Goalkeeper

LONDON (CP) — Arsenal's defence held out for a scoreless soccer tie with Manchester United in the English League Saturday, amid a tense atmosphere and missiles hurled from the terraces at Old Trafford Stadium.

A stream of missiles—mostly coins and paper cups—rained about Arsenal goalkeeper Bob Wilson in the second half. Referee Kenneth Burns announced that if any more objects were thrown the game would be abandoned.

After that the fans quieted down, Wilson made spectacular saves against Bobby Charlton and Denis Law.

By dropping a point, Arsenal lost the league leadership. It now is in a three-way tie with Liverpool and Leeds, both of which won away from home. All three teams have 18 points, but Liverpool are in top place with the best goal average.

Blair Park has new play equipment

Saanich Playgrounds Best, and Improving

By DON GAIN

Saanich has the finest playing fields on the continent, Ald. Alan Newberry said Friday.

"This is what Saanich athletes, who have travelled all over North America, tell me," he said.

Mr. Newberry is justifiably proud because he's chairman of the parks and outdoor recreation committee.

COME LONG WAY

"We've come a long way," he said. "Ten years ago the only equipment we had was a few rakes and you can imagine the shape our parks were in.

"Look at them now."

Parks superintendent Bert Richman said this week a lot of people are looking at them and using them.

"And they're being improved all the time," he said. "This year we're spending $49,500 in our capital budget on them."

BUSY MONTH

His men spent a busy month in September. They installed swings, slides, seesaws, climber and sandbox at Blair Park. They seeded the park and got a basketball court ready to be blacktopped at this 2.2-acre park which was just established this year.

At Lochside Park, which is one year old next month, they seeded the final three of 8.14 acres.

At Hyacinth Park they erected two new softball backstops and put up a change building. They also installed a full set of play equipment.

HORNER PARK

At Rudd Park they laid the base for a new basketball court.

Development of the old Horner property was completed with the addition of one acre, the site of the Horner family home, to the park formerly known as Broadmead. The house was pulled down but ornamental trees were left standing and this acre will be the future picnic area. (The park's name has been changed to honor the Horner family.)

Mr. Richman announced his work schedule for October and November.

TWO FENCES

"We usually erect new backstops at this time of year," he said, "as the weather gets too bad to work on the grounds."

Rainbow playground will be fenced with chain link fence, he said, and so will the road alongside Qu'Appelle Park.

There is a softball backstop to erect at Rosedale Park and a basketball court at Allenby Park.

ALL APPROVED

"And we still have play equipment to place in Hyacinth Park," Mr. Richman said.

That pretty well winds up the capital projects for this year. Every item was passed in our $49,500 capital budget for parks."

Courtroom Parade

First Brandy Better Last

Following a guilty plea to Central Magistrate's Court, a local woman told court she drank brandy for the first time the day of the offence, and was told by Magistrate William Ostler, "Perhaps you'd better make it the last."

Court was told Joyce Stocks, 42, of 522 Lockfield, was observed Oct. 4 driving on Atkins in a "rapid manner" and gave breathalyser readings of .22 and .19 when tested by Colwood RCMP.

She was fined $400 and her driving licence was suspended.

□

A North Vancouver salesman who asked if he could reserve plea until his "less busy season" on charges of impaired driving and driving while his licence was suspended, was told he could not have until December to consult an attorney.

Two Captured

CLEARWATER (CP)—Michael Lawrence Brassin, 28, and Paul Roger Yablonski, 26, were recaptured in bushland 14 miles north of Kamloops a week after they escaped from the Clearwater minimum security prison camp.

A REPORT ON PROGRESS!

Twenty years ago our Company was started with a little money but a lot of determination, ambition and enthusiasm. We were confident success could be achieved by hard work, careful planning, imagination and good management.

Twenty years later a part of this ambition has been accomplished. From a start of 1200 square feet, the area of the original store in Sidney, B.C. a local company, the leader in it's field, has emerged. The earnings of this Company has been shared with hundreds of friends and customers, each of whom have purchased a part of Slegg Brothers common shares or preferred shares since we became a Public Company.

Here is what 1200 square feet has grown to— ★ Victoria, Sidney and Duncan stores. ★ Gold Star Credits Ltd.—customer budget plans. ★ Maryland (98 lots) and Melville Park Development (108 lots) land developments. ★ Leader Realty Ltd.—for contractors' new home sales. ★ Goldstream Sawmill Ltd.—for our own sawmill and planer mill. ★ Leader Holdings Ltd.—for building frame apartments. ★ West Bay Investments Ltd.—highrise apartment complex already consisting of our fully-rented "Princess Patricia," 208 suites, the first of five buildings which will total over 500 suites when completed.

Bare Facts Doom Campus Parody

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — The University of Wisconsin regents ruled out campus nudity Friday and an obscenity warrant was issued against the producer of a student play which featured a dance by two shapely, unclad co-eds.

The co-eds, however, remained free spirits.

Dane County District Attorney James Boll, who reportedly knew the name of one co-ed, had trouble getting any of the 1,000 persons who were at two shows to talk about it, so no charges had been filed against the girls.

However, Roger Mott, a write-in candidate for the state senate, signed a complaint Friday against Stuart Gordon, producer of the student parody of the play Peter Pan.

Boll said Gordon, a 21-year-old senior in drama from Chicago, would appear in court Monday on the obscenity charge, punishable by a $5,000 fine, five years in jail or both.

However, Boll said Mott, 35, who was at one of the performances, could not provide the names of the co-eds who cavorted nude at a UW building Tuesday night. The performances came hours after Boll had ruled the play obscene.

At the Wharf Street Gallery

Punch of Graphics Almost Knockout

By INA D. D. UHTHOFF

Two Austrian artists are responsible for them, but it is the work of P. Wieternik that thrills me. The strength of impact received by the artist conveys itself to the observer.

The emotional state that creates drawings like these can best be described as pure expression and is strictly personal.

To some people it might appear to be merely a scribble, but one is conscious that this is the work of a highly trained artist with a wide experience of composition and color, and plenty to say.

Wieternik was born in Vienna in 1919 and had his early training there. Later he went to Germany, Sweden and Italy, then to Paris, taking part in numerous international exhibitions.

Looking at his paintings makes one think that perhaps Jackson Pollock received some of this stimulus in his early paintings. There is a similarity in the nervous activity of the brush strokes.

Movements, rhythms and space to develop the composition.

There are no completed names given in the publicity received, merely P. Wieternik and T. Boucher, the other Austrian artist, whose work I shall review soon.

THE CONNECTION is the award winning adaptation of the Jack Gelber play that ran for over two years on Broadway. As a play, in 1960, it led the "Obie Awards", taking three first prizes.
THE CONNECTION, under the brilliant direction of Shirley Clarke, became the underground's first feature-length success.
"Fascinating as an exhibit of bravura film-making. As in Antonioni's films, the camera insists that we look"—Arthur Knight, New York Times.
What she has done is to treat her material with such visual point and power that one grasps and feels it all through the eyes first of all, cinematically. This is real film-making, not the adaptation of the play" —SPECTATOR.

ON MUSIC

The Victoria Symphony will present one of Canada's finest talents this week when it offers violinist Steven Staryk in concert and in recital.

Writing in Hi Fi Stereo Review critic George Jellinek called Mr. Staryk's recording Four Hundred Years of the Violin "a remarkable debut."

He goes on to say, "The man's control of his instrument is demonic: all the violinistic tricks and devices are brilliantly handled, his dynamics are beautifully calculated, the transparency and absolute ease of his playing are boundless."

Saturday Review critic Irving Kolodin writes of the same record set, "He is a violinist of high skill, clean execution, and broadly based style, with the ability to fulfil the formidable billing of this six-record set."

For his Victoria concert Mr. Staryk has chosen the Tchaikovsky violin concerto, which is both taxing and delightful.

On Wednesday the violinist will be heard in a recital at the McPherson Playhouse with Robin Wood as accompanist.

The orchestra will complete the weekend program by playing Tchaikovsky's fifth symphony.

It Beats Basketball

The Victoria Choral Society is to make a submission to the city council asking that the convention centre be made suitable for concert purposes. If the symphony and the theatre groups, along with the community arts council, got busy there is a chance the public's money could be spent on something more than a basketball court.

□

Chamber music buffs get their chance Tuesday when the University of Victoria offers the first noon concert of the current season.

Conductor Hugh McLean will lead the group in a program of music by Lully, Sibelius, Barber and Dvorak. There is a possibility the symphony will also offer some chamber concerts this season.

The late Henry James (Red) Allen is one of the best known trumpeters of the early 30s. RCA Victor has done jazz lovers a great service in issuing a record of some of his better-known work.

The latest release includes his trumpet, along with such sidemen as Coleman Hawkins and Fletcher Henderson. On one cut he is assisted by Marty Napoleon, who was on piano during the last visit here by Louis Armstrong.

The other RCA Victor gem is a two-record set titled the Memoirs of Willie the Lion Smith. The Lion plays and talks about his career which began in the 20s. Both records are of great interest of jazz fans but they also have a certain historic value to anyone interested in the history of music.

Limit Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council has set a $40,000 ceiling on the city's contribution to secure the 1976 Winter Olympics for Whistler Mountain. The Garibaldi Olympic Development Association was hoping for $75,000.

Expo Hit Film Of Year

TORONTO (UPI) — Chris Chapeman's A Place to Stand,—a hit at the Ontario pavilion of Expo, was named Canadian picture of the year Friday night at the 20th Canadian film awards presentation.

Best actress was Genevieve Bujold for her starring role in Isabel, a film shot in rural Quebec. Best actor went to her co-star, George Parkes.

The best direction award went to Don Owen for his film The Ernie Game. A special award, given by an international panel of five judges, went to Norman McLaren for his film Pas de Deux, an impressionistic study of ballet dancing.

Finney's Bubbles Both Funny, Sad

By BILL THOMAS

There is a saying that, "if you haven't been to Manchester you haven't lived."

Filmgoers who see Charlie Bubbles, now playing the Fox Theatre, might be prepared to challenge the statement but then they probably haven't seen Bolton, Bury or Rochdale.

The script and story are by Shelagh Delaney, who did Taste of Honey. She has not departed from her basic thesis of communications problems between people and the backdrop of Manchester and the area surrounding are the same.

DOES BOTH WELL

Charlie Bubbles is a funny picture but at the same time it is really sad. Mr. Bubbles is a highly successful writer who makes it out of the row housing and into the big time but, while he is a great success in the communications business, he fails at every turn in his efforts to communicate with live people.

SPECTACULAR WAY

In the end he opts out in a spectacular way that is for us who have seen the film to appreciate and for the rest to find out just by going.

The supporting performances are superb. Colin Blakely plays Smokey Pickles, a fellow writer who has not done as well as Charlie Bubbles. They have a great scene in a dining club where they plaster each other with food before going on a drinking spree.

Liza Minelli is Charlie's secretary, cum lover, and general assistant. She takes a look at Manchester because it is the former home of her father.

The best acting support comes from Billie Whitelaw, who plays Charlie's divorced wife Lottie. She never overdoes it but manages to establish a gentle balance between love for Charlie and disgust for what he has become.

I really enjoyed Charlie Bubbles and must recommend it highly. It really all goes to show what Lancashire people have known for ever—there's nowt so queer as folk—if it were not that way there would be no Charlie Bubbles and nothing to write about.

PAT O'NEILL Backstage

Aliee of Bastion Opener Grows to Crucible Star

Five years ago Bastion Theatre was born, with a production of Alice in Wonderland.

For little Alice is all grown up!

Alice, the blond-tressed, naive heroine of the Lewis Carroll story, was played by a schoolgirl named Wendy Packard.

* * *

When the company takes up the curtain Monday night on Arthur Miller's witchhunt tragedy The Crucible, Wendy will be there, but not as Alice.

She plays Abigail Williams, the sluttish schemer who sends hundreds to jail and many to the gallows to take revenge on the wife of the man with whom she has committed adultery.

From the role of servant girl, she goes to that of a "saint," sweeping the world clean of the devil's influence.

* * *

Abandoned cattle wander bellowing along the high road. Orphans go from house to house, and the stink of rotting crops sweeps the countryside.

The men who worked the land are in jail, condemned as wizards. The women are marked to hang for sending their spirits out to commit murder.

The play will be staged at McPherson Playhouse Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 8 p.m. for all-student audiences.

It will play just two nights, Friday and Saturday, for public audiences.

* * *

Because of the large volume of student tickets sold, Bastion officials are concerned too many may show up on any one night.

They are particularly worried about Thursday night, the last performance for all-student audiences, when some seats have been reserved for schools coming down from up-Island.

"If Victoria district students could plan to come Monday or Tuesday, wherever possible, it would be a big help to us," said Bastion official Helen Simpson-Baikie.

Helen, like Wendy Packard, is one of those with on-stage memories of the first show five years ago—she played the Red Queen in Alice in Wonderland.

Flies Triumph Off Sooke

Until I went fishing with Pedder Bay guide Gerry Gieskens I had considered the Sooke-Becher Bay-Pedder Bay waters a spot to fish with bait, but Gerry showed me that the fighting coho could be taken in those waters on a surface-trolled fly.

We have tried trolling flies on a number of occasions in these waters without success in other years and had just written those areas off for fly fishing.

Metallic Hair

But in the last couple of years fly fishing has changed. Polar bear hair has been in short supply. Fishing lure inventors have been experimenting with a metallic substitute, mylar, that glistens and flashes in the water. They use it by itself in the Myl-R flies and they use it in combination with polar bear in the Flashtails and Pol-R-flies. A combination of goat's hair and mylar is used in the Tyg-R flies.

Guide Gieskens believes it is the flash created by the metallic hair that has made the difference to bucktailing in Pedder Bay waters.

We hit coho last week on a blue and white Pol-R-Fly trolled on the surface without any weight, without any spinner, and about 60 feet behind the boat. We also hit them on a green and silver Myl-R-Fly with Radiant spinner and two ounces of weight and about 60 feet of line. A yellow and silver Tyg-R fly, on the surface behind a Radiant abalone spinner produced an 11-pound scrapper.

Persisted

All enthused about this fly fishing we went out Saturday and Sunday at Otter Point with our flies, speeded around the sport fishing fleet, and got skunked, and deflated.

It seemed everybody around us was landing fish. We persisted with our bucktails and later discovered the lucky anglers were picking the fish up on bait and one pound and 20 ounces of weight. When Brother Fred arrived to fish, we sent him out with the heavily-weighted lines and minnows and he returned after only an hour's fishing with two nice coho, one landed by nephew Leonard and the other by nephew Billy.

Feed on Surface

But when the coho were snapping at surface flies at Pedder Bay it really was fun.

The coho seem to hit the flies better further out in the Strait by Race Rocks, Gerry explained.

"They are travellers, and when they are on the move and feeding they feed on the surface," he said. "But, I wouldn't advise people in small boats to go outside the Race," he said. He guides from a comfortable cabin cruiser, which he uses as a year-round guide boat, comfortable in any weather.

"I follow the solunar periods (published daily on the sports pages of the Colonist) all the time," he said. "They sure work, but you have to be in an area where the fish are feeding. The trick is to find them," he says.

In Reverse

"I find that often when the fish are taking flies they won't take anything else," he says. "Rarely when I am taking them on fly do I get them on Strip, but it can also work in reverse," he explained.

He advises that after every strike the fly should be reeled in and the hair pulled off the hooks.

"The Pol-R fly is tops over any other fly I use," he says. "And the blue and white one outfishes all others five to one," he added.

He thinks it is the silver on them that attracts. He uses a fly as a bait behind a flasher, usually a Roy Smith flasher. He also uses them on the top like a bucktail and with a Radiant abalone spinner with two to six ounces of weight.

Same Speed

"Fish them at about the same speed as you would Super Strip Teaser. If you speed about like for regular bucktailing, they are not nearly as effective," he believes.

The main thing when fishing flies is to keep just behind the current. They must be in moving water, he says. Contrary to most fly fishermen who like the rippled water, Gerry likes to fish in smooth water.

At this time of year he likes fishing in the open water, out in the Strait beyond Race Rocks if the weather allows it, mainly because they hit the flies so well, he says.

"I also get away from other fishermen. In congested areas other anglers often follow the guide boat, making it hard to manoeuvre," he explains.

"Watch for jumpers," he advises. "When you see porpoises that is a good place to fish. Killer whales really shake the fish up and move them around. When the killer whales show you are nearly always good for two or three fish in the boat," he says.

He advises anglers to fish the riptides and when the big tides are running follow along the drift marked by debris. He says best fishing is in the side where the tide is rushing towards the main rip. The fish are nearly always on the outside, he says.

Variety

"Best producer of all is a planer with strip. It outfishes anything," he says. He uses strip without a flasher on his planer line because in heavy tides, he explains, a flasher will pull the planer and trip it. "Especially with Super Strip you don't need a flasher," he says.

He nearly always uses a flasher when he is using Flashtail "because they have no action of their own, but sometimes a Flashtail will take fish when trolled on the surface with no flasher."

On his planer line he uses Meat Master braided line, which he prefers over wire line because it doesn't kink, but he admits a wire line would get him greater depth.

He likes to use Super Strip Teasers, but often when fishing for big springs he will use regular strip because it trolls more slowly. He prefers the green Teaser heads.

Direct Route

Guide Gieskens has a good setup for using a planer. He has two barbless fish hooks at each end of the planer and he simply attaches it to swivels on the main line, and when he catches a fish he can easily take the planer off the main line and reel in the fish. He leaves a length of main line between the two swivels as a safety measure and uses a rubber shock absorber.

The coho seem to come into the Juan de Fuca Strait and zig-zag their way through, he says. "They don't seem to swim in a straight line on a direct route. Some days I get them close in and on others I get them far out."

He finds that often when a bite is just starting they hit lightly and he might lose four or five in a row. Then they really hit and he gets them all.

He finds William Head is a good spot to fish both springs and coho and recently it has been good for bucktailing for coho in the evenings.

Black Buoy

When the fish are migrating and milling about, Church Rock at the eastern entrance to Becher Bay is a good spot, he says. So is the black can buoy on the outside of Race Rocks.

Cudlip Point on the southeast corner of Bentinck Island is another good spot, especially for springs and another good spot for springs is around Rocky Point.

Hottest spot for springs he says is in front of Fossil Point on the Marina side of Pedder Bay, along the kelp bed on the outside and back to the arsenal on the inside (marina side) of Pedder Bay.

Hottest spot for coho is from the kelp beds to Rocky Point on the northeast corner of Bentinck Island, keeping a little distance out from shore.

Garden Notes

Lime Really Linden

By M. V. CHESNUT

LIME TREE (C.M., Duncan) — Your "lime" tree is actually a linden, and it has nothing whatever to do with the citrus fruit of the same name. The true lime tree is not hardy in our climate and the fruit is grown only in the West Indies, Florida and Southern California.

The botanical name of your tree is Tilia but it is commonly known as linden, lime or basswood; it is one of our finest shade trees. It is especially valued for street and avenue planting, and the famous Unter Den Linden in Berlin takes its name from its planting of these gracious trees. The inconspicuous blossoms are very fragrant and very attractive to bees.

* * *

UNDERWEAR FOR GREENHOUSE (A.W., Saanichton) — I can't say I am overly enthusiastic over the idea of giving your greenhouse a suit of winter underwear by lining the inside with polythene plastic film. This was quite a popular technique several years ago, and there is no doubt that the air trapped between the glass and the plastic provides excellent insulation, cutting winter heating costs considerably, but there are drawbacks.

For one thing, in our humid climate condensation becomes a major problem, with drops of water condensing on the plastic and dripping on the plants. The condensation, too, tends to "fog" the plastic, cutting down on the amount of light entering the greenhouse at a time when light is most needed.

* * *

MOSS ON TREES (E.A.H., Sooke) — The moss and lichens on your ancient apple trees are not harmful in themselves, but the growth provides useful cover for various pests. A good way to kill the moss is to spray the trees very thoroughly during the winter and before the leaf buds start to swell with a strong solution of any common household disinfectant of the phenol type — one with a carbolic smell, such as Creolin, Creocide, Lysol, Dettol, Jeyes Fluid, etc. Dilute at the rate of one part disinfectant to nine parts water.

Apply on a clear, calm day, treating the whole tree, not just the mossy portions, until it is dripping. Better wear goggles in case a sudden gust of wind should blow the corrosive spray back in your face.

This treatment is for use ONLY on deciduous trees, and at a time when they are fully dormant. I don't know of any practicable way to clear moss from evergreens.

LAVENDER PRUNING (J.E.McL., Cordova Bay) — Lavender plants should be sheared or trimmed back every year as soon as the blossoms fade. Old bushes may be cut back drastically in March, but when this is done, one year's flowers are sacrificed.

In general, when lavender bushes become old and leggy, it is better to uproot and discard them, replacing them with new, young specimens, for attempts to renovate them are seldom successful. Lavender prefers a situation in full sun and a somewhat gritty and hungry soil.

* * *

WATERING CACTI (F.W., Nanaimo) — It is simply not true that a cactus plant can go all winter without water. You might get away with it in a coldframe or an unheated greenhouse where the temperature is quite low, but at ordinary room temperatures they will need to be given a little water about every two weeks, but only just enough to keep them from shrivelling.

The Christmas cactus and the Orchid cactus are jungle dwellers in nature, not desert plants, and these will need almost as much water as any ordinary houseplant, although the soil should never be allowed to become waterlogged and sodden.

ART BUCHWALD Probes Secret Vote

Humphrey Role A Spoiler?

Despite all the polls that indicate Hubert Humphrey is doing very badly in the campaign, there is a belief in some circles he'll do much better in the election.

The explanation for this by some Democratic party experts is that there is a secret Humphrey vote which hasn't been showing up in the polls.

* * *

One Humphrey campaign manager told me, "No one wants to admit he is going to vote for Humphrey. It isn't socially acceptable and when a pollster comes to the door, he automatically says he's going to vote for either Nixon or Wallace. But on election day when he's in the booth and no one is looking, he'll probably pull the lever for Humphrey."

"How large do you think this secret Humphrey vote could be?"

"It will probably run into the millions. There are a lot of Americans who are unhappy with the choice of Wallace and Nixon, but they aren't speaking up in fear of losing their jobs or alienating their neighbors. No one wants to admit he's a Democrat, even if he's going to vote that way."

"But how do you know there's a secret Humphrey vote out there if the polls don't show it?"

"It's obvious. You never see a Humphrey bumper sticker, or anyone wearing a Humphrey button. People just don't want to declare themselves.

* * *

"That would be a switch," I said.

"It isn't that much of a switch. There are a lot of people in this country who are discontented and they feel a vote for Humphrey is their way of protesting against the system."

"But won't they be wasting their vote, if they go for the Democratic Party?"

"No, they won't. It will be their way of saying that they're sick and tired of Wallace and Nixon and somebody better listen to them. Besides, if this vote is as big as we think it is, Humphrey could force this thing into the House of Representatives and then they'd have to listen to him."

* * *

"Then you see Humphrey's role as that of a spoiler?"

"No, I don't. Humphrey is sincere about wanting to be president of the United States. When he started out in Chicago, he might have thought of himself then as a spoiler. But the more he campaigns, the more he realizes that this country is ripe for someone like himself to take over the White House. So he's in the race now to win. They laughed when Humphrey first announced he was getting into the race, but they aren't laughing any more."

"But if Humphrey got enough votes, wouldn't this be the end of the two-party system in this country?"

* * *

"It might be, but that isn't his concern. He feels it's about time the American people had a choice, and he doesn't see any difference between the policies of Wallace and Nixon."

"Then you feel that on Nov. 5 a secret Humphrey vote could change the results radically, and that we're going to discover that there are far more Democrats in this country than we've been led to believe?"

"I'm certain of it. Even in my own family, I haven't told my wife I'm going to vote for Humphrey, and she hasn't told me. We refuse to admit to each other that neither one of us is not a bigot."

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Gleason Comedy Shocks

HOLLYWOOD—Jackie Gleason's Skidoo film with Carol Channing is classified as a comedy. But when the Otto Preminger production was sneak previewed at the Tower East Theatre in New York, two male members of the audience passed out at the same moment—just after the LSD sequence. One man had an apoplectic fit. The other just fainted. Fortunately there was a doctor in the house, but the film had to be stopped until the men, one upstairs, the other down, were taken away by ambulance. Paramount is hoping the comedy will not affect other viewers in the same way.

Little Cathedral of Show Biz

Those Were Good Old Days

By STAN DELAPLANE

LOS ANGELES — Hollywood Boulevard was Dream Street in the Twenties. Thousands of people were crushed, smashed, fainted and revived proudly at premieres.

The boulevard was bypassed as movies grew out to Beverly Hills, and Sunset Boulevard became the big street.

* * *

You can walk into the courtyard of Grauman's Chinese. See the footprints in concrete of yesterday's stars. (The bosom imprint of a busty young "sweater girl" — and there's an echo of times before topless.)

"The Little Cathedral of the Industry," said Sid Grauman when it opened May 18, 1927.

When he opened the Chinese, he was a big man in the business. The Chinese opened with Cecil B. De Mille's King of Kings. For a decade thereafter, studios fought to get their pictures opened at the Oriental film palace.

A friend of mine who remembers those days said: "The Chinese theatre was an idea thought up by Grauman and Joe Schenck and Charlie Toberman. Charlie was the most enthusiastic.

* * *

"He kept on enlarging the plans — (meaning more money) — until Schenck and Grauman began to worry.

"They said: 'Charlie, why don't you go to China and do some research. Bring back the real dope.'

"So they put him on a slow boat for China — no planes then.

"Well, he researched temples and all kinds of things. And he came back with even bigger plans. But much later.

"So they said: 'Charlie, a terrible thing happened. You were gone so long, Charlie, we had to go ahead and build the theatre without you.'"

The entire staff was dressed as attendants to the Dowager Empress in the temple gong days of Peking.

* * *

One lady star sat in the concrete. Her posterior is there for all posterity. Those were the good old days.

When it opened, there was a staff of thirty usherettes dressed as Chinese sing song girls — that rocketed the blood pressure of the country.

Seats were $1.50 — unheard of extravagance.

* * *

Seats are $2.50 weekdays, $3.50 weekends these affluent days. The current run is The Legend of Lylah Clare, a movie about the good old days. And where could it run better?

Many Student Beefs Backed at Columbia

NEW YORK (UPI) — A blue-ribbon commission investigating last spring's disturbances at Columbia University said Saturday student protesters had many legitimate complaints and urged students be given a greater voice in policy-making.

At the same time, the commission criticized a small group of "hard-core" student revolutionaries for seeking to provoke violence, charged the faculty with "aloofness" from campus life and attacked the police for using excessive force.

FIVE MEMBERS

The five-member commission, headed by Archibald Cox, law professor and former U.S. solicitor-general, said Columbia's administration "too often conveyed an attitude of authoritarianism and invited distrust."

"We are convinced," the commission said, "that ways must be found, beginning now, by which students can meaningfully influence the education afforded them and other aspects of the university activities."

BY FACULTY

The commission was appointed by the faculty to investigate the causes of the disturbances. More than 700 students were arrested and hundreds injured when police raided the campus twice to remove students from buildings they had occupied.

FLAT REJECTION

The commission said it flatly rejected the view that ascribes the April and May disturbances primarily to a conspiracy of student "revolutionaries" who were members of the Students for a Democratic Society.

Instead, the report said, by its final days the Columbia revolt "enjoyed both wide and deep support among the students and junior faculty, and to lesser degree among the senior professors."

HARD CORE

But the panel said a hard-core group within SDS sought confrontations with the university and police and bore "part of the responsibility" for the resulting violence.

The report criticized the Columbia faculty for its "aloofness" to campus problems prior to the revolt and for some of the tactics advocated by faculty members during the protests.

FIRST RAID

The report says the police "may have used excessive force" in the first raid April 30. Of the second raid, on May 22, the report asserts that while there was some student provocation:

". . . the police engaged in acts of individual and group brutality for which a layman can see no justification unless it be that the way to restore order in a riot is to terrorize civilians."

Six Factories Ruined In $10,000,000 Fire

PALMER, Mass. (AP) — Fire erupted in a group of factory buildings early Saturday and roared out of control for several hours before firemen from 14 cities and towns could control it.

Fire chiefs estimated the loss at $10,000,000. Six brick factory buildings were destroyed.

Ammunition Explodes In Railroad Boxcar

Two Die at Miami

Planes Plunge Into Lot, Bay

MIAMI (UPI) — Two persons were killed and four others critically injured Saturday when two light planes collided in the air over southwest Miami. One plane plunged straight down with a wing shorn away and the other spun into South Biscayne Bay four miles away.

Two men died when the first plane plummeted into a vacant lot.

They were identified by police as student pilot William Gerliep, 35, of Miami Springs, and Richard Shear, 26, of Miami, a flight instructor.

Four persons, including three children, were plucked from the waters of the bay near the plush Kings Bay Yacht Club by a coast guard rescue boat.

In critical condition in hospital were pilot Theodore McAnly, 36, of Miami, and his three children, Teresa 12, Stephen 9, and Sharon 6. All suffered multiple fractures and severe internal injuries.

'SANK LIKE ROCK'

The Federal Aviation Administration began an immediate investigation into cause of the collision, which occurred over a residential section. An eyewitness who heard the plane hit the water said it "sank like a rock . . . only its tail stuck up."

Jim Guastella, 12, was playing football about 100 feet away from where the first plane fell.

"I heard a bomb, at least I thought it was a bomb. I looked up and saw one plane flying away. One, with its wing flying off, was coming straight down. At first, I thought it was going to hit me."

MPs Telling Biafran Story Today

OTTAWA (CP) — Two members of Parliament, who made a fast, secret trip into Biafra for a first-hand look at conditions in the Nigerian civil war returned to Ottawa Saturday.

Conservative David MacDonald and New Democratic Andrew Brewin flew out of the Nigerian region on a clandestine relief flight Friday to the island of Sao Tome. They returned to Canada via Amsterdam.

MacDonald, a United Church minister, and Brewin, a labor lawyer, started drafting a joint statement on their way home. They are expected to release it at a press conference today.

MacDonald said the trip had been "terribly useful."

Arts Centre Memorial To Victims

ATLANTA (UPI) — A $13,000,000 arts centre, the only major cultural complex in the U.S. housing all the visual and performing arts under one roof, was dedicated Saturday to the memory of 122 local art patrons killed in a 1962 plane crash.

They died near Paris as they were returning from a tour of European art centres and, as a memorial, the city of Paris loaned 61 pieces of its finest French art for the opening of the Atlanta Memorial Arts Centre.

The centre was financed completely by private funds and grew directly from a campaign started the day after the crash.

Deadly Glue Habit Confronts City With Sticky Legal Complications

By BILL THOMAS

That particular glue-sniffer told police his story in Los Angeles, but it could just as easily have been in any police department in Greater Victoria.

City police records show 114 reported cases of glue-sniffing between July, 1967, and September of this year. Surrounding municipalities also have their quota of glue-sniffers. In the city statistics, 80 were boys and rest girls between the ages of 13 and 16. There have been reports of much younger children trying the deadly game.

Serious Habit

A local psychiatrist who specializes in work with children said, "I have known even five-year-olds who got this habit. It can be very dangerous, depending on how long and on how frequently the sniffing goes on. Brain cells can be damaged and the damage can be permanent."

This doctor based his opinion on the most recent findings.

There are two nine-year-olds locally who have a serious nail polish remover-sniffing habit. They have been into a local store and traded sheets of stamps for the volatile liquid that provides their highs.

When the habit got started in southern California, there were 138 arrests in 1961. The Victoria figures alone show 114 cases in little more than a year. The habit spreads rapidly. By 1962, Los Angeles reported 522 arrests.

City Police Chief J. F. Gregory says, "It is not an offence, and nail polish remover is in almost every bathroom cabinet. It is a matter of education."

City police are conducting an extensive education program, and officers have taken part in 40 guidance class sessions over the past two weeks in local junior and senior high schools.

They admit freely it's a tough job. There is some evidence petty theft goes along with the sniffing habit. Those who can't afford glue or polish remover often help themselves.

Medical View

While medical opinions may differ on marijuana and its effects, there is little confusion about the glue habit: It is deadly.

Police and medical experts, for sake of convenience, call nail polish remover addicts and all other solvent sniffers "glue-sniffers" because of the similarity between the solvents that produce the "highs" and also because of the similarities in sniffing technique.

One of the most extensive studies into the health aspects of the habit was conducted by Dr. Jacob Sokol, chief physician of juvenile hall in Los Angeles County. Over a three-month period, he examined 71 young glue-sniffers.

Dr. Sokol found damage to the blood, kidneys, lungs, liver and nervous system. He was optimistic that proper treatment and cutting the habit would restore bodily functions. The California report found no evidence of brain damage, but stressed the need for more detailed laboratory study.

'Little Proof'

In a more recent study, a former medical health officer in Vancouver, Dr. J. L. Gayton, reported, "As yet, little proof exists of the long-term effects on body organ systems of the long continued practice of glue-sniffing.

"In my opinion, glue-sniffing is an anti-social, highly undesirable practice which may well contribute to delinquency and crime and other undesirable results. There will be a lowered level of general health while the practice is continued, there is a risk, the seriousness of which we cannot yet measure, that permanent damage to liver, kidney and blood-forming organs may be produced over a period of years by the practice."

Strange Effect

Glue-sniffing does strange things to youngsters. Dr. Albert Done, director of the poison control centre of Salt Lake County General Hospital in Utah, examined a group of sniffers aged from 14 to 18. His medical findings endorsed the general opinons of other doctors. His observations are frightening.

Glue-sniffing parties have resulted in vicious beatings. One teenage boy was attacked by his best friend with a broken bottle; another challenged four U.S. marines to a fight.

Freight Train

Dr. Done recorded the case of a 16-year-old who, after a glue-sniffing binge, "assumed a fighting stance on the railroad tracks in front of a freight train. Fortunately, an alert engineer was able to brake the train in time and the youth escaped with minor scratches.

"Several weeks later the youth again became intoxicated on glue fumes and repeated the episode with the train, and again escaped without injury. That he did not become a mortality statistic is almost incredible, and it can be anticipated that if this behavior pattern continues, he most certainly will become one."

Two Attempts

There have been two attempts to establish court precedent in glue-sniffing cases but both have failed. In one instance, a juvenile was charged under a section of the Criminal Code titled Sexual Immorality and Other Vices, but the case was dismissed.

In the other case a store owner who sold glue to youngsters was charged as contributing to juvenile delinquency. The appeal court ruled that, as glue-sniffing was not a delinquency, there could be no contribution.

Local police have had to rely on the co-operation of store owners. One local complaint was filed with city police by Ron Havard, executive director of the Victoria Boys' Club.

"We noted a local merchant who was displaying nail polish remover in bulk on his counter," said Mr. Havard. "The big problem is that this is not an offence in law. The law just can't help us. Even the police don't have a leg to stand on when they walk in. We are just looking at the problem to see what can be done."

But what can be done? The reports are inconclusive and vague. This is one instance where police departments seem to be taking the initiative in a positive direction.

They feel there is no point in altering the law to make glue-sniffing an offence.

The products are too readily available, and have a normal innocent use that puts them into most homes. Legislation would be too hard to enforce. The police see education of both children and parents as the answer, or at least an approach to the problem.

Same Report

The Vancouver study left the solution up in the air. It says the parents think the school should be responsible for counselling and education on the subject. School staffs see the problem as a "social behavioral concern."

The same report concludes, "Dealing with glue-sniffing in total isolation from the precipitating personal and environmental conditions will produce ineffectual results."

The Los Angeles study suggests education of both parents and children as the prime mode of attack on the problem, but differ from the Canadian opinion in that legislation against glue-sniffing is suggested.

All studies are unanimous in that the only answer is prevention, because there is no cure.

Victim on Knees

Pistol-Wielder Snatches Cash

By A. H. MURPHY

The small, neighborhood store, at 1871 Oak Bay Avenue on the south side of the street between Chamberlain and Davie, is owned by Kenneth Woo, 35, who lives with his wife and four children at the rear of the premises.

When the robbery occurred at about 8 p.m. Kenneth's father, Harry Woo, was alone in the store. Mrs. Woo and her children were in the living quarters.

TOO UPSET

Following the robbery Kenneth Woo told the story of the occurrence. He said that his father had talked to police but was too upset to speak to reporters.

About eight o'clock, said Kenneith Woo, a man entered the store. He looked around and selected a package of chocolate cookies which he brought over to the short counter section where the till is located.

The man said "Oh, I must have some, rice" and walked over to the edge of the counter to a wall section containing cartons.

As he put his hand into the bin he suddenly turned, pulled out a pistol and pointed it at Mr. Woo who was standing behind the counter and adjacent to the cash register.

"Get down on your knees," he said.

The exact sequence of events was rather confused, said Kenneth Woo. He told Mr. Woo, senior, to get up and open the till. This was done and the robber either snatched the money from the till or from the hands of Mr. Woo who had scooped it out on orders.

He estimated the total amount at about $100 in small bills and silver.

WIFE CAME IN

At that time, said Kenneth Woo, he believed that his wife came into the store along with one or more of the little children. She may have seen the robber. He added that she also was too upset to be interviewed.

The man ran out of the store and was reported to have headed east on Oak Bay Avenue.

Description of the intruder was sketchy. He was believed to be about 30 years old, dark complexioned and five feet, 10 inches tall.

PHONED HUSBAND

Mrs. Woo telephoned her husband who was busy in a new store he had opened Saturday in Lakeview Plaza on Quadra Street. He telephone the police.

Within minutes Victoria city police and Oak Bay police, sealed off the area. The district was spotted with patrol cars. Road blocks were set up and people who might have seen the man were questioned.

It was not known whether the robber was driving a car and the search of the area was not helped by Saturday night's heavy rain.

VANISH IN NIGHT

The armed robbery of small stores, often with Chinese proprietors, is an intermittent nuisance in Victoria and police are hard put to find the culprits who disappear into the night having been seen by only one or two people.

Kenneth Woo has been proprietor of John's Grocery for two years. Prior to that it was operated by his brother, Donald. He said that his was an old Victoria family.

Mr. Woo said the loss was covered by insurance.

Red Cross Clinics Set 400-Pint Goal

An objective of 400 pints of blood has been set for October blood donor clinics by A. T. Lashmar, supervisor of the Red Cross blood donor panel.

Clinics will be held as follows:

- Wednesday, 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.—Red Cross House.

Deadline Too Early

Pollution Foes Complain

Briefs on sewage disposal must be submitted to the Regional Board by Monday if they are to be read at a public forum Oct. 19 in the MacPherson Playhouse, officials announced Saturday.

"We should have been given more than two days notice," objected Mrs. Margaret Walters, spokesman for the Capital Region Conservation and Pollution Control Association.

"They must have known for a while that they would need the briefs by this date and should have let us know.

"The last I saw was a newspaper writeup which gave an Oct. 14 date.

BEFORE DEADLINE

"They should have published this date months ago. It is going to be very difficult for people without transportation because this will mean briefs will have to be delivered by hand.

"It will mean a special hardship for people who live and work out of town," she said.

Dr. R. G. McMinn, president of Enqual, said he will submit a brief before the deadline but it will be subject to correction. "I shan't be able to get in touch with my executive, and this applies to an organization that is interested in the question," he said.

I can understand that they probably want to circulate these briefs to panel members before the forum, but I can't see why they have to leave it until the last minute to give us a date."

CKDA 25,000 Watts

Station Power Up Soon

Radio Station CKDA will increase its power from 10,000 to 25,000 watts within the next few days, president and general manager David Armstrong announced Saturday.

* * *

The rise was approved about 1½ years ago by the Board of Broadcast Governors, now the Canadian Radio and Television Commission, Mr. Armstrong said.

New installations have been completed at the station's plant on Chatham Island and are being checked out by engineers. The plant has a capacity of 50,000 watts but only 25,000 will be used.

Community Stressed At Planning Parley

The national convention of the Community Planning Association of Canada will begin here Monday, using the theme of Building Human Values Into the Community.

Opening ceremonies Monday will include greetings from Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and from the chairman of the capital regional district, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis. Keynote speaker Monday will be Dr. D. M. Shrum, chancellor of Simon Fraser University.

Crash Flurry

Soggy streets caused a flurry of no-injury car accidents early Saturday night in Greater Victoria. City traffic officers attended more than a dozen from 4 p.m. until midnight. Saanich police had seven, Esquimalt two, Colwood RCMP two.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I have been married for seven years and we have no children. We have both been to several doctors and the reports are contradictory.

Two specialists told us we would probably never have a family because of my wife's underdeveloped female organs, but two other specialists said there is no medical reason for her childlessness.

My brother and his wife have two adopted children and they are a wonderful family. The next-door neighbors just adopted a baby girl and they seem to be in seventh heaven. She is 100 per cent against adoption because she says she isn't sure she could love someone else's child.

Please, Ann, print your views. You must receive many letters from people who have had some first-hand experience with this problem.—WANT TO BE A DAD.

Dear Want to: The following letter crossed my desk within five minutes of your letter. It is the perfect answer for your wife.

Makes Blood Boil

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for the woman who signed herself, "Va. of Va." — and all the rest like her. It makes my blood boil when I hear women say, "The tragedy of our lives is that we were never blessed with children."

Surely these people know there are thousands of homeless tykes waiting to be adopted. Every youngster needs love, affection and guidance, and there are a great many more homeless children in the world today than there are places for them.

I have yet to encounter a set of adoptive parents who didn't feel as warmly about their children as if they had given them life. In fact, parents who went out of their way to adopt youngsters often seem to love and appreciate them more.

I have decided that people who are unable to have families and do nothing but moan about the "tragedy" are too selfish to make the more. — ADOPTED AND PROUD.

Dear Proud: Strong words, but there's a lot of truth in them.

Emotional Allergy

Dear Ann Landers: Print my chief gripe and make a friend for life, will you please?

I have worked with the public for 20 years so I know how impatient, inconsiderate rude and downright nutty people can be. Since going to work as a telephone operator, however, I have developed an emotional allergy to pet names. I can tolerate vulgarity, but I loathe being catered to. When strangers call me Sweetie, Sugar, Hon and Dear, I get so mad I want to plug them out.

I know several operators who feel as I do. Will you do us all a favor and print this complaint?—DIAL O.

Dear O: Over the years I have received many letters from telephone operators, and the vast majority of them would prefer Sweetie, Sugar, Hon and Dear to the obscenity and profanity that sometimes sears their ears. Settle, Baby.

Confidential to Cold Feet, Warm Heart: This sounds pretty chummy to me, friend. Cool it. You're too young for such testing.

Family Wins Damages In Abortion Test Case

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mrs. Robert Stewart was five weeks pregnant when she contracted German measles in 1964.

Worried, because that disease in pregnancy sometimes results in malformed infants, she went to Long Island College Hospital in Brooklyn to inquire about an abortion.

Three doctors at the hospital conferred, then approved the therapeutic abortion on the grounds the child might suffer permanent brain damage and physical defects.

* * *

But when Mrs. Stewart, now 24, was wheeled into the hospital's operating room for the abortion, Dr. Robert Gordon, then chief of obstetrics, rescinded the order.

Gordon, a Roman Catholic, said, according to Mrs. Stewart, that the baby would be normal, and she should not seek an abortion at another hospital.

On Jan. 4, 1965, Rosalyn Stewart was born, totally deaf, partially blind, spastic and mentally retarded.

Friday night, after deliberating nearly 11 hours, an all-male jury awarded $100,000 to the child and $10,000 to her parents, in what was considered a landmark decision.

The award, given by a jury which included five Roman Catholics, was believed the first on its kind in the U.S.

"Statistics on abortion show Negroes don't get them," Norman Grutman, attorney for the Stewarts, said. The Stewarts are Negro and the decision "redeemed their faith in this country," he said.

It also proved a shock for Grutman and the parade of medical experts who testified in behalf of the Stewarts.

* * *

Dr. Robert Hall of Presbyterian Hospital, president of the Association for the Study of Abortion Laws, said, "Nobody expected it . . . it's never been done before."

Hall said only two other cases had come into court, and in both instances the parents lost.

New York state law permits abortions only "to preserve the life of the mother. "But Grutman said this phraseology allows various interpretations.

* * *

"I expect it will go to the Supreme Court of the United States," Grutman said. "And I think the court has reason to take jurisdiction because this issue is of transcendent national concern."

William Klein, executive director of Long Island College Hospital, said its policies on therapeutic abortions have not changed since 1965.

"They are in line with the state law as we understand it," he said. "I suspect this is a test case."

* * *

Klein said Gordon was now associated with St. Mary's Hospital.

The Stewarts have one other child. They have kept Rosalyn with them despite recommendation she be institutionalized.

Crash Excuse Most Unusual

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A judge dismissed traffic charges Friday against a nurse who said she turned her head when she saw "a clergyman chasing a blonde down a railroad track."

* * *

City Judge Beverly Bouche said, "that's the most unusual excuse I've ever heard out of hundreds of thousands.

"I guess I'd have turned around to look, too."

Mrs. Margaret Huff said it turned out Mrs. Richard Walker and her father, who is a minister, were both chasing some youths who had tossed rocks at cars. Mrs. Walker was ahead of her father and was the blonde Mrs. Huff saw — just before she slammed into another car.

Mother Loses To Son

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A jury has ordered a mother to pay her son $15,500 damages as a result of a traffic accident.

Paul May, 30, who lives with his parents, claimed in the $150,000 suit that he stopped for a stop sign in a station wagon and that his mother, driving a second station wagon, crashed into the rear of his vehicle.

May's lawyer claimed May suffered permanent brain damage.

Tanzania Bans Girl Pageants

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Tanzania has banned beauty contests on the grounds that they divert women from the tasks of building the country and self-reliance. The government already has spoken out against miniskirts, makeup and wigs.

Six Steps Too Many

They Never Realized

Tax Men Seek Good Citizens

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The U.S. Internal Revenue Service is out to make good citizens out of the ladies of the evenings — by having them pay taxes.

"We just want them to file their returns and pay their taxes like good citizens do," said Charles Kingman, acting district director.

Kingman said he has been checking up on prostitutes for about a week in what is believed to be the only project of its kind in the United States.

* * *

"We're not out to control vice — that's a police problem," he said.

"There is an old saying that the king's purse has no connection with the king's conscience."

About all his men have found out so far, he said, was that most of the girls did not know their income was taxable.

"All income, both legal and illegal, is taxable and must be reported," he said.

* * *

As far as the IRS is concerned, the prostitutes are just business women.

Kingman's chief of intelligence, C. L. Krause, said the girls "can, of course, deduct ordinary and necessary business expenses."

ERMA BOMBECK's Moving Discovery

Junk Is a Point of View

This is the last of three articles by Erma Bombeck on the business of moving.

The Good Lord was giving me an opportunity to be reborn again . . . to establish a virgin home with only the basic, no-nonsense necessities: a stove, a refrigerator, a washer, a few blankets, some crude eating utensils and a hair dryer. The rest would be labelled "junk" and given the toss.

* * *

"I don't think we have any choice," said my husband when I told him of the plan. "If we go on amassing all this stuff at our present rate, in ten years we'll have to go underground. Understand then, we're going to have to make some ruthless decisions. There will be no room for sloppy sentiment or whining about saving things for the future. If something is not being used, out it goes . . . and what do you think you're doing with my old report cards, Missy?"

"Did you prefer to burn them?"

"I prefer to keep them."

"I thought you said there was no room for sloppy sentiment."

"These are not sloppy sentiment. These represent phases of my growth and development."

* * *

"I wish I'd known that. I'd have saved my old belly bands and my training bras."

"You have no idea the differences between personal effects and junk."

"Sure," I said, "junk is something that you hit your shin on in the garage and that doesn't belong to you."

As I listened to him throughout the day, I discovered junk was a point of view.

Rusty reels, cracked fishing poles and little jars filled with stinking bait were labelled, Hobbies. Boxes of material scraps, quilting squares and balls of yarn were labelled, Goodwill.

Wood remnants, bits of pipe, used nails and bags of worn sand paper were labelled, Workshop. Kitchen gadgets, flower pots, cleaning equipment and old candles were labelled, Goodwill.

By way of comparison it took one man from Goodwill Industries five minutes to load four shopping bags of "junk" in his truck. It took two movers 12 hours to load and unload our "personal effects."

We were in the new house just a matter of hours when my husband said, "Are you sure this place came with a garage? I can't find it."

* * *

"We'll look for it in the morning," I said. "I'm going to bed. You know, we don't seem to have the storage I thought we'd have. Maybe we should start looking for a larger house."

My husband stacked the storm windows neatly at the foot of his bed and climbed in. "Shut up," he said softly.

Cut Decreed For Syrians

BEIRUT (UPI)—The Syrian interior and education ministers say youths must submit to haircuts to "preserve their manhood from effeminate appearance."

Youths with flowing hair will be detained 48 hours and given haircuts, according to reports from Damascus.

'Wouldn't I Love to Be Up There!'

Private Flying—Modern Adventure in the Sky

Pictures By Robin Clarke

Story By Wayne Thomas

Ever been trapped in the garden on a beautiful Sunday afternoon and felt like jumping at any chance to get out of work?

Overhead you hear the sound of a light plane, and moments later catch a glimpse of it. You think: "Boy, wouldn't I love to be up there right now!"

Or perhaps you're out at the airport, probably to see relations off — and you see the Cessnas and Pipers and whatchamacallits doing touch 'n go landings seemingly without end.

And you wonder what private flying is all about?

Booming Business

Aviation in Canada has accelerated to such a pace nowadays that booming is hardly the word — 30,000 pilots, 8,000 aircraft, carriers trebling revenues from $190,000,000 in 1957 to $543,000,000 in 1967, and manufacturing up to $700,000,000 last year.

As good a guideline as any to the health of this industry is aviation's little guy, the private pilot.

How does he start out, and why?

Just Bring Money

Cost for a private licence varies, but if you complete the course in the 35-hour minimum and qualify for the $100 government subsidy, it'll be less than $500.

Flying time logged is tax deductible.

Health plays a part, although eyesight isn't as important as you probably think. It should be, but there you are.

You Need Heart

No, what they're concerned about now is your Heart, with a big H. If you've had trouble with it, or if there's evidence of trouble in the family, you'll be mighty lucky to get past the "Say Ahhh" bit.

Suppose you toss it over, "Shall I, shan't I?" and you decide to take the big plunge and involve yourself. Well if you can't commit yourself fully mentally, forget it.

The thrill, when learning, comes from a sense of achievement — when you reach a stage of confidence and competence and yearn to tackle the next step.

Course Split

The private pilot's course is split into several sections, the first major one being when you leave your instructor on the ground and fly a couple of circuits of the airport with no one alongside to offer advice.

Nothing has changed since the days of the early aviators — going solo for the first time is something that is burned like a branding iron into the brain forever — it is still awe-inspiring.

Next comes practice and lots of it, check rides to correct the faults that invariably creep in, cross-country flights to build up the morale (or destroy it, depending on how successful they go) and a flight test for the licence.

Ground School

But if you think it's all practical, you couldn't be more mistaken. During the course — from three to 11 months if you want to qualify for the $100 subsidy — you have to have a minimum of 20 hours ground school.

This rule is waived for student pilots living where correspondence courses are the only method of studying.

About the most interesting thing I learned at ground school was the maxim True Virgins Make Dull Companions. Not meant to be in the least offensive, it's probably the best-known and useful saying encountered in cockpit navigation.

Five Words

It stands in order, for Track, Variation, Magnetic, Deviation and finally the end product Compass (the heading you steer).

I'll never forget the night Gorde Wicks, instructor extraordinaire, slipped that one into his navigation lesson.

The class froze and all eyes flashed to the two reasonably middle-aged women and three girls in their late teens in the class.

Visual Check Important

Popular Course

Small wonder his weekly ground school classes at Victoria Flying Services and Victoria Flying Club, on alternate nights, have the reputation of being the best in Western Canada.

The course, practical and theory, may seem involved and technical to the layman, but once you get started it all falls into place.

Anyhow, after returning from a flight over the Saanich Peninsula, or around the coast, or from over your house at a respectable altitude on a beautiful Sunday afternoon when most people are out mowing their lawns, you tend to want to try a little harder.

Flatspin Fumbles

Private pilots these days though are generally not the 50-hour aces they used to be. Those who don't play the game and conform are usually ostracized by the majority as being "flatspin fumbles," and many operators will refuse to take their money — the cost of accident insurance and repairs are not something to take lightly these days.

Tower Radios Order

Control tower radios pilot his orders—runway, wind direction, strength and where to join. Brief transmission takes less time than reading this.

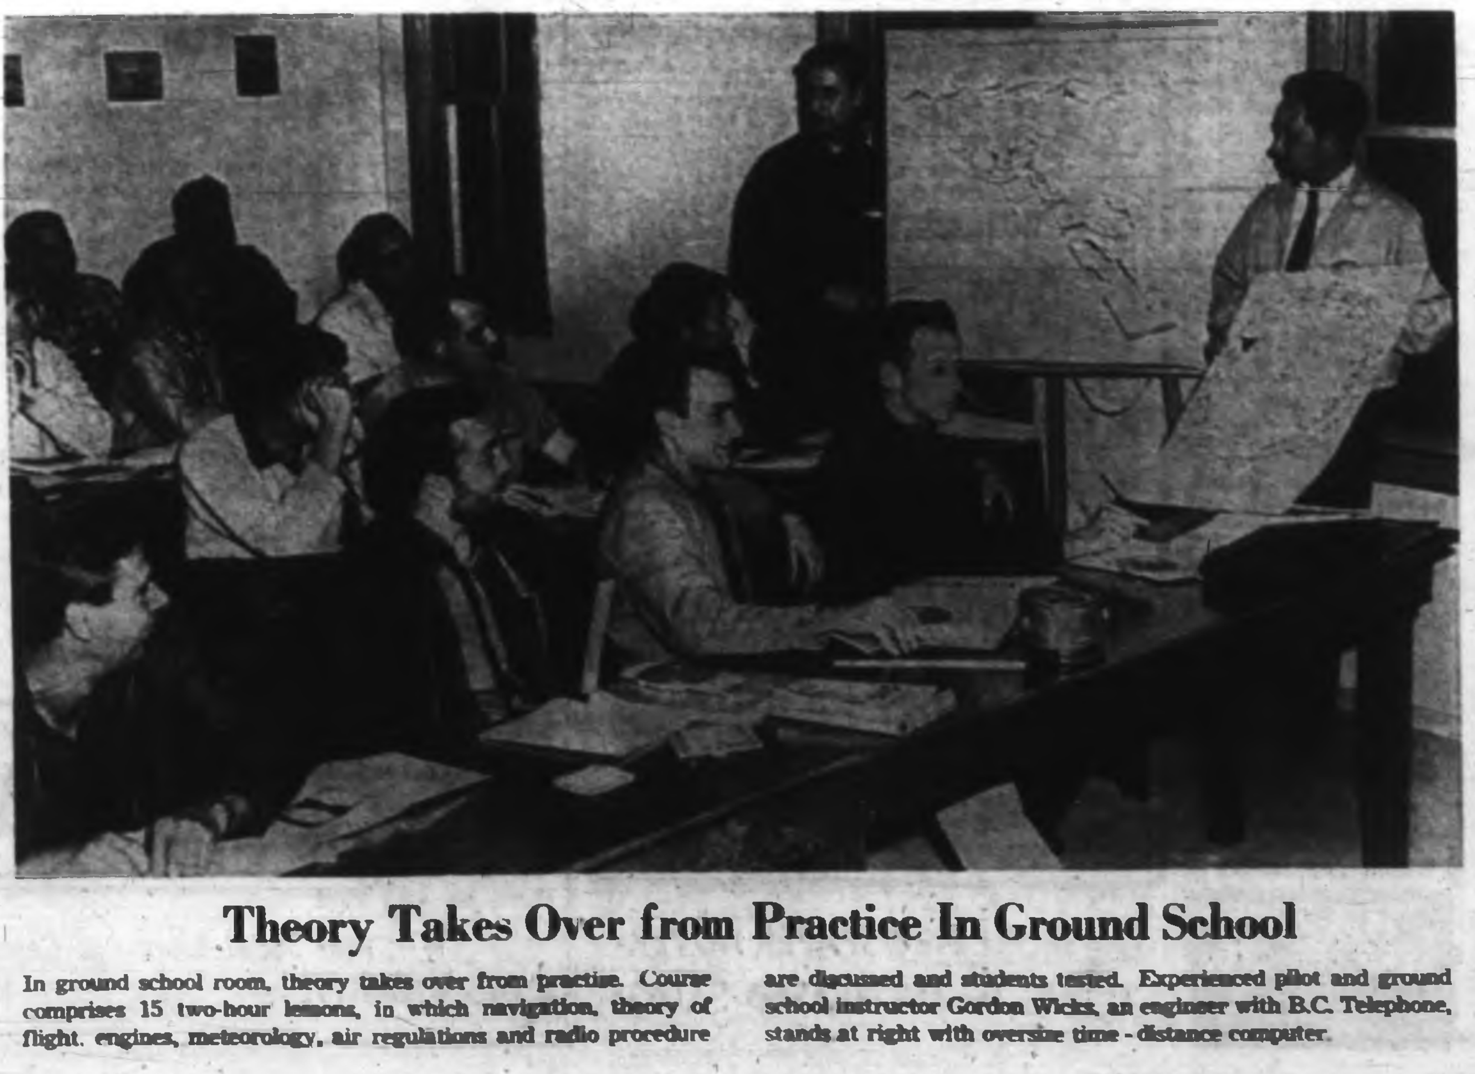
Pilots at Victoria vary from a class of Brentwood College boys working for their licences as part of an extra school course, to those two middle-aged ladies who decided to have a fling to keep themselves occupied.

Slow Start

Young men and ex-loggers planning to fly initially for $250 a month and a couple of cents a mile with a small outfit up the Coast or up North are enrolled on the commercial licence courses.

In between, the type of person varies from the professional man, to the businessman who finds it convenient not having to wait on schedules, and to the average-joe Sunday flier who just loves going up.

After the private licence, there are seaplane, night, multi-engine and aerobatic endorsements; the commercial licence and the more difficult instrument rating.



Theory Takes Over from Practice In Ground School

In ground school room, theory takes over from practise. Course comprises 15 two-hour lessons, in which navigation, theory of flight, engines, meteorology, air regulations and radio procedure are discussed and students tested. Experienced pilot and ground school instructor Gordon Wicks, an engineer with B.C. Telephone, stands at right with oversize time - distance computer.

Floatplanes

Victoria Flying Services owns four floatplanes, two of which are used for obtaining endorsements, while Victoria Flying Club has a Champion Citabria used for aerobatics.

Second World War-vintage Harvard trainers, 200-mile-an-hour aircraft which can perform unlimited manoeuvres, are also seen at the airport. Flying club manager Jack Ellard, who has 4,500 RCAF hours of instruction logged in Harvards and has performed in air shows, recently sold his to two club members.

Expensive, Too

Crown Assets Disposal Corp. has sold all the Harvards obtained from the military, and they will eventually become quite expensive to pick up. Burning 40 gallons an hour during aerobatics, they are also expensive to operate.

But they're the ultimate for most aerobatic enthusiasts in Canada, and if you ask nicely during the aerobatic course it's likely someone will take you up. It's unforgettable.

When you're running short of flying money but not time, there's always the airport scene for those who love aviation. Water bombers, armed services' jets and anti-submarine aircraft, visiting American planes from $2,000,000 corporate jets to open-cockpit biplanes, and the now-gone white Gaglardi Lear (always a pleaser) are a few examples.

Picture This

On a commercial flight back from Mexico . . . suddenly the stewardess rushes out and blurts, "The pilots are ill, they picked up dysentery in Tijuana, is there a pilot in the house!"

And you mumble something about, "Well, no, er not exactly, but I've always been interested." And up you go past the prostrate pilots to grope around for a seat among all those instruments,

Mighty Mouse

And an old cartoon flashes across the mind about how Mighty Mouse used to come from nowhere and put a hand under crippled airliners and ease them safely to earth. But, Mighty Mouse was canned years ago.

Then, and only then, is it permissible to think, "Fly? If God had wanted us to fly, He'd have . . ."

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

The understatment of fur-under-cloth . . .

Piece de resistance at Wilson's this week is a magnificent brown-beige-white heather tweed coat completely lined and collared with curly white kalgin lamb . . . a soft, silky fur that's sybaritic to the touch . . . luxury personified to the eye! . . . For the woman who doesn't look well in a fur coat . . . yet enjoys the warmth and comfort of fur when temperatures slide downwards . . . this coat has got to be the answer . . . It's a size 12 . . . and the price tag of $220 is not exorbitant, all things considered! . . . Another new Wilson coat that caught our fancy is a smartly styled model in camel-colored wool woven in a curly effect which looks a bit like lamb . . . though certainly it isn't meant to imitate anything from the animal kingdom . . . Big patch pockets with vertical openings, and a deep inverted back pleat trimmed with a row of buttons . . . sizes 10 and 12, and priced at $120 . . . At long last Wilson's have received a new shipment of printed Viyella shirts . . . on whose merits we need hardly elaborate . . . Tailored by Lady Hathaway, they have long sleeves and convertible necklines . . . and may be worn either as over-blouses or tuck-ins . . . Lovely designs and color blends . . . sized from 10 to 18, and tagged at $26.50 . . . comforting on chilly days, and practically everlasting . . . W & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Clothing prices in the East, we hear, are already up some 15% . . . Not in Victoria though . . . yet! . . . So a word to the wise . . . Shop now at the fine stores recommended in Doing the Town.

Drama goes to your head . . .

More stunning new hats have arrived at Miss Frith's . . . just emerging from their tissue, in fact, when we were in earlier this week . . . We said a loud hurrah for the feathered wig hats . . . sophisticated successors to spring's flower wigs . . . Gleaming feathers set on elastic chenille bases . . . which not only look absolutely smashing, but have the added virtue of covering your hair completely so if your hairdo's less than perfect, no matter! . . . One creation is made of multi-colored feathers . . . a real show-stopper . . . Another, for late day and evening wear, is a cap of black sequins with osprey feathers . . . dramatic as all get-out . . . Iridescent dark green coque feathers smooth around the crown and over to the side of another of these originals . . . and if you have a smooth, pretty forehead the coque feather wig with black velvet bow at the top, feathers swirling straight back to the nape . . . will frame your face most flatteringly . . . Not a wig, but a dream of a hat for a tall woman is the wide-brimmed black feathered chapeau . . . fine net flattening the crown feathers . . . split feathers circling the brim in a shaggy effect . . . These are all dressy hats to add definite eclat to this season's social scene . . . Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

A pretty new undercover story . . .

We're all for pretty underpinnings . . . firmly believe that bras and girdles should not only do the job they're intended for, i.e. moulding and controlling a gal's figure in places where it will do the most good . . . but also be a delight to the eye . . . even though nobody sees them but us! . . . Having said which, we hasten to tell you about the sweetly pretty new Jantzen sets of undercover garments which have just arrived at Saba's . . . There's a wee bikini brief, a long-leg panty girdle gussied up with ecru lace . . . a beautifully fitting little bra with fibrefill in the cups . . . and a short half-slip edged with same ecru lace . . . all these garments made of soft-to-the-touch nylon and/or lastex, printed all over in a misty design of butterflies in soft pastel shades . . . they are the daintiest under pinnings you ever saw! . . . Girdle has centre front seam for firmer tummy control . . . no prominent seams to show up under your knits . . . and is priced at $9 . . . Bra comes in sizes 32 to 36, A, B and C cups . . . $6.50 . . . the little bikini . . . just right to wear under the girdle, or by itself with slacks . . . is $2.50, while half-slip is tagged at $5 . . . The whole set is just adorable . . . but pieces are sold separately in case you don't want the whole works . . . Saba Bros. Limited, 1130 Douglas St., 384-6581.

Perennial sales rack with perpetual motion . . .

Gals who work in the downtown area are making it a growing practice to drop in to Madam and Eve almost daily during their lunch hour . . . if for no other reason than to keep an eye on M & E's "perennial" sale rack . . . to which Pam keeps adding new things all the time! . . . You'll usually find a little bit of everything . . . coats . . . suits . . . dresses . . . marked down to a song . . . to make your clothes budget stretch twice as far! . . . On our last visit we saw a terrific wool coat with fencer front and small ocelot collar . . . a size 13, and reduced from $140 to $75 . . . A couple of English coats . . blue, size 13 and Kelly green, size 9 . . . regularly $85 and marked down to a mere $40 . . . A gay suit for a color-loving gal who wears size 13 is tweed in an assorted candy mix of hues . . . the skirt box pleated all around . . . and just $59.95, instead of its original $85 . . . Need a new party dress for fall? . . . $25 will buy you either one of a couple of cute brocades shining with lurex threads . . . The size 15 is green and gold, while the 17 has a chinese-y pattern . . . Mind you, some of these things may well be gone by the time you read this . . . but cheer up, there'll always be more beautiful bargains at . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

A pink corduroy suit has a belted purple overblouse in the same material as the jacket lining.

Exquisite jewel boxes new at Reynolds

Any woman who delights in lovely things for her own personal use will appreciate the exquisite little filigreed bronze jewel boxes we spotted at Sydney Reynolds this week . . . There are various sizes and shapes . . . some just big enough to hold your precious rings when you're not wearing them . . . larger ones to be a fitting home for other jewelery . . . Boxes, as we said, are bronze, lidded with either hand painted miniatures on ivory of famous portraits like Madame Pompadour, Napoleon's lady friends, and other femme fatales of by-gone days . . . or with colored crystal "jewels" . . . They aren't cheap by any means . . in either price or appearance . . . They're extremely "good", and quite lovely! . . . We also noticed a number of new imported lamps in the Continental Room . . . very ornate gold candelabras . . . and a most unusual lamp consisting of high footed urn surrounded with artificial greenery and topped with lantern lamp . . . Real conversation piece! . . . Reynolds have received a new shipment of those delightful Vienna table fountains which we understand many people have been waiting for . . . so if you'd like one, better get it soon . . . these have a habit of disappearing quite rapidly! . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government St., 383-2821.

Montreal designer Suzy Reeves emphasizes the bosom in her new evening gowns . . . beautifully rounded and lavishly adorned with jewellery.

Pin-money holidays to Mexico or Hawaii . . .

Everything in the world these days seems to be getting more expensive . . . all except travel, that is . . . All-inclusive trips and tours are offering more and more for less and less . . . which suggests to us this is an excellent way to give yourself a holiday from the high cost of living! . . . Here's another travel "first" Paulin's told us about . . . On January 12, 1969, the first of six jet departures, direct from Vancouver to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico . . . with 14 nights at either the Rosita or Rio Hotels . . . all meals . . . transfers, and return jet fare . . . for a total cost of $299! Almost unbelievable, isn't it? . . . Puerto Vallarta, as you probably know, is the erstwhile Mexican fishing village near Guadalajara, which has become a popular . . . and so far unspoiled . . . resort . . . with superb climate, very picturesque surroundings and one of the most magnificent beaches in all of Old Mejico! . . . Since numbers are limited on each of the six flights starting in January, it's very necessary to make your application early . . . A Hawaiian holiday on a similar basis is also a first . . . Six departures starting Jan. 13 . . . Choice of three fine Waikiki hotels, air fare and transfers, (but no meals) for just $305 Can. . . . See Paulin's now . . . George Paulin Travel Service, 1006 Government St., 382-9168.

The V neck is all important; the scarfed throat is everywhere; sleeves are long and are very often the centre of interest.

Colonial maple is always "in" . . .

Styles of furniture come and go over the years . . . but colonial maple has never wavered in popularity . . . probably because it's so attractive, so functional and so completely "right" for people who like to surround themselves with a "homey" atmosphere . . . We went to have a look at Home Furniture's Colonial Room this week . . . a complete floor devoted to maple furniture . . . including the ever-popular Vilas maple . . . but with many other makes besides . . . and were quite amazed at the variety of maple pieces displayed . . . quite apart from the tables, chairs and other larger items of furniture you'd expect to find . . . Just to mention some of these . . . there's a corner whatnot . . . a 5-shelf square whatnot . . . portable mirrors with two drawers to put on top of a maple chest . . . dictionary stands, nests of tables, coffee tables, tea wagons . . . A world globe on a stand and another to stand on a table . . . muffin stands, lazy susans, ferneries, book shelves . . . a high narrow 7-drawer chest which takes up very little room . . . decorative and useful luggage racks . . . a dear little revolving book shelf . . . a few choice prints in most attractive maple frames . . . Home Furniture, 575 Fort St., 382-5128.

New Service Club Starts Here

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

Victoria has a brand new service club — Zonta International. The charter dinner was held Saturday evening in the Crystal ballroom at the Empress Hotel and it was quite the affair.

The refurbished ballroom, all gold and glitter, looked most festive — tables centred with gold and bronze chrysanthemums and toning candles. The flower arrangements were a gift from a charter member, Norma Fitzsimmons.

Before the dinner the new club president, Phoebe Noble, and her husband Jack gave a cocktail party.

Special guests were Hon. Isabel Dawson, MLA, Mayor and Mrs. Hugh Stephen, Mayor and Mrs. Hugh Curtis, Mayor and Mrs. Fred Hawes, Alderman and Mrs. Archie Galbraith and Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Gerry.

* * *

Miss Edna Nairn, International past president, was here from Toronto to present the charter to Mrs. Noble. Other Zonta out-of-towners were Miss Virginia Coleman, Governor of District 8, and her mother, Mrs. A Coleman, Miss Gertrude Wulfekoetter, Seattle; Molly Clasby, Lieutenant-Governor, District 8, Helena, Montana, Jo Taylor, president of the Helna Zonta, and Ethel Trenary, vice-president of the same club, Clara Nasholm, past governor, District 8, and Emily Ehlinger of Spokane.

The club's new gavel was a gift from Shirley Baker, a charter member now living in Africa.

* * *

If you are wondering what Zonta International is all about here it is: a service organization of executive women in business and the professions who, as leaders in their communities, have pledged themselves to:

- ● Organize and actively conduct projects which meet significant civic, educational or social welfare needs in the community.
- ● Endeavour by study and action to improve legal, political, economic and professional status of women.
- ● Work for the advancement of understanding, good will and peace through a world fellowship of executive women in business and the professions, united in the ideal of service.
- ● Foster the broad spirit of good fellowship among Zontians.

Delegates to the Community Planning Association of Canada are starting a four-day convention here today. That is the last time I'll spell it right out — it is CPAC after this.

Starting the social round today will be the luncheon given by John Di Castri, chairman of the Capital Regional Planning Board and wife Paddy for members of the national executive.

Wives of delegates will attend a coffee party Tuesday morning given by His Honor the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Nicholson at Government House.

* * *

A cruise in the Serena out in the Gulf Islands will take care of the afternoon. Wednesday morning the visitors will see Butcharts Gardens.

Women delegates attending the conference are Mrs. Janet L. Blench, Edmonton; Mrs. Edward Brook, East York, Ont., Mrs. Betty Callum, Regina, Sask., Mrs. Edna Cooper, Terrace, B.C.; Mrs. E. Dickey, and Mrs. G. Edwards, Revelstoke, B.C.; Mrs. Margaret A. Fullerton, Controller, London, Ont., Mrs. M. Gilchrist, North Okanagan; Miss Marjorie E. Hay, Winnipeg; Mrs. Jackie Hong, Regina; Mrs. Elizabeth M. Lord, St. Norbert, Man.; Mrs. Helen Manning, Vancouver; Miss Yvonne M. Morin, Edmonton; Miss Marie Pedley, Vancouver; Mrs. R. Pollock, North Okanagan; Miss Joan Retallack, Montreal; Mrs. Verna Robertson, Wetaskiwin, Alta.; Mrs. Hilda Symonds, Vancouver; Miss Eileen Turnbull, Comox; Miss Jill Wade, Vancouver; and Mrs. Alma Walker, York County, Ont.

Kay Cumberland has been doing all the arrangements for entertaining the wives and delegates. "It's been a bucket of fun but I'll be glad when it's over," she says.

And because of all this she completely forgot to tell us about the Art Gallery Picture Loan Monday at 7.30 p.m. at the Gallery.

* * *

This will be the second loan of the season and pictures will be on view Monday from 2.30 to 4 p.m.

The Gallery will be open Sunday between 2 and 5 p.m. for picture returns. The deadline for this is noon Monday.

Among the new pictures available for the October loan are works by Ethel Plants, Paul Bishop and Gordon Rice.

Mrs. G. R. Conquest is chairman of the Christmas Card Fund of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, and has to think of all kinds of ways and means to sell the cards.

So she broached the Student Council at Claremont senior high school. Jim Vining, president, David Kyle, vice-president, Betsy Fulton, secretary, and Verne Hardingham, treasurer, talked it over and came to the conclusion that they wouldn't be able to handle the job.

* * *

However, they told Mrs. Conquest that they would donate the proceeds of their next sock hop. It was held Friday and now the Cystic Fibration Research is $25 richer. Evelyn Turner convened the hop.

Fashions for Fall

Autumn leaves is timely title of fashion show being presented by Catholic Women's League from 8 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday in War Amputations of Canada Hall, 1610 Oak Bay Avenue. Show will feature new fall stylings by Ilse of Victoria and modelling one of her attractive gowns is Mrs. Josephine Patterson. —(William E. John)

English Pupils Turned Down

MONTREAL (CP)—The Montreal Catholic School Commission refused a request from the St. Leonard commission that it educate Grade 1 children "of Anglo-Saxon origin" in its English-speaking schools.

The Montreal board said St. Leonard had sufficient pupils to form an English-speaking Grade 1 class within its own city limits.

Founders' Day

Loyalty Pledge Revived

Founders' Day was observed by the Arbutus Toastmistress Club at its regular meeting Thursday in the Inn Mrs. A. M. Clarkson gave a brief talk on the early history of International Toastmistress Clubs Corporation which was founded 30 years ago by Ernestine White of California.

A candlelight ceremony was conducted by toastmistress for the evening, Mrs. G. L. Cook who called on members "to rededicate themselves to the loyalty, steadfastness and quality envisioned by the founders of Toastmistress.

* * *

Others taking part in the ceremony were Mrs. Mary Winstone, president; Mrs. A. D. Wilmot, newest member; Mrs. C. C. Warren, guest of honor, who had assisted in the formation of the Arbutus Club 14 years ago; Mrs. D. E. Pite, vice-president who led the members in the club's pledge which expresses the hope that better communications may help to achieve greater understanding throughout the world.

* * *

What Toastmistresses Can Do for Women was the subject of Mrs. Warren's talk. One of her main points was the "fulfillment of potential" and she suggested that the power of the hydrogen bomb was puny against the power of united women of the world.

She further pointed out that toastmistress was "of tremendous help" to a woman in business and would also appeal to those women who remained at home as no housewife could be bored doing research for and practising speeches.

* * *

Mrs. Clarkson as general evaluator awarded the spur to Mrs. Pite for her speech entitled The Warrior, and the Oscar to Mrs. Cook.

Mrs. G. H. Love was topic mistress and Mrs. L. R. Hammett, evaluator.

Barbra Prefers Look of Today

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD

Shopping was once Barbra Streisand's favorite sport, but now she can hardly find time. It's the price a girl has to pay for fame.

* * *

"There are so many things in my life now," says Barbra. "There's my husband. I'm a happily married woman. Don't believe anything you read about me. We're shopping for a bigger apartment so I can put everything away. I'm tired of stumbling over cartons of cranberry glass that I got in Southampton last summer. We had a house on the ocean.

"I have to look for a nursery school for my son," Barbra goes on. "He's 21 months old. He knows the alphabet already and can count to 20."

The other day she slipped out and made the rounds of one of her favorite haunts, the thrift shops on Second Avenue, where she used to find some marvellous clothes. It wasn't the same.

* * *

"They all recognize me now," she says. "When I ask for a better price, they want to know why I should ask for a price. I tried to explain that getting a better price is the whole fun of the thing, but they didn't seem to understand."

As a matter of principle, Barbra prefers ready-to-wear to couture. "I don't like fittings and I don't like things too matched. I like to look like a girl of today."

Her own new clothes are both ready-to-wear and custom order. At Henri Bendel, she just bought a pale grey calf-length coat, loaded with grey fox, one of the store's one-of-a-kind English imports. She'll wear it over both a midi dress in two shades of grey and short, short dresses like the '20s.

* * *

"I'm going back to silk stockings," she says. "I've been collecting them for years." She'll wear them with the Florentina shoes that have the big, heavy heels.

Barbra likes fur-trimmed cloth coats better than all-fur. "Fur coats always seem to me too bulky through the top."

At Maximilian, she has designed her own combination. Her coat will have a cloth yoke and sleeves, and the mink will start at the bosom line. The skirt will detach so she can have different color tops. The original is red, but she's planning others, including dark green velvet. Scaasi will do a little dress in the same velvet for her to wear under it.

Work Begins on Report

Women's Status Hearings End

OTTAWA (CP) — The royal commission on the status of women settles down now to preparing its report after a week of national hearings in Ottawa where Canada's labor policies and jails for women were main targets.

Commission Chairman Anne Francis, 53, said Friday night she expects to hand her report to the government sometime next year.

In the meantime the two men and five women commissioners will have to hammer out agreement on a flood of recommendations gathered during cross-country hearings that began in Victoria April 15.

* * *

The Ottawa hearings brought severe criticism of the federal labor department's women's bureau, responsible for administration of the female equal pay act.

Both the Canadian Labor Congress and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Canada's largest union, complained to the commission that the bureau is understaffed and inadequate for the tricky job of policing the legislation.

Stan Little, president of CUPE, termed the bureau a "sop to women," echoing Mrs. Jock Findlay, former director of the bureau, who during an interview early in the week said that as director she had been put in a "figurehead" position.

* * *

The women's bureau, which employed only a stenographer and a clerk, has been without a director since Mrs. Findlay resigned in February. But George Haythorne, deputy minister of labor, promised announcement of a new director next week and said the staff of the bureau will be increased.

* * *

The promises didn't satisfy the Canadian Labor Congress, whose president, Donald MacDonald, called for a fair employment commission to "forcibly and immediately" eliminate discrimination against women on the job.

He wanted a large staff of investigators attached to the proposed commission to police the equal pay act. And he wanted changes in the act that would make it difficult for employers to find loopholes for refusing to pay equal wages.

Labor also gave a going-over to its own policies toward women unionists during the week, after Little led the way with his acknowledgement that females are discriminated against in all sections of the labor movement.

* * *

Little pointed out that although 25 labor organizations in Canada have a majority of female members, their parent body, the CLC, has never had more than one woman on its 30-member executive council.

The CLC also got a scorching from its own vice-president, Huguette Plamondon, who told the commissioners "too often women workers are neglected when a labor agreement is negotiated.

"Organized labor has done the biggest job around to improve the lot of women but it is not doing the job it should be," she said.

Although the usual topics, of day-care centres, abortion, divorce, birth control and women in politics proved just as popular in Ottawa as they were across the country, special attention was directed to the plight of female offenders before the law.

Both the Canadian Corrections Association and the Ontario Elizabeth Fry Societies asked for removal from the Criminal Code of vagrancy sections which empower police to pick up and charge prostitutes or homeless persons found wandering.

* * *

The voluntary organizations asked for greater use of probation and treatment in place of jail sentences for women offenders, most of whose crimes were the self-destructive type such as alcoholism and drug addition and not violently harmful to society.

In a strongly worded 56-page brief, the corrections association said police should stop giving an arrested woman "the impression she is no longer a woman."

A Lovelier You

Brightening Room Needn't Be Costly

By MARY SUE MILLER

A student writes: Thank you for helping me plan a budget wardrobe for my first year in college. It worked out well. With only a few dollars to spare, what shortcuts will make my room in the dorm attractive?

The answer: In most dormitory rooms there's a daybed, desk, chest of drawers, and a chair or two. That's about all.

An occupant's first needs are curtains and a bedspread. Paper draperies fire-proofed of course, and colorful and inexpensive. A king-size terry towel in a dark solid shade makes a smart spread with easy upkeep. Both items can be worked into a color scheme —a navy terry towel for instance, and curtains in a splashy pattern of bright blues and green.

The dime store is a good source of such accessories as lampshades, toss pillows and scatter rugs. In lampshade, scatter rugs. In lampshades, white looks cheery and is a sight-saver. Bright corduroys are attractive on pillows. An effective scatter rug needs to be fluffy, richly colored and washable.

To ease storage problems, use a dustproof paperboard case that fits under the bed. To light a dark closet or nook, there' a battery powered lamp that tapes to the wall.

Two Cal 25s work up to friendly race in Oak Bay

—Erith Smith

Some Like It Wet

Sailing Class Gets That Racy Feeling

By ERITH SMITH

It was one of those rarish, beautiful September days, sunny and warm with a breeze, and the shore roads and highways were crowded with Sunday drivers, bumper to bumper.

Not for us. We had the wide reaches off Oak Bay with the same sun and warmth, and the same breeze to send us scudding along with only an occasional passing powerboat or fishboat to disturb the quiet.

* * *

As you've no doubt gathered, sailing lessons have begun again, and this time instructor Tony Burton from Oak Bay Yachts has a class of four of us taking the intermediate course.

In Art, Malcolm and Paul he has three dedicated sailors with a good grasp of what they're doing. I try to keep out of trouble.

* * *

On this course, Tony tells us, we learn about yacht racing, although as a class we take part in no actual races. We had our first real "feel" of racing the first day out, when we raised the big spinnaker on Tony's Haide-class Raven.

Anyone who has watched sailing races—and in particular the start of this year's Swiftsure race—will have seen the spinnakers put to work. They're the huge, colorful sails raised at the front of the boat, that billow out like a half-balloon.

They are used to increase the drawing power of a lightish breeze, but not in a heavy wind. They'd catch too much.

Origin of the name "spinnaker" is itself interesting, as recounted in our textbook, Royce's Sailing Illustrated.

* * *

Back in 1866 a yacht named the Sphinx broke out a big triangular sail for running. Because of its size it was called "Sphinx's Acre"—and the name has been modified over the years to spinnaker.

Raising the spinnaker involves much more than just tying a halyard to its head and hauling away, as we discovered. To begin with there are five ropes (you should excuse the expression) and the spinnaker pole. This is a shortish boom which secures the windward side of the spinnaker to the mast.

* * *

The five lines are the halyard, for raising the sail; the sheet, to control the free side of the sail; the after guy, liking the pole-end side of the sail to the boat's stern; the topping life to raise the spinnaker pole, and the downhaul to steady the pole.

Confused? I was—and am nowhere near clear yet.

The big sail itself lives in a plastic bucket which, when the spinnaker is to be used, is secured in the boat's pulpit—that rounded metal brace at the bow. It is packed almost as carefully as a parachute, so the head and two corners may be secured quickly to halyard, sheet and pole for swift raising.

When drawing, the man on the sheet (and the skipper) must keep an eye on the windward edge of the spinnaker to prevent any spilling of wind. A quick tug, then easing of the sheet will make the correction, but attention must be 100 per cent.

* * *

It grows plainer every day why a vetern sailor told us, "No matter how long you've sailed, you learn something every time out."

Excuse me now, please. I've homework to do.

Trudeau Faces Tougher Opponent

Tenacious Stanfield Bores In

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, like current cabinet ministers, has been largely overshadowed by Prime Minister Trudeau.

But Mr. Stanfield is beginning to make his mark in the Commons despite the presence, two seats away, of former prime minister John Diefenbaker.

The Conservative leader has shown tenacity and persistence in tackling the government on major issues.

* * *

He does not hold in awe Mr. Trudeau's reputation and will not be put off by replies which he considers inadequate.

In short, he keeps boring in.

Day after day, for instance, he has questioned the government on why it cannot provide more relief for Biafra.

The Conservatives claim that they have so damaged External Affairs Minister Sharp's political reputation on this issue that they now can pick another target on the treasury benches.

Mr. Stanfield has been much tougher on Mr. Trudeau than he ever was on former prime minister Pearson.

At that time, he was finding his own way in the Commons and was content as a rule to accept a reply from Mr. Pearson without putting follow-up questions.

* * *

Not so with Mr. Trudeau. As a result, Mr. Stanfield and his followers appear to be gaining confidence—which has been a tall order in itself after their shattering electoral defeat in June.

Mr. Stanfield has shown that he is also prepared to leap into debates without a lot of laborious preparation and speech-reading.

The other day, he was suddenly informed in his office that a private member's resolution dealing with guaranteed annual income was being discussed.

He grabbed a few notes and rushed down to the Commons to make an extemporaneous speech on poverty.

Mr. Stanfield is also acting as his own researcher.

Next weekend he will go to Vancouver to make a personal survey of the proposed Roberts Bank port and the problems attending it.

Neon Group Eyes Wax Works

By KING LEE

From an up-tight, image-conscious manager to an up-tight, glare-conscious drummer, the Neon Lighted People have just got to be five up-tight fine musicians.

The group members tune their amps up to such a critical point that even if they twitch the wrong way they feed back.

Alternating with the Motifs as the house band at the swinging Purple Onion, the Neon Lighted People packed them in and gave them something to make a noise about.

Gary Lindsey, lead guitar, Bob "Yogi" Lee, drums, Pat Zacharias, bass, Wilf Davies, organ, and singer Rick Lane have the cleanest and sharpest sound of any local group I have yet heard. This cleanness and sharpness may be attributable to mike technique, placement of microphones and amplifiers, excellent equipment or house acoustics. One rather thinks it is a combination of all.

When the musicians join Lane in harmony their combined voices come through so clearly there seems to be sound separation no matter where you sit.

Lindsey has a great deal of ability in his lead guitar role. The closest thing that I have heard comparable to his ability dates back to the summer of 1967, when a group called the Blues by Five had a lead guitarist who was far and above the best around, musically.

Lindsey and Lee stand out in the group, but they don't sell the other three short. They're better than average as well.

The Neon Lighted People are aiming for wax, and their stage presentation and music reflect this high ambition. Lane has great rapport with the audience and will help the group in its quest with his singing. Not bad for just a two-month member.

They prove that they are up-tight, up-to-date as well, doing superb renditions of such current hits as You Keep Me Hangin' On, Fudge-style. Fire, about as close as anyone can get to Arthur Brown, and apparently have Hey Jude and Revolution just about ready to go.

If it's originality you're wondering about, they show they have this as well with their own composition, Neon Lighted People, from which they took their name.

Up-tight, out-of-sight, that's the only way you can describe the Neon Lighted People. They have proven they can produce the music. Now let's see if the up-tight, image-conscious manager can produce the wax.

Hit singles: In Britain, an 18-year-old girl has topped the Beatles' Hey Jude-Revolution single from the number one spot with her Those Were the Days. She's Welsh-born Mary Hopkins, and what's more amazing, she was discovered by Paul McCartney and Twiggy. Naturally, she was signed to the Beatles' own label, Apple.

Shame, Shame by the Magic Lantern is a Seattle hit and shows signs of moving north. Magic Carpet Ride, Steppenwolf's new single is following the pattern of his Born to Be Wild. Fats Domino, who enjoyed success with Lady Madonna, grabs from the same bag to pull out Lovely Rita.

Local best-selling singles are All Along the Watchtower by Jimi Hendrix, Hold Me Tight by Johnny Nash and Lalena by Donovan.

Elenore marks the return to the top selling lists of the Turtles. Coming up fast are White Room by the Cream, Take Me For a Little While by Vanilla Fudge, I'm In a Different World by the Four Tops, Cinderella Sunshine by Paul Revere and The Raiders, On My Way Home by Buffalo Springfield and Ride My See-Saw by the Moody Blues.

Hit LPs: Well-look-who's-put-out-an-album department. Detroit Tiger pitcher Denny McLain, who won 31 games this season in leading his team to the American League pennant, has an album out entitled Denny McLain at the Organ.

Magic Bus by the Who and Steppenwolf the Second are being asked for the most by record buyers. Young-Holt Unlimited have a new album out which sounds good, Funky But!

The Mamas and The Papas Golden Era, Vol. 2, is a must for their fans. Watch for a great new album coming featuring Bobbie Gentry and Glen Campbell dueting, called Bobbie Gentry and Glen Campbell.

Zippies

No Protest From Them

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—Cities have their hippies and yippies, and the city of Columbus has its answer to these groups—the "zippys."

The West High school band, 140 members strong, Saturday morning took the oath of a Zippy — a new youth group Zealous in Promoting Patriotic Youth. The oath was administered by William O'Neill, a justice of the state's supreme court and a former governor.

The Zippys are not protesting, they're advocating. They are for education, good government, hair cuts, bathing, discipline, parents, teachers, religion and love of God and country.

The movement began when band members compared the strict military precision discipline under which they operate with the careless and irresponsible attitudes of some young people who receive publicity because they protest.

The band will go to Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1 to march in the Rose Bowl parade. It will be Ohio's only representative in the parade.

Teenager

By KITTE TURMELL

One complaint some teenagers make is that they have nothing interesting to do. The gang is suddenly tired of going to the same places — doing the old things. Everyone wants a change of pace.

Have you ever considered raising funds for some worthy charity such as the United Appeal, the Heart Association, or for your church or school? Here is an exciting, rewarding change of pace that is badly needed in today's world.

This is a report from Cherri Sheridan of Upper Darby, Pa.: "Our Christian Endeavor Society just finished a fund-raising project so we could send two delegates to the state convention, and we had a ball. I would recommend fund-raising for a worthy cause to any group of teens."

Cherri's group held a Roaring Twenties Harvest Dance which is a lively project and ties in with the Halloween season. Sell tickets at $1.25 per person or $2 per couple and if you have 100 people attending you can clear more than $75. Use your wits on planning to guarantee everyone will have a wonderful time.

The ideal place to hold such a dance is in a basement rec room or a large, clean garage. Fashion decorations out of crepe paper festoons and strings of party lanterns. Set up a coke bar at one end of the room and sell soft drinks as an additional money maker. Put up card tables and chairs around the room for the dancers to sit at, and cover the tables with red-checked plastic material you can buy by the yard.

Use records for music and be sure to have a few albums of Roaring Twenties music to provide an authentic touch. Use these albums especially for dance contests such as the Charleston, and the Blackbottom, and award prizes to the best dancers. Also invite the dancers to come in Roaring Twenties costumes and award prizes for the best dressed and the most original costumes. Records make fine prizes.

Before midnight set out bowls of potato chips and platters of cold cuts with bread and rolls plus all the makings for sandwiches.

Halloween Happening

For the traditional pre-Halloween happening, make it a masquerade party. Give prizes select paperback books weird, and imaginative costumes, after a parade: For prizes select paper-back books — the spookies — the Gothic tales.

Charge a modest sum for admission. Charge a dime each for games that can include: pitching darts to hit the grinning mouth of the jack-o-lantern pumpkin. Guess how many pennies are in a small glass jar. (Give the full jar as the reward.)

Bring on the apple-bobbing with apples floating in a tub.

At Halloween or any time you can stage fun and fund-raising projects, that you enjoy, too!

Here are some other projects that are fun to organize and carry out, in season or year-round: washing cars, box lunches — picnic style, indoors or outdoors, at set prices or at auction.

When planning any sort of fund-raising affair, however, keep these six tips for teens in mind:

- ● Be sure the project is suitable for the age group you want as customers.
- ● Divide the work. Set up committees headed by chairmen. Have one committee in charge of getting supplies, another for decorations, another to clean up during and after event.
- ● Every member of the group must sell tickets. Have weekly reports on ticket sales so you know how the sales are going.
- ● Don't try to do things on too large a scale. You can get in big trouble if you do.
- ● Have chaperones. You can get into deep trouble with parents if you don't.
- ● Keep track of all expenses. Know where you stand on costs at all times.

Statistics Show Wedding Crisis

Dear Kitte: Can you give us some statistics for our club study on marriage? — Jean.

Dear Jean: Quoting Dr. Alfred Auerback, a psychiatrist at the University of California's Medical Centre at San Francisco:

"At the present time, over 40 per cent of our marriages are between teenagers. In about half of these the girl is pregnant at the time of the marriage ceremony. Between 50 and 75 per cent of these marriages will break up within a few years."

Dear Kitte: I've liked this boy I'll call A since last year. He knows that I like him and so do some of his friends. One of the other boys, I'll call him B, told a boy in my class that I liked A and I didn't know it.

Now A, the boy I liked, doesn't say "Hi" to me unless I say "Hi" to him first. B has been watching me in class and smiling and knows I don't know which one of the two to pick. I don't know what to say to either of them. Please help. — Mixed-Up.

Dear Mixed-Up: Whenever you get a chance to talk to either one of them say whatever pops into your mind about what's going on around you — in class, in assembly, in sports, in clubs, etc.

Be friendly to both and others. Don't overdirect your attention to A—B—or any boy until he shows special interest in you.

☐

Dear Kitte: My relative, a young aunt, is an alcoholic and I think a mental case. Where can she get help—she doesn't have much money?—Missy.

Dear Missy: Urge her to apply, for care, to her doctor or through a family social service worker or mental health agency in your community.

☐

Dear Kitte: I am having trouble with my girl friend. I love her very much and she likes me a little bit. I'm crazy over the girl and have tried to tell her that I love her in many ways and I have had little response. I am kind of shy and when I try to tell her out in the open I seem to black out. If you have any advice I would be glad to try anything you say. — Troubled Boy.

Dear Troubled Boy: Keep telling her how much you admire her. Assume she's listening well and appreciates your admiration.

Weddings

Fairweather — Mitchell

For the next two years, London, England, will be the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael John Fairweather, who were married in Rossland on August 24, 1968, when Reverend A. K. MacIntyre officiated at the double ring ceremony in Sacred Heart Church. The bride, Dorothy Janet, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Duncan Mitchell, was given in marriage by her father. The groom is the son of Lieutenant-Commander B. W. Fairweather and Mrs. Fairweather of Victoria. Processional was Purcell's Voluntary; recessional was the Bridal Chorus; "Panis Angelicus" and Schubert's "Ave Maria" were sung during signing of the register.

Charmingly simple in design, the bride's short-sleeved gown was of white georgette falling in soft folds from a yoke of heavy Guipure lace over a sheath of peau d'elegance. The daisy design of the lace was repeated in appliqued form down the front and along the edge of the gown. Her full-length tulle veil was held by a [illegible]. She carried a bouquet of white daisies, yellow roses and stephanotis. Bridal attendants were Mrs. Robert Ronald, Mrs. Christopher Mitchell, and Miss Beverley Coleman. Their dresses of orange ice Fortrel crepe had elbow-length sleeves and deep inverted pleats at the back. Their short veils were centred with matching crepe roses; their bouquets were white and yellow daisies.

Best man was Mr. Wayne MacDonald; ushers were Messrs. Philip Sunderland and Edward Bamre. Relatives and friends came from Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle, Ottawa, Boston, Kitimat and Kimberley.

For travelling, the bride chose a printed [illegible] topped by a russet wool coat and tam, with dark brown accessories and a corsage of yellow and rust baby mums.

Later, a reception was held by the parents of the groom at their home in Victoria in honor of their son and his bride. The couple visited friends in Vancouver, Toronto, Guelph, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and Boston en route, before leaving from New York by plane.

Atkins — Ferguson

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on September 21, 1968, at 7:30 p.m. in Esquimalt United Church when Diana Lee, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Ferguson, 3478 Maplewood Road, exchanged vows with Mr. Brent Curtis Atkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Atkins of North Vancouver. Reverend N. R. Ebey officiated.

During the signing of the register Mr. Stan Martin sang "Because," accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Ruth Winslow.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length sheath of ivory satin featuring a deep border of Alencon lace at the hemline. Matching lace also outlined the portrait neckline and three-quarter sleeves. A full train swept back from a bridal bow at the waist. A four-tiered silk illusion veil starred with pearls misted from a floral headpiece. Her cascading bouquet was golden wave roses and variegated ivy.

Matron of honor Mrs. Andrew Bellagente, attendants Mrs. Lorna Anthony and Miss Dale Ferguson and junior bridesmaid Miss Barbara Ferguson wore identical floor-length gowns of soft gold corded faille featuring back panels, empire waistlines and short sleeves trimmed with lace daisy appliques. Headpieces were daisy appliques and tulle in matching gold tone. Their cascading bouquets were bronze chrysanthemums. Mr. Barry Atkins was best man for his brother and ushers were Messrs. Don McNeill and Garry Bellagente.

A reception followed at Holyrood House. Mr. Robert Mason proposed the toast to the bride. Leaving on a honeymoon to Banff, Mrs. Atkins wore a three-piece soft wool green and blue tweed suit with black patent accessories and gardenia corsage. Upon their return the newlyweds will reside in Port Alberni.

Jones — Martindale

A lovely double-ring ceremony took place on September 14, 1968, at 8 p.m. in Metropolitan United Church, when Reverend Laura Butler united in marriage Beverley Mae, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Martindale, and Mr. Lawrence Richard Jones, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Jones. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a floor-length gown of peau d'elegance, featuring train and belled sleeves trimmed with lace. The four-tiered scalloped veil fell from a white petalled and seed pearl headpiece. She carried her mother's white Bible topped with a white orchid and stephanotis.

The bride was attended by Miss Trudy Richardson and Miss Bronwyn Taylor. They wore floor-length gowns of turquoise peau de'elegance and headpieces with scalloped veils styled the same as the bride's. They carried colonial bouquets of white shasta mums with ribbon en tulle.

Best man was Mr. Terry Boorman. Messrs. Douglas Jones, brother of the groom, and Lawrence Smith ushered the guests.

Yellow mums and white asters in white baskets decorated the church. Soloist Miss Pamela May sang the "Wedding Prayer."

A reception was held at the "Inn," where Mr. W. R. Wardell proposed the toast to the bride. The bride's table was centred with a four-tiered wedding cake, on either side of which were pink tapers, pink and white mums and heather for decoration. Mrs. L. Smith had charge of the guest book.

For her going-away outfit to Banff and the United States, the bride wore a three-piece emerald green suit which she made herself, accessorized with navy. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are now making their home in Powell River.

Jubb — Zuck

Christ Church Cathedral was the setting of a lovely wedding on August 31, 1968, when Dean Whitlow united in marriage Vivian Zuck, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Zuck, of Victoria, and Mr. Joseph Jubb, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Jubb, of Victoria.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a classic gown of altar crepe accented at sleeves and empire bodice with appliqued lace. Matching lace bordered the full-length train which fell from the waist in soft folds. Her veil of silk illusion tulle was caught by a double crepe bow. She carried a cascade of yellow roses, stephanotis and baby's breath. Her only jewelry was a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. The maid of honor, Miss Carol Fuller, and the bridesmaids, Miss Sylvia Jubb, and Miss Doreen Jubb, sisters of the groom, wore identical floor-length gowns of turquoise peau d'elegance, with matching headpieces, and carried cascade bouquets of turquoise-tinted carnations.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Peter Jubb, and guests were ushered by Mr. Tim Shapcotte of Kamloops and Mr. Earl Cunningham of Port Coquitlam. A guard of honor was formed as the couple left the Cathedral by the 7th Victoria Guide Company, of which the bride was a Lieutenant.

A reception was held at the Red Lion Inn where Mr. R. Zebnik proposed the toast to the bride. Telegrams of good wishes were received from Toronto, Belleville, Saskatoon and Edmonton. For going away, the bride chose a coral walking suit complemented with pale pink and black accessories. After a honeymoon trip through the States and to Portland, the couple are now residing in Kamloops, B.C.

Garman — Allan

The marriage of Patricia Margaret Allan and Mr. Roger John Garman took place in Fairfield United Church on August 31, 1968, at 7:30 p.m. Dr. H. W. Kerley officiated at the double-ring ceremony. The radiant bride wore a floor-length sheath of peau d'elegance with an overcoat of Chantilly lace. Her chapel veil was held by a headpiece of leaves and forget-me-nots and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white heather.

The bride was attended by Miss Linda Herold, who wore a floor-length pink sheath and carried a bouquet of pink carnations and white heather.

Mr. Graham Garman, brother of the groom, was best man, and ushers were Messrs. David Wellings and Wallace McGill. After the ceremony the reception was held in the church hall. Mr. George Geddes proposed the toast to the bride.

For going away the bride wore a yellow linen dress with black and white accessories and a gardenia corsage. Following a honeymoon trip to San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Garman are residing in Victoria.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Cresswell, Miss Dorothy Cresswell, Crofthorn's Landing; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kendall and family, Haney; Miss Ethel Anders, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Dewars, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Wallace and Mr. Pete Rossiter, Vancouver.

Baker — Ptak

Dr. and Mrs. Leonie L. Ptak are pleased to announce the marriage of their only daughter, Susan Marie, to Mr. David James d'Arcy Baker, eldest son of Lieutenant-Colonel and Mrs. James R. Baker, on September 7, 1968, in St. Mary's Anglican Church, with the Reverend O. L. Foster officiating.

Pine — Quick

Reverend T. Greenhalgh officiated at a double-ring ceremony recently which united Sharon May Quick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Quick, and granddaughter of a Saanich pioneer, Mrs. W. J. Quick, to Mr. James Arnold Pine, son of Mrs. A. Pine, 2739 Avebury. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of silk organza and Chantilly lace. Mrs. Pat Law sang "Oh Perfect Love," accompanied by organist Mrs. Robert Cleland.

The maid of honor, Miss Linda Gray, and bridesmaids Miss Shirley Wakeham and Miss Marlene Walls wore identical gowns of lime green peau d'elegance and Chantilly lace.

Mr. Rodger Quayle attended as best man. Ushers were Mr. Ron Speed and Mr. Doug Tuffey.

BRIDGE QUIZ

Here are some "Standard" bidding situations which are borderline for slam. You have to decide whether the statements are true or not.

Score 10 points for each correct answer. 70 or more makes you an excellent slam bidder. 40 or less means that you should bid very cautiously in slam situations until you have acquired a better grasp.

North	South
1♣	1♠

South holds:
♠A 9 8 6 5 ♡Q J 9
◇8 5 ♣K Q 2

(a) North would have raised to only three spades if interested in slam. (b) In any case South should not bid four no trump, since if North shows only two aces South will be stranded. (c) South cannot bid five clubs, as North may pass.

South	North
1♠	2♡
4♡	5♣

South holds:
♠Q 10 8 7 5 2 ♡K Q J 9
◇A 4 2 ♣—

(a) North's bid of five clubs is a slam try. (b) South's club void is a valuable asset for slam purposes. (c) As South holds the diamond ace, he must cue-bid that card.

3.

South	North
2 N.T.	3◇
3 N.T.	4◇

♠K J 8 ♡A J 9
◇K Q 3 ♣A K Q 7

(a) North's bid of four diamonds indicates that he is interested in slam.

(b) As South has a suitable hand, he should co-operate in a slam venture.

(c) The best bid is four no trump, asking for aces.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

1. (a) Not true. The raise to four spades shows an even stronger hand than a raise to three. (b) True. It would be bad style to make a Blackwood bid of four no trump. (c) Not true. Five clubs is the best bid. North will assume that South is interested in a spade slam and he definitely will not pass five clubs.

2. (a) True. When a trump suit has been agreed, a bid in a new suit at game level or above is a slam try. (b) Not true. South's void may be a wasted asset. It would have been more encouraging if South were void of diamonds instead of clubs. (c) Not true. It is not mandatory to cue-bid an ace. Here South would be well-advised to conceal the diamond ace and to sign off in five hearts.

3. (a) True. Responder may not take opener out of three no trump into a minor suit unless there is a possibility of slam. (b) True. Now that North has rebid his diamond suit, South's hand is highly suitable. (c) Not true. In this sequence, four no trump would not be Blackwood. It would be a signoff. South's best move is to show the heart ace by bidding four hearts.

10-MILE POINT
UNUSUAL—ATTRACTIVE

This attractive home, built with a high regard for Japanese architecture also uses the best functionalism of Western architecture to produce better living because — it is located in the 2nd best area (Uplands is first) — the lot is large, 74x220 — it's treed, offering you a natural park of your own. The privacy extends also to the home. The living room is peninsular with a separate entrance (how many times have you crossed through a living room or dining room to get to another room — A living area should not serve as a passageway). Between the living room and the large dining room is a free standing stone fireplace — serving both rooms and it soars to the full height of the open beamed roof. The wall between the dining room and kitchen is translucent and has a Japanese design. The lighting from either room through the panelling adds a most interesting feature to these rooms. The kitchen has black walnut cabinets that only Tech Designed Homes would produce. This is a room that most ladies will not be able to resist. The bedrooms are large, 2 have feature walls and special lighting and there are two full bathrooms. In addition there is a large rumpus room finished in yellow cedar with a floor to ceiling fireplace. There are many more features. The price is $39,500 and there is a 8½ per cent mortgage available. 152 WATERFRONT PROPERTIES

WATERFRONT GEM AND GUEST COTTAGE $42,000

A unique and delightful property that exemplifies the charm of Victoria. A tudor home plus a Tudor cottage. Heavy hand-split shakes, leaded windows and Tudor styling blend with beautiful landscaping. The exceptional views from every window; the wharf; the float; the wildlife that visits daily all combine to provide the living pleasure the city is famous for. The home is not large but there are three bedrooms and a full basement. There are numerous inclusions (stove, fridge, etc.) and the cottage is furnished (and rented). The bridge, the tall trees, and a most unusual oak and arbutus add atmosphere that can only be had by years of growth. Not an old property, but a unique one with a Disneyland flavor. An exclusive listing. Full details and an appointment to view from Mr. Yells, 382-2101, Res. 388-5089.

Fire Dangers Explained To Children

Story and Pictures
By BETTY MacMILLAN

GOLD RIVER—Forty children had an opportunity to play firemen when Gold River fire department's truck visited the Lads and Lassies play-school.

Volunteer firemen Darrell Collins and Rev. Dave McKay showed the children over the vehicle and demonstrated various pieces of firefighting equipment.

The children lined-up for turns at helping Mr. McKay squirt water on the road, and Mr. Collins lifted each one into the driver's seat where they could put on a helmet and "drive" the truck.

Later Mr. Collins talked to the children about the dangers of playing with matches and the hazards of campfires and home fireplaces.

The visit of the fire truck was planned as a prelude to National Fire Prevention Week which starts today.

Gold River's major event during the week will be an open house at the public safety building on Thursday at 6 p.m. A B.C. Forest Service film featuring slash burning will be shown and it is hoped that a logging division representative will be there to answer questions.

FIRE SITUATION

Municipal Fire Chief Dave Cornish has invited residents to visit the fire hall "to meet some of the men who operate the fire truck, inhalator, ambulance and rescue equipment and to see how this equipment operates".

Mr. Cornish, who heads a 25-man volunteer brigade says "the fire situation to date in Gold River has been nothing short of excellent. We have had a car fire and minor bush fires, but certainly no property damage or timber loss".

Mr. Cornish is also building inspector and provincial fire marshal representative for the municipality.

BUILDING CODES

He attributes the lack of fires to new construction and adherance to building codes.

"The best place to prevent fire is on the drawing boards. Particularly in public buildings such as schools, apartments, community halls etc., a fire prevention program must begin on paper in the initial stages."

Gold River elementary school held its first fire drill of the year last week when 360 students evacuated the buildings in 37 seconds.

Principal Phil Punt said "It was a well conducted fire drill considering that we have some new teachers and new pupils. Our best time last year was 40 seconds."

RCMP Space Up for Study

PARKSVILLE — A motion made at a special committee meeting to study RCMP accommodation in Parksville is due to be discussed by council on Monday.

The motion urged that a letter should be sent to the RCMP stating that Parksville is unable to provide office space for the detachment at present, but would do so 14 months from Dec. 1.

However Mayor E. C. Irving has said that he considers that to be stalling action by council and that he will oppose the motion.

Police accommodation was to have been part of a civic centre planned for Parksville. The whole project was estimated at a cost of $300,000.

However plans have been postponed because of the federal government's decision to drop the winter works program.

Ill Russian Flown To Hospital

The Russian fishing vessel Ivan Chernopyatko, fishing Saturday north of Bull Harbor, radioed Armed Forces search and rescue at Vancouver for help in removing an ill crewman to hospital.

The man was thought to be suffering from appendicitis. A Labrador helicopter from search and rescue at Comox flew to the ship Saturday evening and took the sailor to St. George's Hospital in Alert Bay, 50 air miles away.

Aircraft Built At Home

DUNCAN — For six years Mr. and Mrs. Joe Howse and their family have been crowded out of their home by an aircraft-building project.

Now they have more breathing space for the plane is finished and has gone on its first flight. The craft is the only home-built plane in the Cowichan Valley and, possibly on Vancouver Island.

The project was started by Mr. Howse in Edmonton and he completed it a few months ago at his Herd Road home.

The aircraft is a French-designed Maranda, powered by a four-cylinder 125 h.p. Lycoming engine. It has a cruising speed of 95 miles an hour and its possible six-hour range could cover at least 460 miles.

* * *

The plane was recently accepted by the transport department as an ultra light plane and Mr. Howse hopes to obtain approval soon to carry one passenger on his flights.

It is still restricted to a 25-mile radius.

Excluding the many hours of labor, the plane, including radio cost $2,800. It is parked in a private airstrip on Drinkwater Road.

Mr. Howse, who insists that everyone could build a similar plane, is a part-owner of a four-seater plane and a glider pilot, training at Cassidy airport.

Pole Position

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Mario Andretti, driving in his first formula one race, pushed his Lotus-Ford around Watkins Glen race track at a record 128.97 miles an hour Saturday and won the pole position for today's 10th Grand Prix of the United States.

New Pool Planned By Crofton Firemen

CROFTON — Members of Crofton volunteer fire department will be out this week inspecting homes and public buildings in the Crofton-Westholme districts.

The operations is part of Fire Prevention Week which starts to today and, like firemen in other Island communities, they will be on hand to answer questions about fire prevention.

* * *

They will also distribute cards with the department's emergency numbers so that people can obtain help promptly if fire occurs.

Gordon Vye, who has been fire chief at Crofton for 10 years, said the department is planning to add a swimming pool and other facilities to the fire hall which was built in 1966.

"The main object of the pool will be for Red Cross swimming instruction," he said.

* * *

"This year, and other years, when the summers have been miserable, the kids haven't been able to finish their swimming lessons. With a heated pool, they will. Eventually we hope to have the pool covered and then instruction will be offered all year round."

One of the department's projects to raise money for their proposed recreation facilities will be a Pig and Whistle Night at Crofton community hall on Oct. 25.

"We hope to get the project well on its way is 1969," said Mr. Vey.

There are 21 active volunteers in the department, said Mr. Vey. "They dedicate a great deal of time, without pay, to the efforts of the fire department."

Ship's Point Lodge

House Travelled By Float To New Site

Story and Picture
By MARY MOORE

UNION BAY — Visitors often admire the setting for Mr. and Mrs. Earl Laughlin's home, but what they don't know is that the house was taken for a raft-ride to reach the spot.

Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin recalled the experience recently when the large house floated from Knight's Inlet to its present site. It is now a year-round guesthouse for hunters and fishermen as well as summer guests.

They planned the house themselves and Mr. Laughlin built it with the help of a carpenter. Like most homes in the logging area, it was constructed on cedar logs and braces to enable it to be moved at a future date.

It was then a two-storey structure including a living room, dining room, kitchen utility room, five bedrooms and two bathrooms.

They bought the Ship's Point property in the fall of 1964. The following spring they built a log float, at Knight's Inlet, the house was pulled onto it by a caterpillar tractor and then it floated 140 miles to its new home.

NO DAMAGE

But that was only part of the venture. The house, was jacked up on supports so that a basement could be built at ground level. The addition has a large recreation room, with a stone fireplace, pool and storage rooms and a furnace.

How carefully were things packed?

"We didn't pack a thing," said Mrs. Laughlin. "The house was moved just as it was when we were living in it. Our standard lamps were left in place, dishes were in the cupboards, china and crystal in the cabinets, pictures on the walls and food in the refrigerator. We didn't have any damage to anything throughout the entire operation."

They said they chose Ship's Point for its open view of Baynes Sound and the attraction of the surrounding mountains. They thought the natural assets, together with other features such as swimming, boating, hunting and fishing would help their efforts in opening their home to the public.

Prison Term Given

NANAIMO — Amar Singh alias Narangan Singh, 56, of Port Alberni, was sentenced Saturday to one year in Oakalla Prison for his part in a conspiracy to gain admission to Canada of three relatives through what county court Judge Leo Gansner described as threats, schemes and outright lies.

His son, Darshan Singh Amar, 20, was given an 18-month suspended sentence.

Judge Gansner said Amar Singh was "the force behind the plan," and that others outside his family were involved through duress and threats upon their lives.

The crown alleged that Amar Singh persuaded his son to misrepresent citizens of India as being related to his son's wife.

Amar Singh entered Canada under single status and using an alias, court was told.

Eighth Win

TORONTO (CP) — Viceregal, a chunky son of Northern Dancer, climaxed his Canadian racing season Saturday by making his eighth win of the year the $43,555 Cup and Saucer Stakes at Woodbine raceway.

The flashy two-year-old, ridden by Richard Grubb, finished a neck in front of Bill Hatch's Grey Whiz. Quillo, owned by Jack Hood of Stratford, was nine lengths back in third.

Viceregal boosted his earnings to a record $117,648.75 with $28,310.75 in take-home pay. Finishing the 1⅛ miles in 1:46 2-5, he returned bettors $2.90, $2.40 and $2.10.

Eclipse View

Difficult viewing of this morning's lunar eclipse was expected by astronomers, but late Saturday the Dominion Astro-Physical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain said it hoped there would be a break in the overcast to allow sighting of the phenomenon. The eclipse started at 2:55 a.m., and the moon was totally obscured from 4:10 a.m. until 5:15 a.m.

Officer Cain in Headlines Again

Mafia, Politics Enmesh Former Policeman

CHICAGO (UPI) — If nothing else, Richard Cain was surely one of the most enterprising officers ever to grace the Chicago Police Department.

But his enterprise kept landing him in trouble. Thursday, he was sentenced to prison, charged with being the longtime servant of the Chicago crime syndicate.

Along the way, the record showed, he was a trusted but now thoroughly repudiated ally of major figures in Illinois politics. In his prime, Cain was regarded as one of the most brilliant law enforcement officials in the state.

Army Agent

Cain came to the police department in 1956 with a reputed record as a hot shot army, counter-intelligence agent. He became a flashy vice squad detective, leader of headline-worthy raids, but left the force four years later.

Just before Cain's departure, he and another officer were caught photographing everyone who entered and left the office of the chief investigator of Mayor Richard Daley.

Cain said he had been paid $1,000 to do so by state's attorney Benjamin Adamowski, a Republican who was getting ready to run against Daley. Cain said, "We did it on our own time," but his superior officers were unsympathetic.

Private Eye

Cain did a stretch as a private detective and then hooked up with another rising Republican, Richard Ogilvie, now his party's candidate for governor of Illinois. When Ogilvie became Cook County sheriff, he made Cain the chief of his investigative staff.

Fourteen months later, Feb. 1, 1964, Ogilvie announced Cain was leaving the post "to undergo an intensive series of tests for head injuries he suffered from shell fragments during the Second World War."

Police department records showed Cain served in the army from 1947 to 1950 and suffered no disabling injuries.

Stories that he had been an army counter-intelligence agent from 1943 to 1948 and that he had been chief investigator for the Burns detective agency didn't check out.

A month before Ogilvie released him, Cain led a raid on a suburban motel where he "recovered" $42,000 of $250,000 in drugs stolen in a burglary from the Louis Zahn wholesale drug house in suburban Melrose Park.

Cain looked like a hero — not bad work for someone who never got past the eighth grade.

Then the state's attorney (Democratic) charged the raid was phony. He said one of the raiders had rented the room, planted the drugs and then swooped into the set-up and headlines.

Mexico Jaunt

Richard Cain, it turned out, was born Richard Scalzetti. Richard Cain, it turned out, wasn't exactly a stranger to some powerful men in Chicago's Mafia.

When Sam "Momo" Giancana fled to Mexico in 1966 to escape more attention from the U.S. attorney's office — Giancana had been jailed for a year when he refused to testify about his activities despite immunity from the 5th amendment — Cain turned up south of the border. When singer Phyllis McGuire flew to Mexico to see her good friend Giancana, the man who chauffeured her from the airport was Richard Cain.

Four Years

Thursday some of this caught up with Richard Cain. He was found guilty of being an accomplice with syndicate gunmen who robbed a suburban Franklin Park bank of $43,697. He was sentenced to four years in prison and fined $13,000 and costs.

Specifically, Cain, 44, was charged with administering lie detector tests (on a Cook county polygraph) to the bank robbers to find the stool pigeon who told police about the heist.

Cain, it was alleged, had been ordered to give the tests by William "Willie Potatoes" Daddano, syndicate loan shark. And this happened, the government said, when Cain worked for then-sheriff Ogilvie, now the Republican candidate for governor.

Shot Dead

One of the men given the tests, Guy "Lover Boy" Mendola, reportedly flunked two of three lie tests. He was shot to death eight months later.

Convicted with Cain in the sealed jury verdict were Daddano, 55, who got 15 years and a $13,000 fine; Frank de Legge Sr., 50, mastermind of the bank robbery, who got 15 years and a $5,000 fine; De Legges son, Frank Jr., 30, who allegedly made a diversionary phone call to tell police of a "bomb" in another part of Franklin Park, seven years and a $5,000 fine, and a 51-year-old Daddano lieutenant, three years.

Deportation

In his summation, U.S. Attorney Thomas Foran told the court Cain had offered to give sufficient information to allow for the deportation of himself and Daddano if the government dropped all charges.

When U.S. district court judge Julius Hoffman passed sentence, Cain — who had acted as his own attorney — asked if he could be freed on bond to prepare an appeal. Hoffman denied his request and said:

"I don't want to say unkind things about you, sir, considering the praise you got as a law official. But you defiled that office according to the verdict. You are a threat to the safety of the citizens of this community."

As he was being led away, Cain asked the judge to please see that he got a typewriter and paper so he could prepare his appeal.

Mayor Wants Silence

Punishment Hikes Policeman's Beat

Loudermilk was ordered Friday to walk back and forth between police headquarters and fire headquarters as punishment for remarks which offended Mayor Leland Larrison. In a note placed on the police bulletin board, Larrison warned Loudermilk's penalty would be extended 30 days for each newspaper account of Loudermilk's treks.

Loudermilk, 39, was a police lieutenant until Larrison, a Republican, won the office from Democrat Ralph Tucker.

"I set the punishment. I don't think it's too unusual," Larrison said.

Loudermilk makes the trip twice ever hour between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. daily. The fire and police stations are about two-thirds of a mile apart.

"It's not so bad once you get used to it," he said, "but I'm not used to it yet."

Neither the mayor nor Loudermilk would say what the remarks were which offended Larrison. But Larrison, who said Loudermilk's hikes will probably end about the first of the year, indicated that, if Loudermilk made any more such remarks, he could look forward to punishment hikes for the rest of Larrison's term, three years and some months.

Larrison said, "This type of punishment has been used around here for years and years. It is normal procedure, but we don't put it out to the public."

Grits Cheer Chief

By IAN STREET, Legislative Reporter

PENTICTON — More than 1,000 wildly enthusiastic Liberals Saturday acclaimed Patrick McGeer as the leader who will bring the B.C. Liberal party out of the wilderness where it has languished for a generation, and he replied: "Look around you and know each other, because you are the people who are going to make the next government in British Columbia."

The singing, banner-waving Liberals jammed the Peach Bowl convention centre to cheer Dr. McGeer, 41, fresh from an easy victory over fellow MLA Garde Gardom, 44, in the two-way fight for the provincial leadership. (See also Page 9.)

He received slightly more than 68.6 per cent of the 1,002 valid votes cast by the delegates. Mr. Gardom, a late entry in the race, ran strongly in the final stages of the campaign but couldn't make any significant inroads into the committed delegate strength for Dr. McGeer.

FIRST TASK

Immediately afterward, Dr. McGeer told a press conference his first task as provincial party leader would be to prepare for the next B.C. election.

He said he would take a leave of absence from his job as associate professor in the faculty of medicine at the University of B.C. and become a full-time party leader in about a month.

Asked when he thought the next election would come, Dr. McGeer said that was up to Premier Bennett and the reporters present knew as well as he did that it could not be predicted.

'WE'RE READY'

"We're ready for spring, or fall, or next week," he said.

At the windup convention banquet Saturday night, Dr. McGeer told the audience he felt the personal financial affairs of influential political figures must be "completely open" and said he intended to make public his salary as party leader in the near future.

In his speech to the convention, Dr. McGeer said the purpose of the party is to form the next government in this province, but that it is not his final goal.

The next Liberal government, he said will be unparalelled for quality in the history of B.C.

He recalled that 27 years ago former premier Duff Patullo had predicted the Liberal party which he led would not be the power in the province for another generation.

HIGHEST GOALS

"That generation of wandering in the wilderness has passed, Dr. McGeer declared. "For the first time in 27 years we have the strength to aim for the highest political goals in our province, and to know that we can achieve them."

He criticized the Social Credit administration for accumulating hundreds of millions of dollars in B.C. Hydro bonds and $150,000,000 worth of cash and short-term notes while the province lacks classrooms, adequate housing and sufficient hospital beds.

"The dominating goal of the present government, the government that rules our society today, is the accumulation of wealth. Our task is to convert the wealth of government into enrichment of people.

MIND, SPIRIT

"That enrichment is not measured in dollars. It is not measured in corporate securities. That enrichment is measured in qualities of human mind and spirit. It is measured in the excitement of our environment and the security of our society.

Education and research must be the twin keys to a new prosperity for all British Columbians, said Dr. McGeer.

"In the past, government in B.C. has encouraged feats all of one mould — the mould of Paul Bunyan. In the future we shall also encourage feats of the mould of an Albert Einstein or an Alexander Graham Bell. We shall take full advantage of science and technology to

NonVoters in Greece Losing Car Rights

ATHENS (AP) — Greeks who failed to vote in last Sunday's constitutional referendum without valid reason will not be entitled to a driver's licence or renewal of their old one, the government said Saturday.

Defaulters also will not be able to obtain or renew an automobile circulation permit or sell or trade their car.

Douglas Tells Party:

Four Provinces Hold NDP Hope

OTTAWA (CP) — T. C. Douglas urged the New Democratic Party Saturday to concentrate its political efforts during the next four years in the four provinces where it can make "substantial gains," B.C., Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Each will have a provincial election in the next three to four years, Douglas told a meeting of the party's federal executive. The minimum aim should be for the NDP to form the government in at least two provinces and the official opposition in the others.

This would give the party a "very good springboard" to head into the next federal election, probably about 1972.

Douglas said the party can't waste time because the popularity of Prime Minister Trudeau is being drained away "much more quickly" than expected.

He said this was due in part to Trudeau's "own heavy-handedness" and in part to his acceptance of economic thinking which will mean "very substatial" tax increases.

BEST CHANCES

The NDP should not forget the Atlantic provinces, Quebec and Alberta, where it has been blanked repeatedly in federal elections. But it certainly should concentrate its resources in the four provinces where it stands the best chance of success.

Saskatchewan and B.C. are the provinces where the NDP should aim at forming the provincial government, Douglas said.

Frankness Secret Matter

OTTAWA (CP)—The New Democratic Party federal executive voted 19-9 Saturday to close its meeting to reporters after members decided they wanted to do some frank talking about party strategy and potential new leaders.

Winnipeg North MP David Orlikow led the majority by saying the executive is meeting to plan a 1969 leadership convention. Tommy Douglas says he won't run again and people in the running must be discussed—"but I sure as hell am not going to do it while the press is here."

B.C. Civil Servants Changing Mood?

By DON COLLINS
Labor Reporter

VANCOUVER — Militants have won a majority of seats on the executive of the B.C. Government Employees Association.

It was their only measure of success at the 11,000-member association's two-day convention that ended here Saturday. They placed eight men on the 13-man executive.

Members of a hard-core group had said before the convention they would seek to win leadership from the moderate element that has guided the association since its beginning 25 years ago.

Shot Down

Until Saturday afternoon they had met with one failure after another.

On Friday several of their resolutions, including one aimed at what they considered the weak leadership of general secretary Edward P. O'Connor, were shot down.

And Friday night Norman Thornber, who is seeking Mr. O'Connor's job, was ejected from a closed meeting. He was attending the convention as observer, but said he couldn't remain in the closed meeting with other observers because he is a paid association worker.

Action Mood

Mr. Thornber is business agent in Victoria of the unlicensed marine branch.

As the votes were being cast Saturday, Mr. Thornber said in an interview he thought his group had "started the delegates thinking."

"This may be the beginning of a change. The delegates have demonstrated in there that they are in a mood for action."

However, not only the militants were responsible for that mood.

The man the Thornber group has opposed — Mr. O'Connor — told the delegates Saturday morning that he was surprised none of them had spoken out against the provincial government's decision last week to reject all wage appeals that had been made on behalf of the civil servants.

Teeth Sought

"I thought you would have been flooding the microphones at this convention," he said.

By the afternoon they had taken his advice and were attempting to put teeth into a resolution that would demand government action on the wage matter.

The intention was to tell the government they wanted the issue handed over to the newly-appointed mediation commission. Premier Bennett announced Friday that he intended to have the civil service commission study the matter in time to bring in recommendations prior to next January's budget.

The resolution — in its preliminary stage — also threatened economic sanctions

Signs Spur Fights

Violence is increasing daily between supporters of U.S. third-party president candidate George Wallace and opponents, mainly youthful. This sign led to fistfight at Buffalo rally Friday, after which street gunplay wounded one man. More fighting and ripping of similar signs occurred Saturday in rallies at Cleveland and other cities. No Blow to Olympics Strikers' Promise

MEXICO CITY (AP — The National Students Strike Council, which claims to represent nearly 500,000 students, said Saturday it had no wish to disrupt the Olympic Games and planned in the future to confine demonstrations to school grounds. The games begin Oct. 12.

The statement followed the death of four more persons wounded in Wednesday's bloody gun battle between police and students. This raised the death toll to 35 since Wednesday.

A student leader, Miguel Yoldi, said at a news conference that all future student demonstrations would be confined to campuses and secondary school territory "so that we can avoid future assassinations of our people."

SAID BEFORE

Newsmen pointed out that the strike council had issued such statements in the past, but that they were followed by further bloodshed. Yoldi explained that if all demonstrations were on university or school property, police would agree to stay away.

Twenty - nine persons were killed in the gunfight at the Plaza of the Three Cultures, and more than 60 were seriously wounded. On Friday a sniper and one of his two victims died in an isolated shooting incident in the same square.

Officials said Saturday afternoon there had been no reports of violence in 24 hours. The International Olympic Committee reiterated that the Olympic Games would begin as scheduled on Oct. 12 despite a prom-

Lesage Leads Way On Language Vote

MONTREAL (UPI) — Quebec Liberal leader Jean Lesage, in what many delegates to the provincial party convention termed a "long-awaited show of leadership," Saturday won approval of a controversial resolution supporting establishment of French as the "priority language" in Quebec.

After a drawn-out debate in committee during the day, the convention approved the motion in an unanimous voice vote at night.

Many delegates praised Lesage for his personal intervention in the afternoon to win approval of the resolution in a packed meeting of the cultural affairs committee. "Lesage proved his leadership by intervening" and "Lesage showed he was the real leader" were among comments voiced by delegates after the prolonged committee session.

Delegates from the English-speaking wing of the party attempted to gain passage of an amendment which would have recommended that the provincial and federal constitutions be amended to guarantee "equal language rights for all"—particularly, to protect rights of Quebec's Anglophobe minority.

Soviet Missiles Aim at Peking

By COLIN CHAPMAN
London Sunday Times

LONDON — The Soviet Union has established several new missile sites on the Chinese border in outer Mongolia, leaving China in increasing apprehension at the possibility of invasion.

Russia has had mobile ground-to-air rocket batteries manned by mixed Russian-Mongolian crews near the town of Choibalsan, 300 miles east of Ulan Bator, for some time.

What does appear to be new in the area are ground-to-ground missiles with a range of between 2,500 and 3,000 miles, stationed on the Chinese frontier near Buir Nor, 200 miles farther east.

These new missiles are, according to reliable sources, exclusively under Soviet command. The area is completely cut off to outsiders. But is now is said to be linked by a special railway to the Soviet Union. The railway line runs directly from Irkutsk to the missile zone, thereby bypassing Ulan Bator.

There are said to be two types of missiles, "Scamps" (the NATO code name), carried on track vehicles with a range of 2,500 miles, and "Scrooge", a slightly longer land-based missile with a range of 3,000 miles.

These put the Russians within range of some United States navy bases in the Pacific, but they also cover the vast Chinese industrial area in Manchuria with its concentration of armament industries and nuclear research stations. Distance from the missile sites to Peking is only 700 miles.

'Killer Was Drunk'

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP)—Nigerian officials and foreign military observers argued Saturday about who was to blame for the killing of four European relief workers gunned down in Okigwe Monday when Nigerians took the town from retreating Biafrans.

The International Red Cross in Geneva claims a drunken Nigerian soldier killed the four—a British couple, a Yugoslav doctor and a Swedish Red Cross worker—when they sought refuge from the fighting along with six other workers.

MACHINEGUN BURST

The charge said the workers were beaten and robbed before the four were caught in a burst of machinegun fire.

"The killings were unprovoked and inexcusable," said the investigating team in a report released Saturday at a news conference.

"We reckon there was probably a case of mistaken identity," said Yutu Gobir, secretary of Nigeria's defence ministry. He added that crossfire was involved in the incident.

EACH WORE BADGE

Maj.-Gen. Henry T. Alexander, one of the investigators, said soldiers still were engaged in fighting around Okigwe, 25 miles north of Umuahia, last stronghold of Biafran secessionists in Eastern Nigeria.

Threat to Cut Biafra in Half

Federals Try for Pincer

LAGOS, Nigeria (Reuters) — Federal troops of the first and third divisions are trying to link up on the strategic Owerri-Okigwi road in an attempt to cut Biafra in two and separate the breakaway state's last remaining city from its only jungle airstrip.

Informed sources here say that if the move succeeds, it would split Biafra into two sections, one to the east of about 1,750 square miles and the other, to the north and west, about half as big.

The move also would separate Umuahia, the last Biafran administrative centre, from a 75-foot-wide airstrip at Uli-Ihiala, known as Annabelle.

Owerri, captured Sept. 16, is about 30 miles from the hillside township of Okigwi, which was taken two weeks later.

According to persistent rumors in Lagos, the Biafrans have one other secret airstrip near Umuahia. But it was understood that it was only big enough for light aircraft, and possibly was intended as an escape route for leading secessionists.

OMUHIA, Biafra (UPI) — Biafran leader Lt. Col. Odemegwu Ojukwu said Thursday night his breakaway state's military situation was improving and there was a feeling "that one could turn the tables" on Nigerian federal troops in the civil war.

Speaking to a group of foreign journalists at his residence here, Ojukwu said he was scouring the earth "for any arms I can lay my hands on."

Exiled General Returns, Avoids Meeting Thieu

SAIGON (AP) — Gen. Duong Van Minh returned from a four-year exile Saturday and raised some eyebrows by ducking an immediate meeting with President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

"Today is for my family," said the popular general, known as Big Minh, as he declined a presidential helicopter sent to fly him to the palace.

OFFER STANDS

He left observers guessing whether it was a snub or simply Big Minh's well-known ability to forget appointments and go his own unpredictable way.

Minh, who led the 1963 coup that overturned South Vietnamese strongman president Ngo Dinh Diem, has an offer from Thieu to become a senior presidential adviser. The government hopes to capitalize on his popularity, but also fears that popularity.

LOW KEY

Whether he will accept Thieu's offer is unknown. The two men have scheduled a meeting Monday and some kind of announcement is expected then.

Although Thieu is counting on Minh to strengthen support for his government, the homecoming was kept in low key. Until Minh's plane landed Thieu's official spokesman denied that Minh was even on the plane from Bangkok.

There were no street demonstrations or other outbreaks that the government had partially feared.

Minh's popularity with the ordinary Vietnamese is undeniable. Many feel he would easily have won the presidential race a year ago had the military regime permitted him to return at that time.

DECISIVE VOICE

Although he was largely a figurehead in the 1963 coup, Minh is credited with having a decisive voice within the military at that time and was the popular benefactor of the coup.

American's Hunt Struggling Cong

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. infantrymen probed through canals and hip-deep, paddy mud today for surviving stragglers of a Viet Cong battalion crippled in a two-day battle.

The U.S. command said the enemy battalion—with some 400 men—lost 138 known dead after being trapped in its Mekong Delta base camp 58 miles southwest of Saigon. Since the normal battle ratio is two or three wounded for each man killed, that would indicate few guerrillas got away unscathed.

The command earlier had reported 169 enemy killed in the Friday-Saturday action, but that figure was lowered to correct reports.

In Saigon, the nightly curfew was eased from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. for the first time since the Tet offensive last Feburary. Residents filled streets and parks, gaily lighted with holiday lanterns, to celebrate the eve of Tet Trung-Thu, the mid-autumn festival.

The official Vietnam Press announced Saturday that the South Vietnamese cabinet is discussing amnesty for the more than 52,000 government soldiers who deserted this year.

Facts you should know about the new driving law

Section 126A of the Motor Vehicle Act is now in effect in Greater Victoria and the County of Victoria. This new law eliminates tickets and fines for driving offences under the Motor Vehicle Act for British Columbia licensed drivers, and institutes a system of Violation Reports. These Reports, unless disputed, or if disputed but confirmed by a magistrate, will be filed with an individual's driving record at the Motor Vehicle Branch, and will provide the basis for more effective surveillance of offenders by traffic authorities.

What happens if you are stopped for a traffic violation?

If the violation is covered by the new law, the police officer will complete and sign a Violation Report. A copy of this Report will be served to you in person or by mail. The Report specifies the violation of which you are accused, and tells you where a notice of dispute may be delivered. The police officer will ask you to sign an acknowledgement of receipt of the Report but, this signing in no way affects your position if you decide to dispute the Report.

What is done with your violation report?

Unless you deliver a notice of dispute to the person named in the Violation Report within seven days, your Report will be forwarded to the Superintendent of Motor Vehicles. If you failed to sign for the Report – or if there is no evidence that a police officer served the Report – you will be notified by mail by the Superintendent. You have fourteen days from the date of receiving such notification to deliver a notice of dispute to the Superintendent. If a notice of dispute is not received within fourteen days, a copy of the Violation Report is filed with your driving record at the Motor Vehicle Branch.

What happens if you dispute a violation report?

As mentioned, you may deliver a notice of dispute either within seven days of receiving a Violation Report from the police officer or within fourteen days of notification by the Superintendent of Motor Vehicles. In either case, the notice of dispute and a copy of the Violation Report are referred to a Magistrate. After a hearing, in which full opportunity to present evidence is allowed, the Magistrate determines whether the offence has actually taken place. If the Magistrate is satisfied that the offence has occurred, he will inform the Superintendent of his decision. But in no case shall the Magistrate record a conviction or impose any penalty.

What is the penalty for repeated violations?

All Violation Reports – unless successfully disputed before a Magistrate – become a permanent part of an individual's driving record at the Motor Vehicle Branch. For repeated violations, the Superintendent of Motor Vehicles may take any of the following steps.

1. Issue a warning to the offender.
2. Call the offender for an interview and, when deemed necessary, require the offender to take a driver training course.
3. Suspend the offender's driver's licence outright. Before this step is taken, the offender is given the opportunity to show why this should not be done.
4. Require the offender to appear before a Magistrate who, after reviewing his record, determines whether the offender's driver's licence should be suspended.

Which offences are covered by this new law?

The new law applies to all driving offences under the Motor Vehicle Act involving public safety, such as speeding and careless driving. It does not apply to the more serious driving offences in which criminal charges might be laid. Nor does it apply to minor traffic offences, such as over-parking, for which tickets will still be issued. In all cases, the precise nature of the alleged violation is specified on the Violation Report.

This law is designed not so much to punish offenders as to prevent driving offences. Remember – safe driving is your responsibility, too.

Massage Saves Baby After Birth Problem

Mrs. Elin Rutter

Story and Picture
By BEA HAMILTON

FULFORD — A woman, whose life was miraculously saved when she was born at the beginning of the century, is enjoying the attractions of Salt Spring Island.

She is Mrs. Elin Rutter who lives at Cusheon Lake.

She was born Feb. 6, 1903 in Mountain, a small town in North Dakota. Her mother experienced difficulty with her birth. When the baby made her debut into the world, she seemed lifeless.

MOTHER'S LIFE

The doctor told her aunt to put her in a back room and that he would call an undertaker later.

Then he used all his skill into saving the mother's life.

GOOSE GREASE

She put the lifeless infant in an open oven, rubbed the body with goose grease and told her oldest son to watch the baby while she looked after her children and animals.

Then she sat down and rubbed the baby. "Why I did this, I'll never know, she told people later.

However, after some time, the baby gradually showed signs of life and eventually it started to yell.

LAKE MIGRATION

"I was just meant to live, even if it was by delayed action," says Mrs. Rutter.

Mrs. Rutter is Icelandic and she speaks her native language fluently.

FAVORITE STUDY

Mrs. Rutter's grandparents homesteaded in Moutain, a small community of about 200 people.

Mrs. Rutter's favorite study is astrology. She says that the science has a great influence on people.

Building Increases In Comox Valley

COURTENAY—Construction in all three areas of the Comox Valley appears to be taking an upward swing according to figures given by the three municipalities.

Permits for 40 new homes have been taken out in Courtenay so far this year. Ten more may be built by the end of the year.

August showed the greatest increase and was probably accounted for by construction of the Elk's home.

The total for Comox, up to Aug. 30, is $1,279,615, compared to 57 permits issued in the same period last year which represented a value of $1,079,904.

In Cumberland, 21 permits have been issued for a total of $108,000, which includes $20,000 for commercial buildings.

50 Years Ago

Mine Tragedy Killed 32

By JACK MYERS

Disaster struck Ladysmith 50 years ago Saturday when the small community was the scene of a mine tragedy.

Ladysmith was a coal mining centre. The future looked bright as residents began making plans for Christmas.

Wellington Colliery Company's Extension mine was the main industry of the community, and demand for coal was increasing that year.

* * *

Vancouver Island mines had served the huge San Francisco market since 1853 and the railway terminal of Vancouver was a fast-growing city, with an expected 1940 population of 100,000 — which would also increase the market for Ladysmith's coal.

At about 9 a.m. that Oct. 5 morning Ladysmith was thrown into the public spotlight when 32 miners were trapped and died underground, following an explosion in Number 2½ west level at Extension.

* * *

Word of the tragedy spread fast through town, when a mine train signalled from beyond Smelter Bend that an emergency had arisen.

Homes and shops emptied fast, as families rushed to the company offices to learn what had happened.

The only information available from office clerks was that there had been a big accident.

* * *

Rescue teams were formed immediately but it was not until the following day that the exact number of deaths was known. What had caused the disaster was anybody's guess, and everyone was guessing.

Many theories were advanced by experienced miners. A coroner's jury, with the aid of mine experts, searched for the reason.

* * *

The Victoria meteorological station reported an earth tremor that morning. Some thought that had brought down the tunnel ceiling causing an explosion from released gas which hit naked lights used by the miners.

An investigation in the tunnel showed the coal seam had "rolled" at the cave-in point. It was folded and friable, but that didn't explain what brought it down.

Six months after the explosion, rubble and debris were being cleared from one of the mine's rooms when a blow-out shot hole was found.

Then it was decided a miner had loaded and fired the shot without waiting for a fire-boss to inspect it.

Priests' Role Changing

Teamwork Stressed In Parish Review

By DON GAIN

Hanley

The revolution of Canadian Roman Catholic priests has begun, a Vancouver Island priest said Friday, and should result in the curing of the malaise of the clergy.

Rev. Philip Hanley of Nanaimo has just returned from a historic meeting of priests in Winnipeg where he was delegate for the Victoria diocese.

Possible early changes are:

- Throwing out of the old-fashioned pastor-curate arrangement and recognition of the team idea with full participation in policy decisions at the parish level, for all priests in the parish.

- Review of the whole priority of priests' work. Their prime role is creating community centred in the mass. Much of their present work should be reorganized to express this priority.

- Experimental types of parish structures will have to be envisaged, such as smaller churches and parishes. Groupings may be centred more on sociological than geographical lines.

"There will be no sacred cows," Father Hanley said, "and there will be a review of the relevance of the celibate life in terms of today's society."

STILL SURPRISE

Father Hanley intimated the forthcoming changes were overdue. He said if they weren't provided for there would be a strong possibility of maverick movements.

The change is an outgrowth of Vatican II, he said, but it was still a surprise when the Canadian bishops at their recent semiannual meeting asked the clergy and laity of Canada to work with them in implementing one of its basic platforms.

The priests' reaction was "Is this really real?" he said.

FIRST STAGE

The first stage began last Friday, the priest said, with the calling together of the chairmen of every diocesan senate of priests in Canada to begin the work of discovering a new role for priests in Canada in tune with the needs of an ever-changing Canadian society.

Plans were also laid for the eventual creation of an articulate and representative lay voice with the call for a national pastoral council. This would get under way more slowly because there are more lay people than priests.

LAST WEEKEND

But the representatives of 20,000 Canadian priests began their work last weekend. It was decided the English-speaking and French-speaking groups would meet separately and later combine, in this way guaranteeing full expression at the grass-roots.

A committee of four was elected from the English-speaking section — Father Hanley, representing the priests of Western Canada; Rev. Robert Clune of Toronto and Rev. Wilfred Murphy of Hamilton, representing Ontario and Quebec, and Rev. William Roach representing the Maritimes and Newfoundland.

PRESSING THINGS

The committee is to initiate and correlate the concerns and aspirations of the clergy so that an initial consensus can be formulated on the most pressing problems.

A meeting will be called with the bishops next spring.

Ship's Point Lodge

Story and Picture
By MARY MOORE

UNION BAY — Visitors often admire the setting for Mr. and Mrs. Earl Laughlin's home, but what they don't know is that the house was taken for a raft-ride to reach the spot.

Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin recalled the experience recently when the large house floated from Knight's Inlet to its present site. It is now a year-round guesthouse for hunters and fishermen as well as summer guests.

They planned the house themselves and Mr. Laughlin built it with the help of a carpenter. Like most homes in the logging area, it was constructed on cedar logs and braces to enable it to be moved at a future date.

It was then a two-storey structure including a living room, dining room, kitchen, utility room, five bedrooms and two bathrooms.

They bought the Ship's Point property in the fall of 1964. The following spring they built a log float, at Knight's Inlet, the house was pulled onto it by a caterpillar tractor and then it floated 140 miles to its new home.

But that was only part of the venture. The house was jacked up on supports so that a basement could be built at ground level. The addition has a large recreation room, with a stone fireplace, pool and storage rooms and a furnace.

How carefully were things packed?

NO DAMAGE

"We didn't pack a thing," said Mrs. Laughlin. "The house was moved just as it was when we were living in it. Our standard lamps were left in place, dishes were in the cupboards, china and crystal in the cabinets, pictures on the walls and food in the refrigerator. We didn't have any damage to anything throughout the entire operation."

They said they chose Ship's Point for its open view of Baynes Sound and the attraction of the surrounding mountains. They thought the natural assets, together with other features such as swimming, boating, hunting and fishing would help their efforts in opening their home to the public.

Aircraft Built At Home

DUNCAN — For six years Mr. and Mrs. Joe Howse and their family have been crowded out of their home by an aircraft-building project.

Now they have more breathing space for the plane is finished and has gone on its first flight. The craft is the only home-built plane in the Cowichan Valley and, possibly on Vancouver Island.

The project was started by Mr. Howse in Edmonton and he completed it a few months ago at his Herd Road home.

The aircraft is a French-designed Maranda, powered by a four-cylinder 125 h.p. Lycoming engine. It has a cruising speed of 95 miles an hour and its possible six-hour range could cover at least 460 miles.

* * *

The plane was recently accepted by the transport department as an ultra light plane and Mr. Howse hopes to obtain approval soon to carry one passenger on his flights.

It is still restricted to a 25-mile radius.

Excluding the many hours of labor, the plane, including radio cost $2,800. It is parked in a private airstrip on Drinkwater Road.

Mr. Howse, who insists that everyone could build a similar plane, is a part-owner of a four-seater plane and a glider pilot, training at Cassidy airport.

Ill Russian Flown To Hospital

The Russian fishing vessel Ivan Chernopyatko, fishing Saturday north of Bull Harbor, radioed Armed Forces search and rescue at Vancouver for help in removing an ill crewman to hospital.

The man was thought to be suffering from appendicitis.

A Labrador helicopter from search and rescue at Comox flew to the ship Saturday evening and took the sailor to St. George's Hospital in Alert Bay, 50 air miles away.

Fire Dangers Explained To Children

Story and Pictures
By BETTY MacMILLAN

Small enthusiast takes wheel

GOLD RIVER—Forty children had an opportunity to play firemen when Gold River fire department's truck visited the Lads and Lassies play-school.

Volunteer firemen Darrell Collins and Rev. Dave McKay showed the children over the vehicle and demonstrated various pieces of firefighting equipment.

The children lined-up for turns at helping Mr. McKay squirt water on the road, and Mr. Collins lifted each one into the driver's seat where they could put on a helmet and "drive" the truck.

Later Mr. Collins talked to the children about the dangers of playing with matches and the hazards of campfires and home fireplaces.

The visit of the fire truck was planned as a prelude to National Fire Prevention Week which starts today.

Gold River's major event during the week will be an open house at the public safety building on Thursday at 6 p.m. A B.C. Forest Service film featuring slash burning will be shown and it is hoped that a logging division representative will be there to answer questions.

FIRE SITUATION

Municipal Fire Chief Dave Cornish has invited residents to visit the fire hall "to meet some of the men who operate the fire truck, inhalator, ambulance and rescue equipment and to see how this equipment operates".

Mr. Cornish, who heads a 25-man volunteer brigade says "the fire situation to date in Gold River has been nothing short of excellent. We have had a car fire and minor bush fires, but certainly no property damage or timber loss".

Mr. Cornish is also building inspector and provincial fire marshal representative for the municipality.

BUILDING CODES

He attributes the lack of fires to new construction and adherence to building codes.

"The best place to prevent fire is on the drawing boards. Particularly in public buildings such as schools, apartments, community halls etc., a fire prevention program must begin on paper in the initial stages."

Gold River elementary school held its first fire drill of the year last week when 360 students evacuated the buildings in 37 seconds.

Principal Phil Punt said "It was a well conducted fire drill considering that we have some new teachers and new pupils. Our best time last year was 40 seconds."

New Pool Planned By Crofton Firemen

CROFTON — Members of Crofton volunteer fire department will be out this week inspecting homes and public buildings in the Crofton-Westholme districts.

The operations is part of Fire Prevention Week which starts today and, like firemen in other Island communities, they will be on hand to answer questions about fire prevention.

* * *

They will also distribute cards with the department's emergency numbers so that people can obtain help promptly if fire occurs.

Gordon Vye, who has been fire chief at Crofton for 10 years, said the department is planning to add a swimming pool and other facilities to the fire hall which was built in 1966.

"The main object of the pool will be for Red Cross swimming instruction," he said.

* * *

"This year, and other years when the summers have been miserable, the kids haven't been able to finish their swimming lessons. With a heated pool, they will. Eventually we hope to have the pool covered and then instruction will be offered all year round."

One of the department's projects to raise money for their proposed recreation facilities will be a Pig and Whistle Night at Crofton community hall on Oct. 25.

"We hope to get the project well on its way in 1969," said Mr. Vey.

There are 21 active volunteers in the department, said Mr. Vey. "They dedicate a great deal of time, without pay, to the efforts of the fire department."

Prison Term Given

NANAIMO — Amar Singh alias Narancan Singh, 56, of Port Alberni, was sentenced Saturday to one year in Oakalla Prison for his part in a conspiracy to gain admission to Canada of three relatives through what county court Judge Leo Gansner described as threats, schemes and outright lies.

His son, Darshan Singh Amar 20, was given an 18-month suspended sentence.

Judge Gansner said Amar Singh was "the force behind the plan," and that others outside his family were involved through duress and threats upon their lives.

The crown alleged that Amar Singh persuaded his son to misrepresent citizens of India as being related to his son's wife.

Teen Town Starts in Valley

Story and Picture
By AGNES FLETT

NANAIMO — The 1968 Teen Town has opened at Pleasant Valley community centre, a few miles north of Nanaimo.

When it was decided to use a "royal car", it was only natural that the young people felt that there should also be the "royal treatment."

Consequently as Teen Town Belle Cheryl Garside and her escort, Jim Besson, drove up in a 1936 Rolls Royce, a red carpet was rolled out for her. She was greeted by Jeff Spenaugle, Joe Besson, John Story and Dick Bell.

Pleasant Valley has a group of about 100 teenagers who find the Teen Town a suitable outlet for their surplus energy.

RCMP Space Up for Study

PARKSVILLE — A motion made at a special committee meeting to study RCMP accommodation in Parksville is due to be discussed by council on Monday.

The motion urged that a letter should be sent to the RCMP stating that Parksville is unable to provide office space for the detachment at present, but would do so 14 months from Dec. 1.

However Mayor E. C. Irving has said that he considers that to be stalling action by council and that he will oppose the motion.

Police accommodation was to have been part of a civic centre planned for Parksville. The whole project was estimated at a cost of $300,000.

However plans have been postponed because of the federal government's decision to drop the winter works program.

Peterson Tells Motorists To Fight—If Innocent

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson invited motorists Friday to contest unjustified demerit marks assessed under the traffic violation report system in effect in Greater Victoria since Oct. 1.

"If you think you are not guilty of the alleged violation you should seriously consider entering a dispute because an accumulation of offences could lead to licence suspension," he said.

Under the new system, a driver has seven days after receiving a violation notice to say he wishes to dispute the alleged violation. Notice of dispute is given to the clerk of the magistrate's court.

If no dispute is entered within the seven days, the report is sent to the provincial superintendent of motor vehicles to form part of the driver's record.

Mr. Peterson said early public reaction to the new "no fine" process for minor traffic offences has been "very encouraging."

Land No Longer Idle

Indians Start Project From Ground Floor

By NANCY BROWN

For 56 years Indian land on Craigflower Road has been idle, bringing in a maximum $25 an acre a year to members of the Songhees band.

Now that land holds a promise of giving some Indians one hundred times that income.

Chief John Albany and his neighbor Harry Kamai have started development of the Triple Oaks trailer park — "and we don't owe any thanks to the Indian affairs department, Mr. Albany said Friday.

By the end of the year the two Indians expect to have about 55 brand new mobile homes on 10 to 12 acres of reserve land.

Chief Albany with plans for new trailer park

—Jim Ryan

Close to City

"The department says Indians should develop their own land and that money is available, but when you go for the money you get nothing but a runaround.

"Now I have a large chunk of valuable property close to the city centre, and anyone else could have got a bank loan for development, but I'm an Indian living on reserve land and the bank wouldn't accept my property as collateral," said Mr. Albany.

"Finally I met a young man who agreed to help me.

"He had the money, and I had the land he needed so that he could sell his mobile homes and promise a good site," he said.

Best on Island

The park is being developed in stages and first trailers went onto their lots early this year.

"We are developing this so that it will be the best on the Island — a place people will want to live and stay in," said Mr. Albany.

The trailer park is sewered and conforms with health regulations. Each unit is set up on a 40-by-70-foot lot.

"We will only have new trailers in the park, because we want it to stay good," he said.

"To encourage permanent residents we reduce the rates in return for a three-year lease.

Three Years

"I don't expect to see anything back on this for three years, but then I shall have a good investment with each trailer paying $45 a month for the lease of my land," he explained.

Mr. Albnay and his neighbor have an agreement with Glen Kemp, president of Glenkey Securities, who is doing the actual development of the trailer park.

Rent money will return to the company for about three years, until the investment is paid off, and then the park will return to Indian hands.

All Services

All services — light, telephone and Cablevision — are underground, and there are hardtop roads in the park. A laundromat is being built for trailers without automatic washers.

A playground is being reserved between the park and the golf course for children.

"These mobile homes are amazing things today," said Mr. Albany. "They've got everything — even built-in stereos.

"I was going to build onto my house, but now I'm thinking of bulldozing it down and getting one of the double-width trailers for myself.

Waiting List

"I'm going to have a profitable investment, and with Victoria in the middle of a housing crisis, I expect I shall have the park full in no time.

"Spaces are being reserved faster than we can get the services in, and I've several trailers out here waiting to be set up for people to move in.

"This could be the answer to the housing crisis — the units are low-priced as housing goes today.

"I just hope when the other band members see what Harry and I are doing with our company that other young Indians will do the same thing with their land — I can't think of any more profitable land development than this," he said.

58 Colleges in 60 Days

Harpers Bizarre Lost Without Electronics

By BILL THOMAS

The pop group played to a house of about 1,800 Friday in the University of Victoria gym and were well received but nobody went wild.

The group has built a reputation for doing old songs with style and flair. Unhappily they sound much better when electronically processed for records than they do before a live audience.

The show is a slick presentation that is programmed for college audiences. Harpers Bizarre is doing 58 college dates in 60 days on the present tour. The material ranges from a few contemporary pot jokes to some old sight gags and a lot of songs.

* * *

Cole Porter was well treated in a version of his Anything Goes and so was a vintage version of an early Elvis Presley hit.

For once the lighting and sound systems worked and there were few muffed cues but this is a professional touring show so it was the least we could expect.

* * *

The group lacks a distinctive or definitive sound and members don't do much with the material they have at their disposal. The group playing at A. J.'s for example does more musically than does Harpers Bizarre.

City jazzman Dave Foster left after the first half of the show saying "they don't really do much to turn me on." And that about sums it up. It was competent but quite uninspiring.

Jim Mar of Saanich finished ninth Friday in the Canadian plowing championships at St. Augustin, Que., while the only other B.C. entrant, Jack Andrew of Chilliwack, was seventh.

Young Driver Fined $125

DUNCAN—Earl Manson, 18, of Nanaimo was fined a total of $125 after pleading guilty to driving without insurance, without a licence and to driving without due care and attention.

Court was told that Manson's car went out of control and crashed into a power pole on Tzouhalem Road early Sept. 28. His brother Gary was injured.

Strike Notice Given

Two Victoria shingle mills — Smith Cedar Products Ltd. and McCarter Shingle Co. Ltd. — Friday were given 48-hour strike notice.

The same day the secretary of the B.C. provincial council of carpenters, Lorne Robson of Vancouver, called upon the two firms "to sit down and commence negotiations in good faith" to resolve a wage dispute before it becomes a strike situation.

The dispute centres around wage revisions to correct the inequalities that have grown up over the years in shingle mills, Mr. Robson said.

"Both companies have had a 100-per-cent increase in the selling price of their product in the last 20 months."

Bruce Robertson of Vancouver, business agent of Local 2802, shingle weavers division of the carpenters' union, said a government-supervised strike vote was held Wednesday at Smith Cedar Products and Thursday at McCarter Shingle Co. The vote passed and strike notice was given Friday.

He said the two-year contract with the companies expired June 15 and negotiations have been going on since April. A conciliation officer was appointed and he recommended that no board be set up.

"Then we continued negotiations until they proved fruitless," he said.

Mr. Robson said the provincial council of carpenters at its annual convention in Campbell River this week gave full support to the shingle weavers to institute a campaign for finances in the event of a strike.

He said the international union has assigned E. T. Staley, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, as its representative and "pledged full support in this fight."

Trial Date Arranged

NANAIMO — Ronald Laverne Robins, 28, of Gabriola Island, was remanded until Thursday by Magistrate A. P. Musgrave on two charges of breaking and entry and theft on the island Sept. 2.

Robins pleaded guilty and elected trial by magistrate.

Mrs. Phylis Watts of Lake Cowichan pleaded guilty to defrauding the social welfare department by applying for, and receiving, funds from Lake Cowichan and Nanaimo Indian welfare offices. She was given a six-month suspended sentence.

Supremes Still Billed Here

The recorded music concert billed as "the sweet soul music of the Temptations and the Supremes" has been cancelled in Vancouver. The show was to have gone on at the Pacific Coliseum Oct. 19.

A concert is planned for Memorial Arena Oct. 21 with the same program.

Arena manager Jack Morgan said Friday he spoke to the promoters and there was no indication they intended to cancel here.

So far the box office has taken in around $230. The promoters would need to clear around $750 to cover basic expenses here.

French Captain Was Contemptuous Of Barkley Sound Charts

By R. BRUCE SCOTT

'After the Spanish ship Santa Saturna, the next vessel to visit Barkley Sound was the French vessel Le Bordelais which, under the command of M. Camille de Roquefeuil, made a voyage around the world between the years of 1816 and 1819. The voyage was a trading venture, the purpose of which was to seek new markets for France in order to boost her sagging economy.

PORT DESIRE, where Bordelais anchored. Pachena Cone in background.

The Bordelais was a three-masted vessel of 200 tons. She was armed with two cannon (four pounders), six carronades (eight pounder) and a sufficient quantity of arms of all kinds for the crew and for the boats. Her crew consisted of 34 men including officers, the first mate being Messr. Focault.

The Bordelais spent about two weeks in Barkley Sound and her experiences were described by Captain Roquefeuil in his book entitled Voyage Round the World.

Upon approaching Barkley Sound (or Nitinat as he called it) on Sept. 20, 1817, at three o'clock in the afternoon, he steered northeast to pass between groups of islands on either side of the channel (either Loudoun or Imperial Eagle Channels,), but on approaching them he perceived from the masthead that although the channel was wide at its entrance, it was full of breakers. Noting that the passage to the east (Trevor) seemed to be safer although not so wide, he resolved to enter the Sound by that route. By this time it was night and, although the sky was clear and the moon bright, he decided not to attempt to enter this 'labyrinth' until daylight.

His only guidance was Captain Vancouver's map, which was on too small a scale to steer by and which did not seem to be very accurate for this particular area. He spoke contemptuously of Meares' plan which, he said: "No more resembled the entrance I had before me than that of the Ganges River."

The depth of water being 64 fathoms, it was too deep for him to anchor so he bore off to sea and was becalmed shortly afterwards.

It was three days before the weather permitted another attempt to enter the Sound and then, on the 24th, he entered the channel between the eastern headland and a group of islands, now known as Trevor Channel.

Once inside the comparative shelter of the Sound, the longboat and a whaleboat were lowered and the first mate, Focault, was sent to find a suitable anchoring place farther to the north while the ship proceeded slowly up the channel in a very slight breeze.

Several canoes approached and circled the ship, but the natives would not come alongside until their chief arrived. When he did, he went on board without the slightest hesitation or distrust.

Late in the afternoon Focault returned, having found on the eastern side of the Sound, two arms of the sea near to each other. These would be Bamfield and Grappler Inlets.

Entering Bamfield, the largest of the inlets, which appeared to afford good anchorage, he found that the depth at the entrance was too great. He made several attempts to anchor which were unsuccessful, the wind in the inlet being very variable and tricky.

When the wind increased in intensity they were placed in a dangerous situation and were forced to cut their cable in order to escape, losing their best whaleboat as well as their anchor, in the attempt.

In search of a better anchorage, the ship proceeded up Grappler Inlet, the smaller of the two inlets which Focault had explored the previous day, and moored there in nine fathoms of water on the 25th.

Despite the heavy downpours of rain, the Indians came out in canoes to see the ship, and their chief, Nanat, boarded the vessel. He presented the captain with an otter skin in much the same manner that Maquinna had done at Nootka.

The ensuing five days were spent dragging for their lost cable and anchor in Bamfield Inlet but all to no purpose. On Oct. 5 the search was abandoned owing to the lateness of the season. Then, too, the ill health of the crew made it imperative to leave the northwest coast of America and head for a milder climate in which to pass the winter.

Before leaving, the nearby passages which led to the channel between the islands in the Sound were examined. Roquefeuil noted that although all of them appeared to be clear on the chart which Captain Vancouver had made of them, several were inpractical either on account of being too narrow or because sand banks obstructed the entrances. As for Meares' plan of Barkley Sound, he said: "It appeared to have been made according to his own fancy."

Although the Indians never showed any hostility, the boarding net was always drawn up as a precaution before they became too numerous, and the boats were always armed before they left the ship. More than anything else, the Indians dreaded the black mastiff dog which they had brought from Peru and would not approach anywhere near it.

Regarding the appearance of the Indians, Roquefeuil noted that at least three or four of the women had pretensions to beauty. One of them, the wife of a sub-chief named Cla, received the captain very hospitably and another, the wife of another chief, was almost white. She had large black eyes, regular features and a dignified manner. As a whole, he said, the women and girls appeared as modest as those of Nootka and even more reserved.

He also noted that Nanat appeared to be the grand chief and that he exercised his authority with more arrogance than Maquinna, at times behaving quite harshly towards his sub-chief, Cla. Some of the presents which he had given to Cla, noted Roquefeuil, ended up in the hands of his superior, Nanat.

As far as Roquefeuil could understand, the Indians called the surrounding district by the names of Anachtchitl and Ohiat, the latter being still in use. They referred to Port Desire as Tchaxa or Tchacktza.

Describing the port, Roquefeuil said that it was situated two leagues from the passage in Barkley Sound (Trevor Channel) and that the natives told him that no vessel had ever entered there previously. He added: "The only landmark is a steep hillock destitute of trees, but covered with a beautiful verdure which is on the sea side, some cables length to the south, and which has the appearance of a ruined fortification. Being hidden by trees it is is not very easy to distinguish." I add this piece of information for the benefit of those who like to puzzle over the inexplicable. Personally I have not been able to recognize this configuration.

Continuing, he said that the entrance to Grappler Inlet, which is only 10 fathoms broad, could only be seen when very near to it, being obscured by tall trees. Bamfield Inlet, which was more spacious, was less sheltered and obstructed inside by rocks and shoals. This description of Bamfield Inlet is not entirely true, there being only one small reef of rocks which is now marked by a marker.

Before he departed, the Indians begged him to return the following year, but he could not, he said, pledge himself to pay a second visit to an area "which the sea otters had long since forsaken," having been already annihilated by the fur-traders.

On Oct. 7 the Bordelais put to sea again, but she had not gone far before the wind failed and she was obliged to anchor.

Shortly afterwards the Bordelais received a mysterious visitor. A man who was almost white came alongside the ship and politely asked in English if he could come aboard. There was something about his manners and appearance that indicated a higher degree of civilization than that of the natives. He spoke English better than any Indian and, despite his mispronunciation, was easily understood.

Intrigued by the visitor, Roquefeuil took him down to his cabin and offered him treacle, biscuits and wine. He said that his name was Swanimilich and that he lived at Tchinouk, behind Cape Flattery, and that there were four Americans there who had been left behind by a vessel from New York. He said three of their names were Clark, Lewis and Kean, and that they had a place of their own in which to pass the winter.

Captain Roquefeuil said he was unable to ascertain the truth of the man's story, nor did any American whom he questioned at a later date know anything about their abandoned countrymen.

When the wind arose again he weighed anchor and set sail for the rest of his voyage around the world.

Besides Port Desire, several other places in Barkley Sound are named after the Bordelais and her crew. These are Bordelais Islets, previously called Ship Island; Cla Rock, after the secondary chieftain of the Ohiat band; Roquefeuil Bay, after Captain Roquefeuil; Nanat Islet, after the Ohiat chieftain; Focault Bluff, after the first mate of the Bordelais.

The next ship to visit Barkley Sound was not so fortunate as the Bordelais. It must be remembered that in the interim, the British had established themselves at Fort Victoria in 1843 and the Indians of Barkley Sound had made some contact with them, either directly or indirectly, and had accepted King George as their new chief and ally. So when a foreign ship flying the American flag entered the Sound on Jan. 21, 1859, it received a very different and unexpected kind of reception.

FEROCIOUS LOOKING HIGHLAND CATTLE GENTLE AS LAMB

By AGNES CARNE TATE

Readers of The Islander (Aug. 4, 1968 issue) may remember a short account of the herd of Highland cattle at Prospect Lake owned by Mrs. Josephine Godman. Recently Mrs. Godman took a group of us — her house guest, Miss Vera Blood of Kenya, Mrs. Jean Thompson, of Craigflower Manor, and myself — to see the cattle. Preedie also came along.

Preedie is Mrs. Godman's constant and faithful companion and watchdog. Her origins are unknown and her ancestry dubious. She was found as a puppy on the Malahat, by a doctor and his wife, starving and suffering from distemper. They took her home, treated her and fed her. She developed an inordinate appetite for chocolate and liver and got so fat she almost waddled. Then the doctor and his wife had to go away.

The dog was only two years old so they didn't want to destroy her. They asked Mrs. Godman to take her but warned her that she would probably pine for a few days and go off her feed. Mrs. Godman never told them that Preedie never missed a meal though her intake of chocolate and liver was cut down.

As we neared the farm, Preedie began to get restive. It appeared that Mrs. Godman let her out at the top of the hill and she raced down the hill ahead of the car. She was let out and went pell-mell down the hill.

When we reached the farmhouse we were met by Mr. and Mrs. J. I. A. Mutter, who run the farm for Mrs. Godman.

Mrs. Mutter said the main herd of cattle was off in the bush somewhere, but she took us to meet Arbutus Alastair who was close by. Alastair is a year-old son of Lauchlan, the prize bull, and had reached the age where his father objected to having him around so he had a pasture of his own.

Alastair was to be exhibited at the fall fairs at Saanichton and Cobble Hill so he was being especially fed and groomed for the occasion. Despite his ferocious appearance Alastair is as gentle as a lamb and loves being titivated. He positively smirked when his bangs were smoothly combed, all the hairs on his body straight and his tail a fluffy brush.

Mrs. Mutter in the meantime had gone off to call the rest of the herd, taking Nellie with her. Nellie is a valuable black and white Scottish cattle dog so when her time came the Mutters tried to mate her with an equally valuable male. But Nellie would have none of him.

The Mutters had noticed a nondescript little mongrel hanging around the farm so when it was noticed that Nellie was going to have pups the outcome was awaited with fear and trembling. Nellie had nine pups. They all looked exactly like their mother so they were all sold but with no guarantee of what their offspring would look like!

Nellie must have regretted her fall from grace for she had no love for her puppies. She fed them and kept them clean, but she quite obviously breathed a sigh of relief when the last of them was sold and she could devote her whole time to looking after the cattle.

We could hear Mrs. Mutter's voice getting fainter and fainter as she went in search of the cattle. Alastair could hear it, too, and followed the sound of her voice along his side of the road bellowing every time she called and probably wondering why no one paid any attention to him.

Then suddenly we heard the sound of thundering hooves (literally) and crashing branches and the whole herd burst out of the trees with the bull in the lead and Mrs. Mutter running ahead to see that they came into the right pasture. She led the big bull over to the fence and he is so gentle he didn't object to having his nose rubbed by a perfect stranger.

Two of the cows also came over with their calves and the calves started feeding. The littlest calf, only three weeks old, must have got confused in all the excitement, for he tried to get a drink at the wrong bar. He received the bovine equivalent of: "Get Lost: Scram!" so he scampered in search of his own mother.

Nellie, who had rounded up the cattle and driven to the pasture, got a bit too officious. She nipped the heel of one of the nursing cows and got a swift kick in retaliation. She made no outcry but her feelings must have been hurt for she spent the rest of the afternoon with the humans asking for petting and affection and sympathy for her sore leg.

CALVES THRIVE best of mother's milk.

Neither cattle nor sheep dogs are supposed to be treated as pets, but on a farm where the cattle are pets how can you exclude their guardian?

On the way to the pasture where the cattle were to be herded we had passed pens containing domestic ducks, two wild mallard ducklings and bantams. Mrs. Mutter said they had also kept some geese but these had disappeared on two successive nights.

Unlike Lewis Carroll's Father William who "finished the goose with the bones and the beak" these uninvited diners had left carcasses picked clean as a whistle but no vestige of feathers. The heavy wire fence had been lifted and the geese were dragged under it by the predators. The Mutters finally decided that the thieves were otters, of which there are quite a number around Prospect Lake, as it is protected territory.

When Mrs. Godman acquired the property it was mostly thick bushland. To clear it she bought some locally bred Highland cows but decided to get a prize bull from Scotland. She wrote to authorities in Scotland, saying what she wanted.

When she received a satisfactory reply she flew to England to conclude the deal, taking the Mutter's young daughter, Jill, with her as a companion. She wasn't feeling too well when she reached London so she sent Jill to Edinburgh with detailed instructions as to what to do.

During the negotiations for the purchase of the bull and his transportation to Canada, Jill met a young Scottish computer expert. When he found that she wasn't interested in living in Edinburgh he decided to emigrate to Canada. Now he runs computers for the B.C. government and the couple have a three-month-old son.

The bull, Lauchlan of Balcarra, came to Canada by ship to Montreal, then by rail to Victoria. There was great excitement the morning he arrived. A man with a truck had been hired to take the bull to the farm but the man took one look at the huge beast with his dangerous-looking horns and decided the job was not for him.

So a man used to dealing with cattle had to be found. Lauchlan walked into the truck as peacefully as could be and when he was let out at the farm, took to the bush like a duck taking to water.

The herd ate everything within reach. Within a short space of time they had cleared out all the salal, Oregon grape, ferns and other undergrowth.

They were especially fond of the small licorice ferns and looked very funny with their noses covered with dirt when they had been grubbing the ferns off the rocks.

When all the small stuff was gone the cattle started in on the larger bushes and smaller trees. Lockie (the bull's nickname) would hook one horn around a small trunk and bend it over 'till it was within reach of the cows. When they had cleaned it off — leaves, twigs and branches — he would release it and pull another one down.

In time there was such a collection of skeletal trunks that Mr. Mutter grubbed them out and burned them.

He left the farm for awhile and when he returned he was horrified to see Lockie standing in the hot ashes warming his rear end at the still-smouldering fire. And him with all that long hair!

Highland cattle are so hardy that they can live outdoors all year long even in below zero weather though they have to have extra rations of hay in the winter.

Lockie ran with the herd all the time, so when breeding time came nature was simply allowed to take its course. When calving time came the cow simply found a sheltered spot, dropped her calf and nearly always had it cleaned, washed and fed before the Mutters even knew it had arrived.

In Scotland the cows ordinarily have one calf in two years. But on Vancouver Island with its lusher pastures and milder climate the cows have a calf every year.

The Mutters found that the calves thrive best on their mother's milk which is very rich though not plentiful, so they are not weaned till they are six or seven months' old. One calf objected so strenuously to being weaned that he fainted three times in one day!

As Highland cows remain fertile for about 20 years the herd remains unchanged. Only the heifers are sold to other breeders. The bulls are usually steered. Nearly all the calves have been heifers but last year there were three bulls and Alastair was the lucky one chosen to be exhibited and sold.

Lockie proved to be a most exceptional parent. He would babysit the calves while the cows wandered off in search of greener pastures. One day Mrs. Mutter heard him making a terrible rumpus.

She went to investigate and found that one of the calves had managed to get through a hole in the fence and onto the road and Lockie was terribly upset about it.

In the Highlands of Scotland the animals are still as wild and ferocious as their appearance indicates, but once domesticated, so to speak, they become quite gentle and amenable. Mr. Mutter says they don't use their horns against people but they will use them against other animals.

He said a breeder near Sardis told him he once saw a cougar trying to attack his herd. He said the animals formed a circle with the calves in the centre and the cougar finally had to retreat.

Highland cattle were first imported to Canada in 1941 by Harry Hays (later a federal Minister of Agriculture) and his brother, Tom. They brought 20 head to their ranch near Brampton, Ontario. They later sold the herd, some going to Nova Scotia, but most of them to the United States.

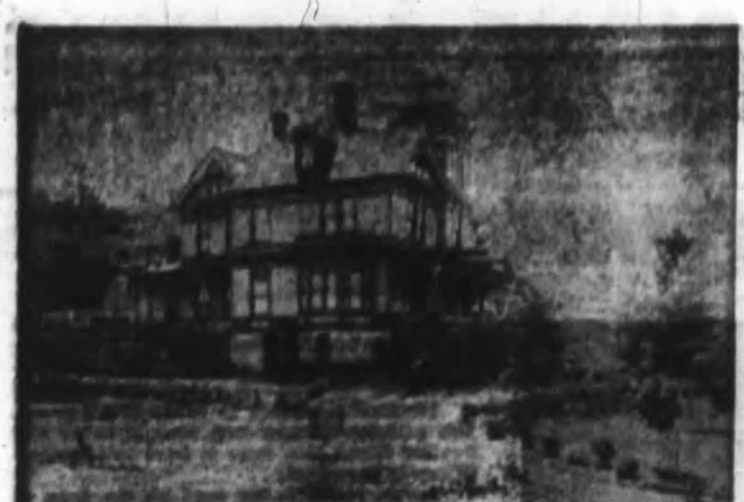
The Hays brothers were also the first to ship cattle by air. In 1946 they bought an army surplus troop carrier, converted it and shipped some cattle to Bogota, Columbia.

Pierre Berton got his first assignment as a cub reporter to fly with the cattle and report the story. On the return flight the plane brought orchids and other exotica. The plane made two trips, but disappeared somewhere in the Caribbean on the third return journey. No trace of plane, pilot or cargo was ever found.

When Harry Hays bought a ranch in the foothills of the Rockies near Calgary next to the EP Ranch, he imported more Highland cattle and tried crossing them with Herefords. The experiment was not a success so the herd was disbanded.

In the intervening years more and more people have become interested in the breeding and raising of Highland cattle. There are 37 listed breeders in Canada and perhaps more unlisted. Of the 37, 23 are in British Columbia which, with its immense areas of logged-over brush-covered land, is ideally suited for them. The beef is tender, as the fat runs all through the meat and doesn't form in layers as it does in other breeds.

So, gourmet restaurant owners, if you want something different to offer your customers try locally raised Highland beef. There are quite a number of herds on Southern Vancouver Island.



THIS FINE photograph of the Shotbolt home came from Mrs. W. A. Hughes in Halifax. Gonzales Hill was then completely bare of houses.

By JAMES K. NESBITT

History reaches its fingers into many places far distant from where it originally had its place. That's part of the fascination of history. Victoria is a small place, relatively, in a relatively remote part of the world, but Victoria, nonetheless is known around the world. People who have lived here, live all over the place, and people who have lived all over the place come to live in Victoria.

What brought this minor outburst about is the fact that I have received a photograph from Halifax. It's of Hollywood, and it came to me from Mrs. W. A. Hughes, of Halifax, who writes: "I am enclosing a picture of the Shotbolt family home years ago, with Gonzales Hill in the background. We discovered this photograph under another picture that had originally belonged to my husband's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Andrew Gray, who lived for so many years at Roslyn at the foot of St. Catherine Street, in Victoria West, overlooking the waters of the Gorge. My husband's mother (Mrs. Langdon Hughes of Kingston, Ont., the former Betty Gray of Victoria) is visiting us just now, and she identified the photograph for us."

This most certainly interested me and sent me digging in the provincial archives to look up once more the lives and times of the Shotbolt family in Victoria. I remember the old house, at the foot of the northwest slopes of Gonzales Hill. When I was a boy, delivering newspapers there, the gardens were well kept, and very formal, and I remember the old Chinese gardener, and the Chinese cook.

Unfortunately for me, the Shotbolts always paid at the newspaper office, by the year, and so it was only at Christmas that I had a chance to peer inside, when Mrs. Shotbolt always gave me a dollar. I remember the big front door, with the panels of colored glass on either side; to me it was the last word in elegance and opulence, and, as I peered I could see gimcracks, white bear rugs and yellow silk blankets, or so I thought them, hanging from the back of the piano. To me it was all most quaint.

The Shotbolts were prominent people in the Victoria of long ago. They were married here in May of 1874, as noted in The Colonist: "Our respected fellow townsman, Thomas Shotbolt, was united in the Holy Bonds of Matrimony to Miss Lavinia Parmiter — at St. John's Church — by the Rev. Percival Jenns.

"Later in the evening the Tiger Engine Company, with torches, proceeded to the residence of the bride's father, and serenaded the happy pair who, in the fullness of their joy did not forget the Printer." (This means champagne and fruit cake were sent to the newspaper office, a custom, alas, long since abandoned.)

Mr. Shotbolt came here from England as a young man; he was a duly qualified druggist, and soon he was in business here. He advertised thusly: 'Thomas Shotbolt, dispensing chemist and druggist, Johnson Street, Victoria, V.I., respectfully solicits the attention of miners and the public in general to his well assorted stock of pure English drugs, chemicals and perfumery.

"Also we stock Mixture Supreme for rheumatism, which is an invaluable remedy for this distressing complaint."

Soon the Shotbolt premises were too small, and a new building went up, which stands today, on the south side of Johnson, just to the west of Government. At one time a golden mortar and pestle were in a high-up niche. Too bad, like so many other links with the past, they are now gone; but then, we must have progress, or whatever it is called. We may grow nostalgic for the olden days, but, then, after all, would we today like to be living in Fort Victoria? We might as well be sensible about it and say "No."

The Colonist described the 1877 Shotbolt building: "Handsome — on the exact site of the old store in which the genial and popular proprietor made his mark and his shekels, is 41 feet wide and 60 feet deep.

It is of brick, with massive walls, two stories high; the ground floor is divided into stores, one of which will be occupied by Mr. Shotbolt as a drug store, and the other by Mr. Nicholson as a grocery.

"The ceilings are lofty and the stores well lighted. In the rear of the drug store is the laboratory and the second floor contains a suite of five rooms in which Mr. Shotbolt and his family will reside.

"The fittings in the drugstore are handsome — the counters being of black walnut, highly polished. The architect is Mr. John Teague; brickwork by Mr. Bullen; carpenter work by Mr. T. Williams; painting by Lettice and Mitchell; plumbing by Stewart and Braden; the store fittings by Mr. Williams and Mr. George Barnett.

Hood's Sarsaparilla was a big seller at Shotbolt's. It was advertised this way — an endorsation by a lady named Mrs. M. E. Merrick of Toronto, and the ad included her picture:

"Good authority has said that 'neuralgia' is the cry of the nerves for pure blood. The prompt action of Hood's Sarsaparilla on the blood, combined with its strong and strengthening effect upon the nerves makes this a grand effect upon the nerves, and a great medicine for catarrh and neuralgia.

"We commend this letter to all having such troubles, and especially to

SUFFERING WOMEN

" 'For a good many years I have been suffering from catarrh and neuralgia and certain female complaints and also

GENERAL DEBILITY

" 'I failed to obtain permanent relief from medical advice and my friends fear I would never find a cure. A short time ago I was induced to try Hood's. At that time I was unable to walk even a short distance, without a feeling of DEATH-LIKE WEAKNESS.

"After three bottles of Hood's I was entirely cured and I am today a CHANGED WOMAN."

Thomas Shotbolt was one of the organizers of the British Columbia Pharmaceutical Association, and its first and long-time president. Here's an account of the 1892 meeting: "— held in Vancouver — the following were elected members of the council for the ensuing two years — T. M. Henderson, Victoria (re-elected); C. S. Curtis, New Westminster, (re-elected), and T. E. Atkins, Vancouver.

"Thomas Shotbolt was re-elected president, Mr. H. McDowell of Victoria, vice-president, and Dr. M. C. Blanchard registrar; and Messrs. T. M. Henderson, Charles Wilson and H. Watson were re-elected to the board of examiners.

"In his annual address, President Shotbolt was able to give a very encouraging account of the progress of the association and the good work being done, and the secretary's report showed a satisfactory state of affairs."

"At St. Barnabas Church — Miss Effie Cole, daughter of Mrs. Cole and the late Captain Cole — and Mr. Arthur Harvey Shotbolt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shotbolt of Hollywood.

"The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Fred Cole, and was most becomingly attired in white silk crepe de chene over taffeta, embroidered with seed pearls. She wore a bridal veil of tullé, with orange blossoms.

"Her only ornament was a handsome gold pendant set with emeralds and pearls, the gift of the bridegroom.

"She was attended by two bridesmaids, and two flower children. The bridesmaids were Miss May Shotbolt and Miss Viva Babbington. The former wore cream crepe de chene over taffeta, with pearl trimming, while the latter was attired in baby blue silk crepe de chene over satin backing. Both wore picture hats, and carried bouquets of pale pink carnations. The flower children were Miss Flossie Woodward and Master Elford, cousin and nephew of the bridegroom.

"The bridegroom was supported by his brother, Mr. Walter Shotbolt, while Messrs. P. A. Babbington, Jr., and A. E. Gallop acted as ushers. The service was fully choral.

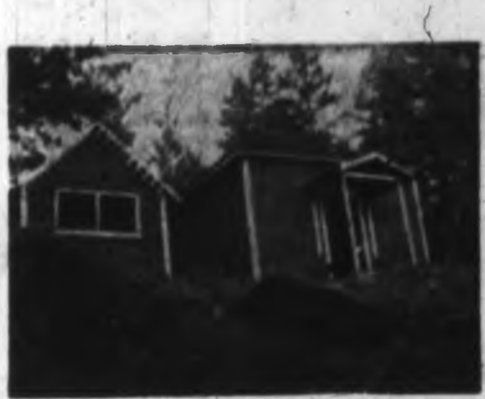
Highland's Little Red Schoolhouse

By R. E. BURNHAM

Only 10 miles from Victoria, with its ever increasing demand for more classrooms, there stands a school whose doors have remained closed for more than 26 years for want of students. In June, 1941, Highland School's pupils, having completed their year's studies, and having been duly grouped, posed and photographed by Gibson's Studios, left for summer vacation and never returned.



CLOSED FOR 26 YEARS.

Perhaps it's not quite true to say that the doors of the school have remained closed all that time. For some while the building has had no doors. Recently when I went to have a look at the place, I found it to be in a poor state or repair. Indeed, the doors, or what was left of them, were lying on the ground in front of the entrance.

Shingles from the roof had been sailed by the wind into even distribution about the yard, and rotted boards were all that remained of front steps. The windows, glass and frames, had all been removed; someone had begun the demolition of the building, but apparently abandoned the effort. At any rate, it looked as if no one had been near the place for a long while. Although the porch would have been easily attained without the use of the former steps, the landing had rotted to such a hazardous condition that it seemed inadvisable to enter the deserted house of learning. All investigation of its interior had to be done from outside.

A look in through the window, hampered somewhat by my having to lift my two small children up for a peek, disclosed that much of the plaster had fallen from the ceiling, and had littered the floor and the teacher's raised teaching platform, although the bracket chimney—so typical of the small buildings built before the turn of the century—was surprisingly still there, firmly attached to the wall.

Somehow I thought that the desks might still be there, but of course they had been removed long ago. In fact, there was an old bedstead in a corner indicating that the building and its grounds have since become private property.

The little one-room teacher's cottage was even more dilapidated. All the shingles were gone from the roof and the floor was rotted out and fallen to the ground beneath. As I looked into this little building, I thought that it must have been included as an afterthought, since it seemed to be of lesser construction than the school, as indicated by the small square hole in the roof—provision for the metal flashing of a stovepipe chimney.

Although the red paint still clings to the walls of the two buildings, almost providing proof, along with the even row of windows in the larger building, that the place was indeed once a schoolhouse, it has changed remarkably since my last visit to it over a quarter century ago.

I was about five years old—a little younger than my son is now—when my parents enrolled my two older sisters in Highland School. I remember going with the family to watch while my father and mother, helped by a long-time resident from Pike Lake, Jim Barker, cut a trail through the woods from the school to the fields that led to our home—some two miles distant—near McKenzie Lake, up at the end of Thetis Lake Road.

The school had been closed already before that year—1940—so that my eldest sister, now Mrs. Vera Sampson, attended her first two years at another school, staying with our uncle, Hill Burnham, who lived, and still lives, near Strawberry Vale. But when my second sister, now Mrs. Phoebe Cunningham, came of school age, my parents, along with other parents in the Highland District, decided to attempt the reopening of the school so that both girls could live at home and still get an education.

The reopening was no simple task. Only after the recruitment of all available children for miles around, and among those were teen-agers already beyond grade school who were furthering their education with correspondence courses, were they finally able to meet the minimum roster of 10 pupils. The resulting ensemblage represented something like grades 1 to 12, and was presided over, in what must have been a formidable task, by Miss Birkenshaw.

And then, in the spring of 1941, before it came to be my time to enter the little school, my parents left the farm beside McKenzie Lake and took part of the minimum enrolment with them. Highland School closed, to the best of my knowledge, forever.

This fall, as I wandered around the site, I was rather disturbed with curiosity about this old building, especially about its location.

Way up there on Millstream Road, miles from anywhere, where population has always been sparse, it seems to have been an impractical spot to build a formal schoolhouse. Once there must have been enough families with enough children to fill the little 20-by-30-foot structure; there must have been a demand, certainly. (The fact that the new Hoy Lake School has been constructed not more than a couple of miles away shows that the demand might someday return.)

Highland School's particular location is even more unusual. Not far in either direction along Millstream Road there are places of relatively flat land, yet the builders decided on a rocky promontory with little play area and which required almost mountain-goat agility to reach. And although the site commands a pleasing panorama of valley and mountain, the view must not have been a consideration since all windows face on the dense forest nearby. Most likely the school had the same problem as its present-day counterparts here in Victoria—difficulty of acquiring suitable land at reasonable prices.

Whether the building has justified its existence for the last 75 years or so is hard to say, but it was important for at least one school year. My sisters can attest that.

"A reception was held at Hawaiklone, the residence of the bride's mother, who was assisted in receiving her guests by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shotbolt, the proud parents of the groom.

"Mrs. Cole was beautifully gowned in grey silk, with silver trimmings, with a wisteria toque hat trimmed with roses and tulle, and Mrs. Shotbolt wore a dress of black silk with embroidered jet panel. The following ladies assisted in entertaining the guests — Miss Christine Renouf, Miss Fredeline Renouf, Miss Milly Tribe, Miss Edith Lawrence, Miss Elsie Morry, Miss Kate Dalby, Miss Alice Dalby, Miss Edith Dalby, Miss Belle Dauphin, Miss Florrie Parfitt, Miss Lilias Bayley and Miss Lenore Black.

(There was another prominent wedding that June evening of 1919:

SHOTBOLTS of VICTORIA

"The marriage of Miss Lillian Bray and Mr. Frederick McGregor, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. McGregor of North Park Street — took place at Metropolitan Methodist Church, and will rank as one of the most brilliant nuptial scenes Victoria has ever witnessed.

"The bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. Raymond Bray, and was beautifully dressed in a pretty cream satin Princess gown with Irish lace yoke and bridal veil caught with orange blossoms; the bride was assisted by Miss Jeanne Macdonald and Miss Winnie McGregor, who looked most pretty wearing pale blue crepe de chene, with silver trimmings.

"At the conclusion of the service, Mr. and Mrs. McGregor drove to the home of the bride's parents in a carriage drawn by four horses.

"Both the bride and groom are among the most popular of the young people of this city, Mr. McGregor being the special agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Company.")

When Thomas Shotbolt built his home at Gonzales it was far in the country. I would think it went up in 1890, when the street car line linked the rural portions of Victoria with the city. The old Foul Bay line, No. 6, ended in the oval just at the end of the Shotbolt driveway. Mrs. Shotbolt lived in the old house until her death in 1945, at the age of 92. The Shotbolt property was then subdivided; today the whole area is filled with new homes and streets.

"—Born in 1842, at Pinchbeck, Lincolnshire, England, and after schooling at Spaulding Classical — was apprenticed to Mr. W. P. Carlton, a Horncastle druggist. At the age of 20 he received his diploma as a chemist, and decided to try his fortune in the New World, and so came to the Cariboo gold country.

"He sailed from England to the Isthmus of Panama on the West Indian mailboat Seine, and travelled on the steamer Golden Gate from Panama to San Francisco, and from San Francisco to Victoria in the Sierra Nevada, arriving in Esquimalt in July of 1862. (This ship on that voyage carried many people who became prominent here, among them William Wilson, grandfather of University of Victoria chancellor Richard B. Wilson, who gave a plaque in memory to his grandfather and the Sierra Nevada, and the Causeway embankment's Parade of Ships in 1962.)

"Mr. Shotbolt first entered business with William Searby, and then struck out for himself. He was prominent in Victoria's business life for many years, being one of the promoters of the city's street railway and lighting system. He was among the first to have a telephone in his home and on his business premises, when a telephone was a novelty people said would not last."

Editorially, The Colonist said of Thomas Shotbolt: "His long and honorable association with this community is known to every citizen in our midst. His death, after a residence of almost 60 years in Victoria, is deeply lamented in many quarters — but that is life, and it must be accepted with a good grace.

"Mr. Shotbolt's activities made him ever a public spirited citizen, a keen business man, and gentleman upright in all his dealings with his fellow men."

In those days, of course, the funeral was almost always held from the residence. Today the practice is entirely gone. Thomas Shotbolt was carried out his big hall door at Hollywood, to nearby Ross Bay cemetery. The pallbearers were John Dean, George Chadwick, J. H. Emery, D. E. Campbell, W. S. Terry, A. S. Staden, A. E. McKeown, Dr. G. L. Milne, W. W. Northcott, C. Dubois-Mason.

Mail Tribulations 100 Years Ago

Struggle for Mail Service Hinged on State of Gold Fever

Mail difficulties are by no means confined to this century in what is today part of Canada but which, a little more than 100 years ago, was the British Colony of Vancouver's Island. Even a cursory perusal of the columns of the pioneer newspaper, The British Colonist, of those days discloses plenty of troubles in the matter of the delivery of Her Majesty's mails. For the Colony, isolated by seas, mountains and plains from the rest of the continent, had only the sea lanes of the Pacific to look to for even a yearly contact with Great Britain or, later, its sister gold city, San Francisco, to the south.

By CORDAY MACKAY ATKINSON

Controversy regarding mail deliveries, subsidies and means of ocean transport raged in Victoria from 1858 until the coming of the transcontinental railway, the Canadian Pacific, following Confederation, settled on a route across Canada to the Atlantic seaboard, thence by steamship to England and the continent of Europe.

In all, early struggles to get better mail delivery from San Francisco via Panama isthmus hinged largely on the periods of collapse and boom of the gold fever in the Pacific colony.

Owing to the large number of goldseekers who came north from the California gold fields demands for a better and quicker mail service with the south became a subject of heated debate, both in private gatherings and in the more sedate meetings of the local legislative council, at first presided over by the punctilious governor, Sir James Douglas, and later by his successor Sir Arthur Edward Kennedy.

Mail by steam packet or steamer was not, however, the first to be handled in what we know today as British Columbia and Oregon. For nearly half a century this vast territory stretching from Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River as far north as Fort St. James, known as the Oregon Country and New Caledonia respectively, was a huge fur preserve of the two rival companies, the older Hudson's Bay and the North West.

The first reported letter or despatch sent from here was by the famous explorer, David Thompson. It was entrusted to Indian couriers who passed it from tribe to tribe and was despatched from Ilk-Kay-Ope Falls in the Oregon territory to the manager of the North West Company post and Stuart's Lake.

It simply stated that the explorer had reached the mouth of the Columbia. It is said to have taken eight months to reach its destination!

The Hudson's Bay had also been sending despatches by express canoes from their headquarters at Fort Vancouver and Fort St. James for many years. Manned by expert Indian paddlers these made the long portages through the Rocky Mountains and kept the company's far-flung posts in touch with each other.

When finally decimal coinage replaced the mother country's pounds, shillings and pence, the rate for carrying was $1 for the first half ounce and 25 cents for each additional ounce.

The first mail out of Fort Victoria was despatched across Puget Sound, then overland to Fort Vancouver, and from there either sent onward to the south by steam packet or up the dangerous Columbia to cross the Rockies for the long trip by canoe to the east.

With the discovery of gold and the almost overnight growth of what had been a fur trading fort to a small city, populated largely by men from the worked-out gold fields of California, debate began in Victoria on the question of better connections with the southern city, San Francisco.

From that centre letters for the north were sent mostly by steam packet to Puget Sound, those for Victoria being forwarded by whatever means was available. Or, alternatively, they were sent by Pony Express from California, having crossed the continent by the same unreliable method.

Frequent complaints were made in Victoria at this time that mail arrived soaked and illegible, or did not arrive at all, having been lost or stolen by hostile Indians on the way. Occasionally, of course, ships of the Royal Navy, putting in at the Esquimalt base, brought letters or parcels from home for the young British colony on the Pacific coast.

On May 1, 1861, The Colonist reported: "A letter was yesterday received from the British Consul at San Francisco advising the authorities here that he had made arrangements with the postmaster of that city as would enable him to send mails forward by steamer in future.

On June 5 of the same year, the paper again reported "The Eliza Anderson carried Victoria mails from San Francisco to Puget Sound. There was a threatened lay-up of the vessel owing to the difficulty of its Captain Fleming in getting his pay. Such a happening would work great hardship on Victoria as this vessel is the only regular means of communication we now possess with the outer world and if we are to lose that we should be almost as isolated from the rest of mankind as Alexander Selkirk on his Island of San Fernandez."

On the same date it was reported that HMS Tartar would leave Esquimalt on Sunday or Monday for Valparaiso via San Francisco and that Wells, Fargo and Co. would send letters and 'treasure express' by her. The Colonist added: "This will prove a great accommodation to our businessmen and citizens generally, in view of the fact that more than three weeks will elapse before we are visited by another mail steamer."

In the meantime Great Britain had not neglected to try and improve the mail service from the homeland to the distant Colony.

In 1858 the British government through the Colonial office considered an "all red" line by extending existing mail packet service between Southampton, Halifax and Nassau at an estimated cost of 25,000 pounds a year, this line to be continued to Colon on the Isthmus of Panama whence mails would be carried across the Isthmus by the Panama Railway Co.

From Panama to Victoria a direct line of British steamers was to be established. But the cost, estimated at 100,000 pounds a year proved prohibitive and the British government had to depend on the good offices of the U.S. government for conveyance of the colonial mails between San Francisco and Victoria.

A stamp, now a collector's item, was issued about that time in Great Britain and shipped from London on Dec. 27, 1859, reaching Colon about February or March of the following year. It was a 2½d stamp for use in the two colonies, Vancouver's Island and British Columbia. The stamp bears Queen Victoria's head in profile and was probably unique in that it was issued before the two colonies were united in one under the name British Columbia.

In 1866 New Westminster, the former capital of the mainland colony, entered into the mail service picture although its venture was to be short-lived. The New Westminster government granted a subsidy of $2,000 a fortnightly round trip to the California Steam Navigation Co., owners of the steamers Active, Del-Norte and California, but navigation difficulties proved numerous and the contract was not renewed after July of that year.

Meanwhile public indignation in Victoria over the lack of anything like an adequate mail service resulted in more and more public protest meetings.

At that time the leading San Francisco newspaper, the Alta California, carried a regular column of Victoria news under the byline Anglo-Saxon. A column of this period comments on the proposed establishment of a regular Pacific packet service to San Francisco. The writer suggested that it had been proposed that the Hudson's Bay Co. steamers, the Labouchere and the Otter, should be engaged for the service.

Finally the amicable agreement whereby the U.S. steamers carried the mail from San Francisco to Victoria gratuitously broke down and loud complaints again arose. The Colonist reported: "The steamer Pacific arrived at 5 a.m. with seven days late news from the seat of war. (The American Civil War had broken out some time previously.) The steamer will bring no more mail matter without the payment of a subsidy of $250 for each trip. The mails consequently were sent forward by the British barque Isle of France announced to leave San Francisco the day after the Pacific.".

This proved but a temporary measure and the necessity for a larger subsidy to the U.S. steamer seemed imperative. But the legislative council was loathe to grant the necessary money and speakers in the chambers studied the drawbacks of the whole system. Among these were the long delays when ships entered the Columbia River and were held up sometimes for days by the dangerous Columbia bar; carelessness in handling the Victoria mails, and the fact that the U.S. vessels first called at the Puget Sound points, making only one short stop at Victoria before beginning their return voyage south thus "giving Victoria citizens no time to answer our letters." This meant another delay of three weeks for outgoing letters or despatches.

At about the same time the idea was put forward that mail delivery of some kind might be arranged with the Colony of Australia. "Mr. Daniel Scott has entered into arrangements with Captain Edwards," said an article in The Colonist, of the ship Humboldt which sails from the Sound direct to Melbourne on the 20th inst."

It was to carry mails and an express consignment to James Bentley Bayne, manager of the Colonial Bank at Melbourne, who was to appoint an agent to re-stamp letters for all parts of Victoria, New South Wales, New Zeland, South Australia, West Australia and Queensland, thereby preventing letters addressed to any part of the colonies lying in the Melbourne office for want of proper postage. Envelopes could be had, with the Colony's stamps, by applying to the office, Wharf Street, opposite J. A. McClure's Auction Rooms.

An ad in a later paper announced that: "Dietz & Nelson's British Columbia and Victoria Express connecting at Victoria with Wells, Fargo and Co. for California, Oregon, the Atlantic States and Europe, also at Yale and Lillooet with Barnard's Cariboo Express," thus indicating the growing importance of the gold industry in the Colony.

Another offer was made from the North West Navigation and Railway Co. of Canada for the mails to travel to the Pacific coast (Confederation had not yet been accomplished so this would be the governments of Upper and Lower Canada.)

The route would be by the Red River, through the Saskatchewan country to Victoria and other western points.

The eastern Canadian governments were strongly opposed to a subsidy being granted to the U.S. government for transportation of mail from Victoria to San Francisco. But the subsiding fortunes of the Fraser River gold rush and the resulting decrease in population of Victoria brought this scheme to an abrupt halt. In 1858, however, the U.S. Government made an offer to the Canadian government "as a measure of reciprocity" for similar services accorded them and agreed to transmit Vancouver Island mail by trail from New York to St. Louis then the terminus of the American Trans-continental Railway.

Ss. LABOUCHERE, wrecked on first return voyage.

This proposed scheme would entail a long overland journey of 2,765 miles, but it was expected it could be done in 25 days by four horse coaches. This, lengthy way it seemed, was a vast improvement in time over the long Panama route, even if Indians did sometimes make off with a mail bag!

However, because of delays, thefts (it was the era of high robbers in the U.S.) and damage most Victoria mail still continued to come by the Panama route until the railway was finally completed to San Francisco.

Gradually the fleet of nondescript vessels which had been granted a subsidy (twice increased) for the work they had undertaken, abandoned the service until only the ill-fated Pacific remained. After it was wrecked residents of Victoria had once again to depend on the overland mail via Sacramento, Portland and Port Townsend. From the latter point it was brought to Victoria by the steamer Eliza Anderson. This, too, proved unsatisfactory for letters were again damaged or stolen on the road and finally the purser of the Eliza Anderson refused to handle it free of charge.

He demanded $500 a month in payment and said he "did not care if the mail bags were left behind or not." The owners of the vessel after lengthy negotiations at last agreed to carry the Victoria mail for $500 a year and the service was resumed.

Over the next few years arrangements made to keep Victoria in touch by letters with the outside world met with many criticisms and reverses. The legislative assembly granted a subsidy to the Hudson's Bay Company steamer, the Labouchere.

It had arrived on the coast in 1859 and had been engaged in the company's northern coastal trade. The vessel was reconditioned at a cost of $30,000 and for a subsidy of $1,500 a round trip went into service on the basis of a fortnightly schedule. Captain Mouat, master of the vessel, was appointed mail agent and authorized to open mail bags en route and sort letters for Victoria in order to expedite delivery, on arrival.

Unfortunately the Labouchere was wrecked on her first return voyage when but a few miles out of San Francisco on April 15, 1866. Governor Kennedy at once concluded a contract with the California, Oregon and Mexican Steamship Co. on almost the same terms and conditions as the Hudson's Bay vessel had been given. Rates at that time were: New Westminster 5c for ½ oz.; California 8c; Canada and British North America, 15c; U.S. 15c; Great Britain and Ireland 30c.

But because the legislature did not agree with the governor the chambers frequently resounded with charge and counter-charge regarding the mail service. The famed orator and colorful local character Amor De Cosmos opened his heaviest guns on the service provided by the vessels carrying the mail to San Francisco "at present."

He claimed the contract had been given to a "foreign country" to the exclusion of native contractors. Member Brewster, supporting the criticism, characterized the steamships of the Pacific as "floating coffins" and "not fit to carry coal." Mr. Dewdney, defending the contracting company, claimed the boats put on this service were good vessels.

Finally De Cosmos moved for correspondence and reports concerning the tragic loss of the Pacific (it, one of the recent vessels employed in the service, had also been wrecked) and his motion carried.

In retaliation for these charges in the legislature Otis Freeman, Travellers Agent for the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. of the North Pacific Coast, wrote to the postmaster general, Ottawa, Canada: "Statements in Parliament by Messrs De Cosmos, Brewster, Thompson and Casey are utterly without foundation. See American Lloyds register for classification of City of Panama and Dakota, the steamer Pacific was not owned by Pacific Mail Co. as was well-known to the speakers. The Company courts inspection of their steamers.

But the days of complete isolation if mails were cut off were numbered. By 1870 the "electric telegraph" whose invention had a good many years earlier excited the world, arrived at the boundary between the colony and the American state. Soon New Westminster was linked up to the southern American lines and poles and lines were erected in the northern wilds of British Columbia, until then unknown except in areas where gold had been discovered.

Later a cable carried news by wire to Victoria. Then came the promise of a transcontinental railway across Canada from "sea to sea" to assure the final linking up of an "all red" line of mail communication with the Mother Country as well as the eastern provinces.

However, the subsidy paid to U.S. government vessels to carry mail to San Francisco was paid for a long time — until 1925, in fact, when lack of need for the service caused it to be withdrawn.

Henceforth mail difficulties were largely confined to "acts of God" hampering the railways . . . floods, mountain slides, snowstorms, until a hundred years later when rising costs of living caused strikes for higher pay on the part of postal personnel — thus cutting Victoria off at times from letter communication with the world.

RABBIT CYCLE

The so-called rabbit cycle is common to all rabbits, but there is no real agreement on the length of the cycle or the cause for it.

Undoubtedly, many factors are involved and the cycle seems to vary from seven to 12 years.

Generally speaking rabbits fall into three groups, the cotton tail, the snowshoe and the jack rabbit. The cotton tail and his cousins the swamp and brush rabbit are true rabbits. The snowshoe and jack rabbit, on the other hand, belong to the family of hares. Rabbits are the most sought after game animals on this continent.

RESIN AND ROSIN

What is the difference between resin and rosin? Resin is a thick, usually amber-colored liquid which exudes from many trees and plants, particularly following an injury. It is composed of acids which form after oxidation of terpenes. The resin from these trees is distilled to obtain turpentine and rosin. Rosin is a solid amber-colored, brittle substance. It is used in manufacturing paper, soap, paint and varnish and a long list of other products.

CREATURES OF THE WILD . . . ARE WILD

Man unconsciously humanizes animals. He attributes to them cruelty, vindictiveness, hate, meanness, fear, bravery and cowardice, not realizing these are but vague terms conveying different meanings to different persons and applicable to man only.

For this reason he is inclined to lose sight of the fact that "killing" is an unsocial act only in human communities and that among the animal population it is vital to existence. The killing of the week for the benefit of the strong, the survival of those best fitted to survive, the balance in numbers brought about by various complex forms of relationship is still the law of the animal world in which man is an intruder at all times.

Thus predation is an integral part of the machinery by which all animal populations are made to function.

PALE SNAILS, BRIGHT SNAILS

In color, shape, and size there is an endless and fascinating variety of snails, from the little brown snail of our lakes to the rainbow-hued tree snails of the tropics; from the smooth round moon-snail to the beautiful murexes with arrays of spines and varices; from the infinitesimal Melanella to the huge bailer-shell used by the aborigines of the Pacific for a canoe-bailer and water-container. Most snails are coiled from the right and are said to be dextral, but quite a number, especially land and fresh-water species, coil from the left and are sinistral. A few species have both dextral and sinistral forms.

On Hand Snacks and Tu

October kitchens are humming with activity. Regular meals are now necessary, fall appetites are hearty and hospitality and entertaining has accelerated. There are lunch boxes to fill, after school eating and snacks beside the fireplace. In most homes, Mother is doing more baking.

Tea time favorites are old English scones or tea biscuits. In Britain scones are served as part of the menu for afternoon tea. Here in Canada we like them for tea, for breakfast or for brunch or lunch. They can be a taster for an evening meal. In fact they are jolly good any time of the day. Scones are similar to tea biscuits, usually we cook scones on a griddle on top of the stove while we bake the tea biscuits in a hot oven. Actually the same ingredients can be made up and cooked either way. Scones and biscuits offer a variety of flavors . . . the addition of grated cheese is delicious or add raisins or chopped glace fruit. Plain biscuits or scones make wonderful bases for strawberry jam or marmalade.

In the old English tradition, plain biscuits buttered, are spread with raspberry jam and topped with a generous spoonful of whipped or Devonshire cream. Fruited biscuits serve well as on-hand snacks, tuck-ins for lunch boxes or as breakfast treat.

Every once in a while a cook makes a discovery . . . recently I found out that a small quantity of corn starch in place of part of the flour in biscuits or scones gives a lighter, finer textured product. Do try the following recipe.

TEA BISCUITS OR SCONES . . . 1¼ cups all purpose flour, ¼ cup cornstarch, ½ tsp. salt, 1 tsp. baking soda, 2 tsp. cream tartar, 4 Tbsp. sugar, 4 Tbsp. butter or margarine and 1-3 to ½ cup milk. Sift flour, cornstarch, salt, soda and cream of tartar together in a bowl. Mix in the sugar. Cut in the butter or margarine with fork or pastry blender until fine crumbs form. Stir in milk, mixing until the dough gathers easily into a ball. The dough should be really soft.

Turn onto a floured board, knead once or twice. Pat out ¾ to 1-inch thickness. Cut out with a 1½ or 2-inch cutter or divide in two pieces, pat out into circles and cut in wedges for scones. Place on lightly greased baking sheet, brush the tops with milk. Bake in a [illegible] to 450 degree F. oven for 10 to 15 minutes or until lightly browned.

To this basic recipe can be added ½ cup raisins, chopped glace fruit or dates. For a savory biscuit add 1 tsp. dry mustard and 1-cup grated cheese.

With children back at school the demands on the cookie jar have increased. The following cookie and bar recipes are quick and easy to prepare because they call for corn oil instead of a solid shortening. With corn oil you simply pour, measure and mix, thus eliminating the extra work of creaming or melting solid fats. Fudge brownies are an especially delicious version of an old favorite. When baked they will have formed their own crisp sugary topping. Prune bars are moist and chewy morsels.

FUDGE BROWNIES . . . 2-3 cup sifted cake or pastry flour, ½ tsp. baking powder, ¼ tsp. salt, 2 eggs, 1 cup sugar, ¼ cup corn oil, 2 ozs. unsweetened chocolate melted (or 2 ozs. melted unsweetened chocolate in foil packages), 1 tsp. vanilla and ½ cup coarsely-chopped nuts. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together, set aside. Beat eggs well in mixing bowl. Gradually add sugar and beat well. Mix in corn oil, melted chocolate and vanilla. Stir in sifted dry ingredients and nuts. Mixing well. Turn into a greased 8x8-inch cake pan. Bake in a 350 degree F. oven until

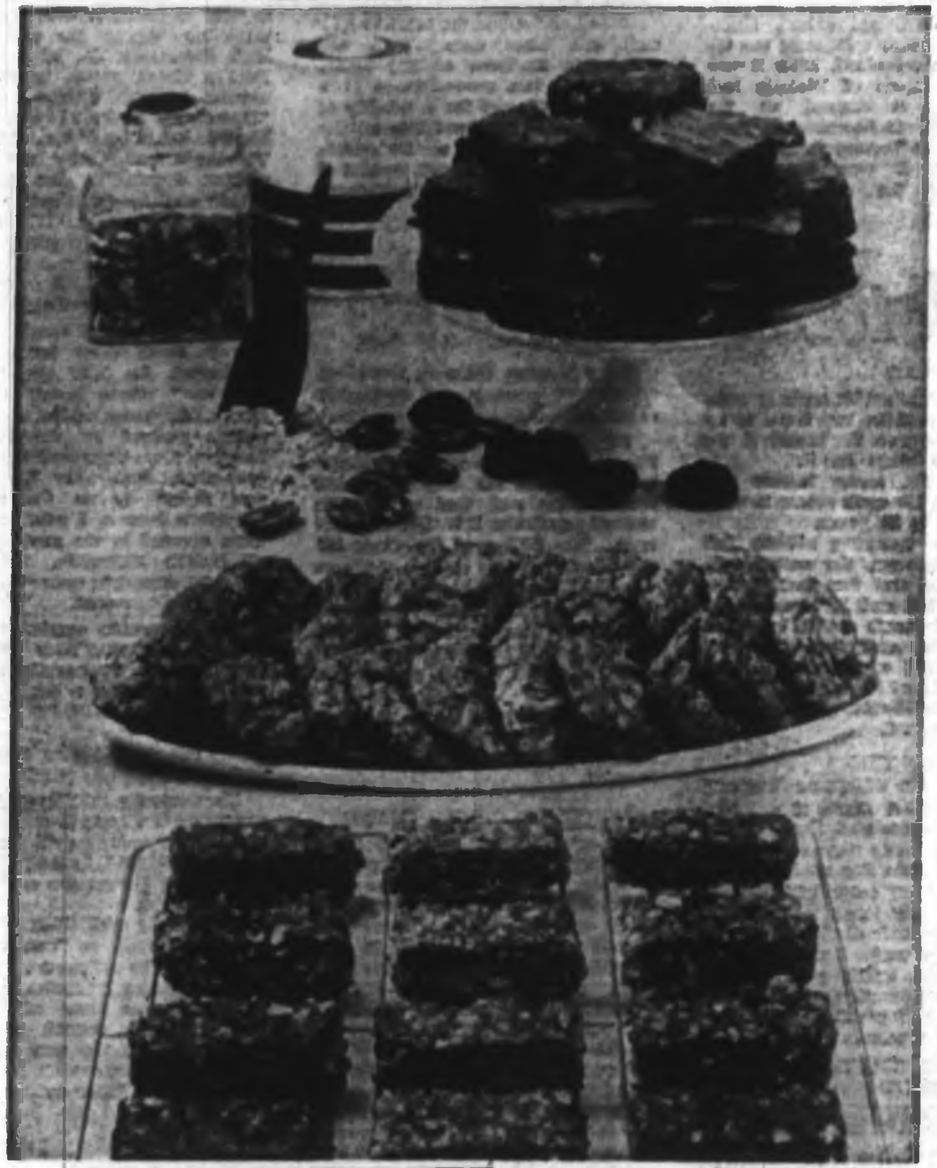
TEA-TIME FAVORITES



hints from Helois

DEAR HELOISE:

Don't laugh at this one, because even my neighbor thought I was cracked when she came into my house and saw it, but it's really the greatest.

All you have to do is clip one on the end of the spoon. This is especially good when cooking puddings or gravy which need to be stirred every thirty seconds or so and you have to stop to flour the steak, etc.

PRUNE-NUT BARS . . . 1 cup sifted all purpose flour, 1 cup sugar, ¼ tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, ⅓ cup corn oil, 2 eggs unbeaten, ¼ cup milk, ½ tsp. vanilla, ½ tsp. grated lemon rind, 1 cup finely-chopped prunes uncooked and 1 cup chopped nuts. The recipe calls for uncooked prunes but if they are scalded before chopping it softens them a bit. Just pour the boiling water on and right off. Drain well.

Mix and sift the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Make a well and add in order the corn oil, eggs, milk, vanilla and lemon rind. Beat with a spoon until nice and smooth. Add the chopped prunes and nuts. Mix well. Turn into a greased baking pan 9x12 inches. Bake in a 350 degree F oven for about 35 to 40 minutes. Cut into bars while warm. Dust top with icing sugar.

Rolled Oat cookies are favorites with almost everyone . . . this recipe, also using handy corn oil is particularly nice.

OAT-WALNUT COOKIES . . . 1¾ cups sifted all purpose flour, 1 tsp. baking soda, 1 tsp. allspice, ½ tsp. salt, 1 cup corn oil, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs slightly beaten, ½ cup milk, 2 cups quick oats, 1 cup raisins and 1 cup chopped nuts.

MURIEL WILSON'S THOUGHT FOR FO[illegible]

Sift flour, baking soda, allspice and salt together, set aside. Combine corn oil and sugar in a mixing bowl. Add eggs and ¼ cup of the milk. Blend well. Stir in sifted dry ingredients, the remaining ¼ cup milk, the oats, raisins and walnuts. Drop the batter by teaspoonfuls onto ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in 375 degree F oven until lightly browned, about 12 to 15 minutes. Makes about 4 dozen 2½-inch cookies.

These cookies freeze well so next time you are baking, double the recipe, bake both batches then freeze one. Simply cool, then arrange the cookies in a box, separating the layers with saran or wax paper. Wrap the box in freezer paper. Stored in this way the cookies will keep for months. Sometimes I make several kinds of cookies and bars at a time and make up boxes of assorted cookies for the freezer. These are particularly handy for unexpected company. Tea biscuits and scones also freeze well.

Readers are still asking for pear recipes so let's finish with CONFETTI STUFFED PEARS . . . 8 pears, halved and cored, 2 Tbsp. sugar, 6 Maraschino cherries chopped, 24 blanched and toasted almonds chopped and ½ cup sherry. Peel and cut pears in half lengthwise, remove cores. Fill each pear half with a mixture of the sugar, cherries and almonds. Arrange in shallow baking dish, pour sherry over. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 15 to 20 minutes or until pears are tender but not soft. Serve warm with pouring or whipping cream.

BRIDE'S CORNER

To make Chinese Plum Sauce . . . Mix a little dry mustard into greengage plum jam.

To prevent the bottom crust of custard or pumpkin pie from becoming soggy . . . pre-cook the bottom crust for 5 minutes in a preheated 450 deg. F. oven before adding filling. This seals the pastry and prevents the filling from soaking into the crust.

Use leftover sweet pickle vinegar to make mint sauce. Just heat and pour over chopped mint. Use it to pickle beets or to baste ham or spare ribs.

Add a tablespoon or two of mayonnaise to mashed potatoes for extra flavor. Add chopped cooked ham to scrambled eggs for extra heartiness.

CAFE AU LAUNDRY

DEAR HELOISE:

Put the two panels of the curtains together, face to face, stitch down the sides and across the bottom, then turn the bag right side out. Run heavy cord through the round loops . . . and you have a laundry bag for home or camp!

Saves my hands and I have no more wet, rusty pads under the sink!

"GONE FISHING!"

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a suggestion for fishermen:

Cut both ends out of a coffee can and get two plastic lids that fit, one for each end. Punch a few small holes in the lids. Cover one end with a plastic lid, dump in your worms and damp earth and cover the other end with the other lid. The worms will work their way down to or close to the bottom of the earth. When you want a worm for bait, just turn the can over, remove the plastic lid, and the worms will be right there on top, easy to grab.

DEAR HELOISE:

When plastic shower curtains fade, or I get tired of them, I cut them into squares.

A MAN WITH A RIFLE GUARDED SEAL SKINS

WEST BAY HAS CHANGED

. . . says MRS. E. M. SWEENEY, daughter of famed sealing captain Victor Jacobson, who reminisces about 'the old days'

In later years, when most of the family had gone their own ways, Mother decided the "Big House" in West Bay lived up to its nickname all too well. So Father made over the sail loft into a comfortable dwelling which we came to affectionately call The House on the Wharf. It was here that my brothers, Otto and Victor, and I enjoyed some of our greatest childhood adventures.

West Bay 70 years ago was in its natural state, beautiful and quiet, unspoiled by hundreds of homes, automobiles, and high-rise apartments. Our property was quite large; it has since been cut up, a few of the lots being taken over by the municipality of Esquimalt as part of its equipment yard.

I try not to think of it as it is today, but as it was when I was a little girl: The Big House, the House on the Wharf, our 300-foot float and dock, where my father's sealing schooners tied up.

Before the sail loft, a huge square building my father had built to house the sails from his schooners, was converted to a comfortable home, I had spent many enjoyable hours investigating its delightful mysteries and smells. There were four large rooms on the main floor, leading onto the wharf, which were workshops. Then there was a long walk leading up to the front door, with a shed about 50 feet alongside, and two steps leading down from the main walk.

Even today, I can see in my mind a man with a rifle stationed at either door, guarding the seal skins, all salted down in barrels, against any would-be thieves. These hides were waiting to be shipped to London to be sold at auction.

The sails were hung from the ceiling on ropes to dry and be mended. The workshops were especially interesting to me, as my Uncle Gus, who had been trained as a shipwright in the same shipyard as my father, in Helsingfors, Finland, was always busy building sealing boats and repairing parts of the schooners. The shavings were always so nice and curly and lovely to walk upon in my bare feet.

This nearly caused my death one day, when I was quite little.

I had rowed out to the sealing schooner, Eva Marie, which Father had named after me. There had been a lot of work done on her, putting in new railings, and of course the shavings had gone into the sea, which was calm, and were floating alongside. When I decided to go home, I went down the ladder—then stepped onto the carpet of shavings, thinking I could walk across to my boat.

Down I went to the bottom, as it was far over my head. On coming up, I blessed Otto for having taught me how to swim. This I had learned the hard way. He had taken me out in one of the sealing boats then, after lecturing me on what I was to do and what I was not to do, he calmly pulled the plug out of the bottom of the boat. She slowly sank to the bottom, leaving me floundering in the water. Of course Otto was right at hand, but to me it was swim or else. So I swam. From then on I had no fear of the water, and on the occasion of the shavings I had little difficulty rescuing myself.

When the sail loft was renovated, there was a very large living room, where we held many parties, and Mother's parlor, where she held her afternoon teas as she had many friends. Then there was a very large kitchen with the big black cookstove, where the fire was lit at 5:30 every morning by Father, winter or summer, and on went the coffee pot.

CAPT. VICTOR JACOBSON, 1888.

MRS. MINNIE JACOBSON, 1905.

By 6 o'clock he'd had his two cups of coffee, and after boosting up the fire so the house would be warm for Mother and us children, off he would go to his workshop to see what repairs were needed that day, then back for breakfast at 8 a.m. At 3 p.m. on went to coffee pot again, and that was Father's time for entertaining. Regardless of who was at the house they must be asked to coffee and a big piece of coffee cake made fresh every day by my mother.

Also on the ground floor were a large bathroom and pantry, and a bedroom for Mormor, my grandmother. There were four bedrooms upstairs and I was always intrigued by the hidden cupboards on either side of the enclosed stairway leading up to the third floor, which contained the guns and rifles used by the hunters on Father's schooners, in the sealing trade. During the 1914-18 war the police raided our home and confiscated these guns which were so old by that time, I don't believe any of them could be fired.

There were no supermarkets in those days. The butcher and groceryman came to one's door, driving a horse and two-wheeled cart, took the order and delivered the same day.

Then we had our vegetable Chinaman, who one day was very badly bitten by a large dog in our neighborhood and came to my mother for help. She treated the wound and from then on he considered her his best friend. So when he went to China every other year he always brought back a present for her. One year it was a bolt of pure white China silk. Mother had my cousin Svea's trousseau made from this silk and it was really lovely.

Then one year it was a pound of tea which was valued at $10 a pound. On very special occasions Mother let me put a pinch of this in with the ordinary tea. I remember it lasted for years.

There were glass cases of Oriental dolls which depicted the emperor and his wife and family, and many others, all done in wax and very beautiful.

Last, he brought her a carved Oriental chair which she used as her special chair for years. I remember it as most uncomfortable, but, as Mother said, it was the thought behind it. (And we were never to look a gift horse in the mouth.)

Mother and Father loved to dance, and many a party was held, both in the Big House and in the House on the Wharf. Mother had many beautiful ball gowns made by my aunt, who was a professional dressmaker and tailoress. She used to move into a home for about three months and there she spent all her time sewing. She did this with most of the prominent families in Victoria. In those days a lady of means had her own personal dressmaker.

One dress of my mother's was of black satin with an overdress of black net, all hand embroidered with black sequin butterflies. She was a very pretty woman, and often was proclaimed the Belle of the Ball.

For years on Mother's desk sat a full-sized glass revolver. It had been full of rum, and was first prize for her waltzing. She and Father had driven in their horse and buggy to a dance far out at Sooke, and Mother had won this prize. They decided to leave early before the road became congested with other horses and buggies, and on the way home joked about what Mother was going to do with the revolver she was holding in her lap.

They soon found out, for a man jumped out of the bushes and grabbed the horse's reins. But before he could demand their money and jewelry, Father grabbed the glass revolver and levelled it at him. The thief was gone like a shot. By that time all the other people had arrived, and they all had a good laugh at the incident.

Mother had a very beautiful necklace which she often wore to a ball. It was yanked from her neck one evening while she was dancing, and the thief got away in the crowd. Not long afterwards, a small parcel came for her in the mail, containing the necklace, minus one stone. Of course Mother had known all along that it was paste.

Father used to boast that he was as strong as an ox, and he looked it. He was known for the tremendous size of his hands and the terrific strength in them. He used to tell about when he was invited with Mother to a ball at Government House, and the men had to wear white kid gloves. He had to have a pair made specially for him, as none large enough could be bought in the stores. At the ball he decided that he looked like a fop leisurely holiday, cruising around the islands, and handling ropes on a ship. He tried to get them off, but they wouldn't budge. So he stood in the middle of the dance floor and ripped them to shreds, much to my mother's chagrin.

There was another interesting anecdote concerning dances. My cousin Svea lived with us until her marriage. One evening she had been out with her fiance to a dance, and came home at 2 o'clock in the morning. There was a long verandah running across the back of the house. The pantry window was low, opening onto this porch. My grandmother had a table in the pantry on which she used to place her large pans of fresh milk to form cream, under this window.

As Svea opened the back door, over went the milk pans and the table in the pantry with a clatter, and out of the window jumped a man covered in milk, who ran for his life. Of course Svea's screams aroused the whole family, but by the time my father got up the man was nowhere in sight.

Father had a very heavy safe in the dining room in which he used to keep the pay for his seal hunters. He had lost the combination and the safe had stood locked and empty for years. The burglar had made little piles of paper on the floor around the safe and set them afire while he was trying to get it open. The pieces of paper had come from an office at Work Point Barracks. My father figured the man had had a big enough scare and wouldn't be back.

I remember the summers when the family piled into our gasboat Belle and we would have a leisurely holiday, cruising around the islands, and especially the day we found the "pussycat" floating on a log off Sidney Island. It had been injured and was in great pain. We took him on board and Mother fixed him up even though she realized that he was a skunk.

He became a great pet, and never once disgraced himself in his own home. There were certain people he didn't like but he always waited until they had left our house before letting them know what he thought of them. Then one day he floated in to our landing with a bullet through his head. We kids mourned Sidney, for that is the name we gave him.

Although Victoria has changed so over the years, I can remember it as it was about the turn of the century quite vividly. Sometimes too vividly. For example: I do not know when the sea wall was built in front of Ross Bay Cemetery but I can remember as a young girl sitting in a sealing boat with Father rowing in the stern, pushing his oars forward and facing the bow, as that was the way it was done while hunting the seals. There had been a terrific gale the day and night before, but now the sea was calm.

There were coffins floating around, some with bodies in them and some had smashed up on the beach, leaving bones and debris. The heavy seas had washed out the graves. I had to sit in the boat while Father helped other men to clear it up. We still get the terrific gales, but now there is the sea wall, although at times that part of Dallas Road has to be shut off as logs and driftwood still fling themselves over the wall and onto the road.

Another memory is that of the soldiers from Work Point Barracks marching to church on Sunday mornings, led by two or three officers who were mounted. They always looked so smart, in their red coats and white pith helmets. At the bottom of Head Street there was a huge sign in the form of a man's watch, with the name of a jeweler on it. Whenever the horses got to that sign they always reared and became unmanageable.

In the early hours one morning, when the moon was bright, my father was awakened by such a din that, thinking someone must be smashing up his schooner which was moored in the bay near the house, he grabbed his rifle and ran out of the house. Instead, he found it was a group of soldiers smashing up the sign, so he ran back to the house, dropped his rifle, and grabbed his sledge hammer and went out to help them finish the job. From then on, there was no more trouble with the horses.

My fondest memories are of the summers, our landing which ran out into the bay for about 300 feet loaded with kids in their swimming suits, yelling and screeching, and Pa racing down between them in his bright red flannel underwear and jumping in off the deep end, after pushing in several of the bigger kids, and laughing and swimming like a fish. He never owned a bathing suit.

But time changes everything. The Big House still is standing, and has been fixed up by its latest owners. But West Bay is not like it was when I was a little girl. Now, where once my father anchored his sealing schooners, only small pleasure boats and the odd workboat are to be seen bustling about.

Manning Park, one of B.C.'s provincial parks, until recently contained 200,000 acres of mountains, valleys and magnificent scenery. It is essentially a mountain park with deep, narrow valleys and heavily-forested mountains with a good ski area, some very interesting trails to scenic plateaus, lakes and campsites. In winter it is a fairyland of giant mountains of pristine white dipping to snow-covered trenches torn by glassy frozen creeks. Its boundaries extend from the west gates, 16 miles from Hope, 30 miles east to the Tower's ranch; from the U.S. border to the headwaters of Shipsaw Creek, its northernmost extremity. This park is well used by the public due to its accessibility and nearness to Vancouver and the fact the Hope-Princeton Highway passes through the middle of it. It offers a year-round playground to skiers, fishermen and campers.

MANNING PARK

BEFORE and AFTER

We in B.C. owe George Melrose, a district forester in Kamloops, a vote of thanks for his foresight in the late 1920s for recognizing the value of this large alpine tract for parks. Manning Park is part of the Kamloops Forest District and Mr. Melrose was going through looking for open grazing land, which comes under the Forest Service, when he went through the Three Brothers Plateau and realized its potential for the future.

By LORRAINE HARRIS

With the assistance of the population of Princeton he brought this to the attention of the government and the whole area was held as a game reserve. Beef cattle and sheep had previously grazed here for a small fee paid to the government. In 1942, at the insistence of the Princeton Board of Trade, the Three Brothers Mountain Park was gazetted as a provincial park and named after the then Chief Forester of the Province, C. E. Manning.

At this time a cairn was erected at Similkameen Falls in honor of Mr. Manning who lost his life in a plane accident.

The Falls were then within the park boundaries and from there to the existing eastern boundaries there were many pieces of privately-owned property. Prospectors were allowed to stake within the park and many staked in this area. The boundaries were then changed to accommodate the mining interests and the cairn moved to its existing site in front of the administration buildings at Pinewoods, the name given to the lodge and overnight accommodation in the Park, and it is in this area the ranger station is situated.

It is interesting to note that after the deletion of this land from the Park, not one claim was registered. Will the current deletion of nearly 2,000 acres again for mining interests follow the same pattern as the 1950 deletion? Also, does this new tract contain what could be one of the Park's finest future skiing slopes?

The area had a very interesting history previous to being gazetted as a park. Trappers and miners were in this area before it was gazetted for a park. A Mr. Johnson trapped marten, mink and beaver here before 1900. In 1904 and 1905 brothers known as "the State of Mainers", because they were from the State of Maine, USA, took many pelts and much money from this alpine plateau.

Two brothers, Harry and Bill Gurdon, walked over the mountains from Hope and trapped the Three Brothers Plateau area from 1906 to 1941. All of these trappers headquartered at the confluence of the Chewanton, Castle Creek and the Similkameen River, at what is now Mule Deer campsite east of Pinewoods, and then called Poverty Flats because of the poor trapping there, but it was good camping.

The Big Ben Mine, at the headwaters of the Similkameen, has never been operated as a producing mine, but the claim has been improved each year and could be mined as it was staked before the Park was gazetted. Essential development work was done on Bolivar, Canam and Robinson claims. All claims were proven and are in good standing.

Besides these claims, around 1910, was the Steamboat Mountain claim. Steamboat Mountain is on the west boundary of the Park above and east of Skagit River approximately four miles before the Skagit enters Ross Lake.

This claim produced very rich samples and the story goes that the entrance was well guarded with two guards on duty and no one allowed beyond this point. An old prospector knowing the guards, brought up some liquid refreshments and in a short time as the liquor was consumed the guards relaxed the rules and he was able to obtain some good samples.

The assay done on these samples proved them to be Oregon gold (gold from the State of Oregon) — in other words, a salted claim. On the western slopes of Steamboat Mountain there is today the remains of what was the hotel in Steamboat City, the mining town.

Before the completion of the Hope-Princeton Highway Nov. 14, 1949, three trails were used for passage through this mountain country, the Skyline Trail, the Allyson Pass Trail and the Hope Pass Trail.

The Skyline Trail was used by the Indians for many years when they went to the mountains for marmot (commonly known as the whistler) for the soft furry hides which were used for making their sleeping bags, and for the interior berries they dried to bring back to the coast. They traded dried salmon and other coast commodities for the ochre at Princeton to use in their dyes and paints. Princeton was known as Vermillion Flats because of the red clay in this region.

Skyline Trail started at the confluence of the Skagit River and Ross Lake on the U.S. border, went up over the Coast Mountains into the Lightning Lakes area and down into Princeton. It also went into the Flat Top Mountains through the Ashnola.

The Hope Pass Trail followed the Royal Engineers' wagon road to the Skagit Bluffs and up Snass Creek where it forked. One fork joined the Indian Blackeye trail, the other went down Whipsaw Creek to Princeton. This trail was continued, at the instigation of Governor Douglas, through the Ashnola and the Flat Top Mountains over Anarchist Mountain after gold was discovered at Rock Creek to guard Canadian interests there.

The Allyson Pass Trail followed the old wagon road built by the Royal Engineers in 1859 and 1860 to Skagit Bluffs and almost followed what is now the present road. This trail and the pass are named after the government representative who was a pioneer in the Princeton area. The Allyson Pass Trail was known as the lower road and was always kept open as it was easier winter travelling for prospectors and trappers. It was gradually improved from the Princeton side into a wagon road and during the depression years of the 1930s relief camps were set up and the men completed a rough wagon road from Princeton to Allyson Pass, an altitude of 4,400 feet.

The Indians were, of course, the first to travel the mountain using these passes and then came engineers of the Great Northern Railroad and a reconnaissance crew who went through the Three Brothers Plateau doing a survey to bring the Great Northern from the U.S. to its terminal at Keremeos and on the the coast.

This route didn't come to pass as the CPR built the Coquihalla Railroad from Hope to Princeton where it met the mainline from Spence's Bridge to Kamloops. Also the Coquihalla went past the Chain Lakes to Peachland.

The Engineers were followed by developers who staked lots by the river at what is now known as Castle Campsite. They staked all over the mountainside and as high as the 5,000-foot level. There were some very large lots laid out in the area of the existing ranger station and the stakes can still be found there. This development fell through when the Great Northern did not build the railroad.

Timber licences procured before the gazetting of the park are still held by the stakers and the timbers could still be logged. These licences were procured by the individual staking one square mile of timber and surveying and registering it for a small fee with the provincial government. The licences remain valid as long as the ground rental continues to be paid, or the timber is removed and royalty paid the government. If the ground rental is not paid the licence is surrendered. No licences have been granted since the plateau was gazetted as a park.

Good timber tracts far back in the mountains were often discovered by prospectors who sold this information to loggers or companies for about 50 cents an acre for the information and guiding.

A man closely connected with the planning of the Park was Forest Ranger Robert "Bob Boyd." He came well equipped for this job after 12 years in the forest service throughout B.C. and had been engaged in parks work for several years, opening parks on Vancouver Island, constructing and planning with the assistance of the forester, their layout. In 1937, for example, he opened the first trail from Stude (Bella Coola) in through the Rainbow Mountains into Tweedsmuir Park, in preparation for Lord Tweedsmuir to make the trip.

During the war years when all parks were closed he was engaged in straight forestry work. This together with his work in the Port Alberni district prepared him well for the 1946 appointment as Forest Ranger in Manning Park.

Bob went into the Park over the wagon road from Princeton to the Three Brothers Plateau. From 1946 to 1948 he spent constructing trails, fighting fires, and general reconnaissance in the Park. He had the help of only two men in 1946 and 1947 when he built the barn where it still stands, for the saddle and pack horses used to cover this rugged area between 1946 and 1949 when reconnaissance was carried out for the development of the park.

The park was already started when the Hope-Princeton Highway was opened in the fall of 1949. In 1949 contracts were let for the ranger station and Pinewoods buildings, the lodge and gas station. These were completed in the spring of 1950 and the Park was officially opened in May, 1950, with many of B.C.'s major forestry men attending.

One very important thing Ranger Boyd did was to bring to the attention of then Chief Forester C. D. Orchard the fact that mining claims could be staked within the Park limits and that parks lands could possibly be completely taken over by mining claims. This was after a man and his wife attempted to stake claims in the Lightning Lakes area, one of the main attractions of the Park, and were stopped by the ranger. This fact was brought to the attention of the government, causing the Act to be changed prohibiting prospecting and the staking of claims in any Class A park.

Robert Boyd, early seeing the value of a road to the Alpine Meadows atop the Three Brothers Mountain to the north of the lodge, started to convert the existing trail into a proper road. This was later improved with the help of the B.C. Telephone Company to supply access to their micro-wave tower on top of the mountain.

So much a part of the work and life of the park was Ranger Boyd, he was often called The Laird of Manning Park and his men had a sign painted to this effect and hung in the dining hall of the ranger station. When he retired in 1963 after 17 years continuous service in Manning Park and 29 years in the forest service, the parks branch appointed a park supervisor resident at the station. But Mr. Boyd, the Laird of Manning Park, could not leave this area he had worked so hard for, for so many years, and he now lives on his gentleman's farm at Rosedale.

The park he developed from raw land contains a lodge, dining-room, coffee shop, motels and stable for riding horses all operated by a concessionnaire. Manning being a year round park, offers winter activities such as skiing, skating, tobogganing and sleigh riding. There are modern ski lifts and good snow conditions in Gibson's Pass accessible from the Lodge by motor road—car travel is possible right to the ski area.

Christmas at Pinewoods is enjoyed by many city dwellers and is booked for months ahead by those seeking an old-fashioned Christmas. The Park buildings are beautifully decorated with many colored lights and the high alpine architecture outlines in color against winter's white mantle creates a fairyland effect.

In summer the park is at its best and offers adequate camping areas under the supervision of the park's service which guarantees clean, attractive and well planned campsites for tenting or trailering. Black bears in the vicinity of the ranger station are comparatively tame and are a tourist attraction.

There is fishing and boating on the Lightning Lakes chain, access to this being by an artificial lake created by damming the outflow from the lakes. This was done so the boats could be launched here to go up to the lakes instead of being launched on the lakes' shore. In this way the natural beauty of the lakes and surrounding areas was kept free from parking lots and access roads. The cairn erected on this dam contains a piece of stone from Blarney Castle brought back from Ireland by Robert Boyd, the Laird, who presided at the official opening of this man-created lake.

Horseback riding over mountain trails from Pinewoods to the wilderness areas thrills many for the way leads up Three Brothers Mountain to the alpine meadows which in summer are carpets of alpine growth in a profusion of color.

The higher reaches offer a view of the 49th Parallel marked by a swath cut through the timber and an unexcelled vista of many mountain ranges.

Hiking trails guarantee a good walk and constantly invite the ardent hiker. Two of the walking trails are the trail to Frosty Mountain and the Poland Lake trail. The former is a circular trail leaving the highway at Monument Trail, marked two miles east of the ranger station and heads south. Up the mountain the trail forks; one goes on to Windy Joe Lookout, a forest fire lookout, the other fork goes on past Frosty Mountain, so named because there is snow there all summer, and comes down by Lightning Lakes and on the road back to Pinewoods, completing the circle. This is a good day's hike. The Poland Lake trail goes past the ski area at Gibson's Pass to Poland Lake, a beautiful lake of clear green water, nestled in a high alpine valley. There is a good walking trail. A nature house, staffed by trained parks personnel provides information on what to see and where to see it.

The park has one scene of tragedy, a large tract of burned land through which the highway passes, and this is commonly known as "The Burn."

This area was a well-forested area the same as the rest of the Park, but in August of 1945, before the road was through, this giant fire was started and burned out of control until extinguished by fall rains. It is presumed to have been started by two motorcyclists travelling over the old wagon trail, camping overnight in a surveyor's shake cabin and failing to put out their breakfast fire. The fire was fought by many firefighters. Some came in from Hope over the wagon road. Others came from Princeton by truck. Thus it was that once again a great toll was taken of our forests and recreation areas by sheer carelessness.

The present deletion of park acreage for mining interests is within this burn area near the top of the mountain and is actually at the headwaters of the Similkameen River.

Manning Park, built from a wilderness game reserve into a great tourist attraction, is the gateway to the Okanagan, and with all its facilities has appeal for city dweller and outdoorsman alike. To those who will continue to look after it and add further attractions, we in British Columbia owe a debt of gratitude.

October Paths and People

ANOTHER NATURE RAMBLE with GILEAN DOUGLAS

OCTOBER! The month of banners and bravery. The matador of the year trailing a cloak of gold and scarlet before the black bull of November. But no picador's lance; no barbed darts of the banderillero; no plunge of rapier between relaxed shoulder blades. For, to the undiscerning eye, October never wins. Yet, oh, the courageous colors of seeming defeat before that moment of truth which is the greatest award of all.

There are October people too: the fighters of lost causes, the champions of underdogs, the seekers after that truth which can make us free. Like all persons of strong character they are both loved and hated.

The great mass of in-betweens neither like nor dislike them, but many are envious or expedient and the rest afraid.

After all, who wants to be seen with someone who tosses away popularity and prestige for intangibles that can never be cashed like travellers' cheques? I do, for one, though I must admit that October people—like October days—take a lot of living up to.

Because the break of day will soon seem like mid-morning, I climb to greet October dawns with a special cliff-top "Hi!"

They come with that golden thrust of light which, like understanding, illumines the dark places of earth's minds and mountains. Shyly and blushing a bit, it spreads across the snowy peaks of the eastern mainland. Then suddenly the matador's muleta appears, flaming down hill slopes and up into the clouds of coming day. No shyness now, for there is work to be done. No flamboyance either, but just the natural colors of a colorful month. How like the October people I have known.

I have known them well, for I have sought them everywhere. Often I have found them ostracized, misunderstood, rumor swirling around their heads like a bull's hot reek. Alone and vilified by the changeable crowd, they have stayed steadfast. They have kept on fighting against all odds, against all weakening advice, against what the world calls defeat. Surely Christ on earth was an October man. Which may account for the lack of true Christians in the world. And perhaps each one of us is the bull, though we think we are the matador.

You might say that I grew up with October, for I was in the east in those days with maple and beech flaming around me and streams running gold with birch and willow. They run gold with willow in the Coast Mountains too and there is a small trail there I'll never forget. It runs west from a little river where the little brown crane fishes often. "A river," said Henry Van Dyke, "is the most companionable of all inanimate things."

On one side a rockery of ferns flares green and on the other are blue mallows, with Douglas aster standing royally apart. The path is a great aisle stretching farther and farther back through hemlock, fir and cedar, with the voice of the river coming more and more faintly across red-berried yew and flaming vine maple. In clearings here and there the sun pours warmly down on goldenrod and pearly everlasting. Beyond is a strange and lovely place with yew and vine maple twisted into fantastic shapes and the ground glowing with purple thistle and golden ragwort.

Gossamer spider tents are suspended over blue elder bushes hanging heavy with berries. A touch of frost the night before has brought the gum-covered threads and sensitive trigger lines into prominence. When a victim is in the web these lines — which lead to the spider's parlor — give immediate warning.

Although some webs look as though no one was at home, I know that I have only to tickle a line with a light, smooth twig or search in leaves nearby to discover the wily weaver. On the coarse grass of a clearing pearly lifelines of young spiders indicate where parachuting begins. On a sunny day youthful pilots let out their silken threads from tall plant tops. These rise in the warm air and when long enough the young adventures take off on them into blue sky. After the air cools with sunset the tiny tourists drift down to earth. Next morning the ground is sheeted with silver gossamer.

Now, for the earthbound, there is much balancing on logs and branches over deep gullies sunlit with hedge mustard and yellow bur-marigold. Willows arrow goldenly towards mountain tops on either side side and the crystal-green delicacy of maidenhair spleenwort borders the dancing water of a small stream.

Up above this stream is a waterfall of ivory spray, but it crosses the trail as four swift brooks which be jumped or waded. Masses of Oregon grape mark the way to "The Diggins," where piles of rock and gravel show the work of those who looked for color in metal rather than in sunlight, flower and shining sand.

This curving channel, running to another small river at both ends, has made an island of the territory between. It has been stringently logged over, but is lovely still. Where the trail joins the river there

Comox Ornithologist Traces Bird Sightings By Explorers

Undoubtedly birds were of considerable interest to the men aboard the first vessels to venture along our coast more than 200 years ago, says provincial museum curator Dr. Clifford Carl in the foreword to Theed Pearse's book about the birds early explorers saw.

"The presence of birds often meant proximity to land and of course they must have been a very welcome addition to the otherwise exceedingly monotonous diet. But to men like Webber and Ellis, both of whom had training as naturalists it must have been a tremendously exciting experience to see and sometimes to actually hold a bird entirely new to them and probably new to science," he says.

Mr. Pearse has done a gigantic job of research to produce Birds of the Early Explorers in the Northern Pacific. He does not profess it to be a scientific study. "All it purports to do is to bring together in one volume all remarks that refer to the birdlife by explorers during a given period of time and over a limited part of the North Pacific Ocean," says Mr. Pearse.

The area he includes is enclosed by the boundaries from Juan de Fuca Strait to the southern extremities of Kamchatka, along the eastern coast of that country to Avatcha (Petropavlovsk) from there to Bering Straits, and so much of the Arctic Ocean (Frozen Sea) as was reached by any expedition; thence taking in the Aleutian and other islands to the mainland of North America to Juan de Fuca Strait.

He includes the observations of Russian explorers, Spanish explorers, English explorers, French explorers, and United States explorers, and includes notes from such well-known botanists and naturalists as Georg Wilhelm Steller, who accompanied Russian expeditions and is sometimes known as the Father of Ornithology in the Northern Pacific.

BIRDS OF THE EARLY EXPLORERS IN THE NORTHERN PACIFIC, by Theed Pearse; distributed by Gray's Publishing, Sidney; 275 pages; $7.50.

He is remembered as the discoverer of the now extinct Steller's Sea-cow, the spectacled cormorant, also extinct, and the well-known Steller's Jay.

Mr Pearse was born in Bedford, England, Oct. 26, 1871, and in 1941 retired to devote the rest of his long life to his all-absorbing hobby, bird study.

With his wife, Elizabeth Margaret Llewelyn, who shares his interest, he has lived in Comox, Vancouver Island, since 1945.

Much of his time has been spent in observing birds in the field and in carrying on an active program of banding, involving both gulls and songbirds. The results have appeared in an impressive series of notes and records published in various journals.

His new book was sponsored by the Centennial Commission as a Centennial of Canadian Confederation project under the publications assistance program.—A.R.M.

Trudeau Book Captures General Election Spirit

Because it is the first it suffers from the defects associated with any rush job, notably a lack of deep perception. But the book has merits which subsequent biographies and interpretations may not have and not the least of these is that it accurately captures the spirit which pervaded the country during this year's general election.

The three authors are Toronto newspapermen and all write here with the exuberance of reporters who find themselves thrilled to be part of an exciting moment in history. There is none of the usual world-weary cynicism; like their subject, it's a go-go-go book.

Douglas Stuebing, who acted as general editor of the book, did the research for Trudeau's biography, which forms the first section of the work. This is by no means an in-depth study, but at least it does clear up some of the mystery surrounding the Trudeau family background.

The election campaign is brightly handled by Gary Oakes, a former Daily Colonist reporter, who was a member of the press corps attached to the Trudeau party.

The well illustrated Trudeau A Man for Tomorrow is a good buy for it captures on the wing an important moment of political history and makes clear why Canadians saw fit to entrust the nation's destiny to that exciting, blithe spirit that is Trudeau, who Time Magazine labelled enviously "a man for the times."—E.D.W-H

18,000 Books on Show in Toronto

Some 18,000 library and reference books will be on display at College Book Mart, 1968, at Toronto's Casa Loma, Oct. 8-11, to induce selectors and buyers for college, technical school and public libraries to buy in Canada.

The giant display of books, the first of its kind and size ever to be held in Canada, contains educational, general and reference books in 24 subject categories which are of particular interest to community college, undergraduate and public libraries.

Planned and organized by the Canadian Book Publishers' Council in collaboration with all Canadian book publishers, and publisher-agents, the display will enable the tax-supported educational institutions to select and order their books in Canada, from Canadian sources, at competitive prices, and without delays in delivery.

The selection process will be facilitated by the pre-selection which have been made by Canadian publishers who have first-hand knowledge of the book requirements of the institutions concerned. Plans for the book display were the result of the enormous difficulties experienced by the newly established Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology in Ontario whose library requirements are complex, urgent and in areas of study without relevant precedent. While College Book Mart, 1968, is aimed at such colleges and could produce "instant libraries" for them, the books displayed are of wider interest and will attract the attention of institutional and public librarians from all over Canada.

A unique feature of the display is that all book listings have been consolidated and processed electronically for the production of a catalogue and to permit ordering and order processing by computer. The Canadian display is one of the first anywhere in the world so organized.

College Book Mart, 1968, inaugurates a determined effort by Canadian book publishers to halt the trend in book buying for public institutions direct from foreign sources. In recent years this trend has eroded the Canadian industry's market for library and college books to the extent of at least $50,000,000 a year. Large institutional book orders increasingly have gone to foreign jobbers and wholesalers who have been able to offer order-processing and "custom-made" book selections through the facilities of their large parent-organizations, mostly in the United States.

With the College Book Mart, 1968, Canadian publishers and publisher-agents offer an important category of Canadian educational institutions the most sophisticated, most efficient and most economical means of book selecting and purchasing known anywhere in the world today. If successful, this first display will become an annual event and will serve as an example for other displays, both of a more general and of an even more specialized nature.

Book publishing in Canada competes against odds not experienced in any other country in the world. No English-language market of comparable size is offered as many books as the Canadian market is. Indigenous publishing in Canada has developed and must continue to rely to an important extent on revenues from book importations by copyright agreements. By the same token unlimited importation, especially of educational books, is inhibiting the very costly development of publishing in Canada. Canadian publishers and publisher-agents who represent British and U.S. publishers and have developed markets for their books in Canada, have seen the results of their efforts dwindle through competition from large international jobbers and wholesalers serving the whole North American market, often without regard for Canadian copyright and other legislation.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

BOOKS and AUTHORS

At the Heart of It

In the 50s Cameron Hawley, a business executive turned novelist, burst on the publishing scene with three novels of the upper echelons in corporation life (Executive Suite, Cash McCall and The Lincoln Lords), all of which became immediate best sellers. Hawley was a good if not great storyteller, and this, coupled with the then unfamiliar expertise of big business, promised to usher in a new genre in popular fiction. In 1962, however, he was struck down by a heart attack and nothing more was heard from him for six -years.

THE HURRICANE YEARS, by Cameron Hawley; Little, Brown and Co.; 387 pp., $7.50.

Now he makes his return to fiction with another novel of big business, but one with a difference. This time — you guessed it — the central motif is the executive heart attack. The hero, Judd Wilder, is not Cameron Hawley (he's younger, for one thing), but you don't have to read very far to realize that only a man who had himself suffered a coronary occlusion could have produced so precise and painful an account of the experience. So vivid, so clinical, is the description of the trauma that the reader is virtually made a party to it.

Wilder is only 44 when stricken while driving along the Pennsylvania Turnpike. As an executive, however, he is aggressive, competitive, energetic, and ambitious — the classic causes of coronary failures. Hawley makes him a key officer in a large carpet company, a man whose driving ambition is wrecking his marriage and draining his life.

These (to quote the author) are the "hurricane years" when the damage is done. At this point, while his patient is lying flat on his back in a small country hospital, the novelist fills us in on his background, business and domestic, more especially his wife and son. Pretty soon we are enmeshed in a large-scale narrative possessing a good deal of relevance for readers familiar with big business.

But the crux of the story is bound up with the patient fighting for his life. The physician in charge of his case, Dr. Aaron Kharr, is a humane, perceptive, non-money-minded specialist in heart research, much of which he discusses for our benefit in the novel.

Younger readers may conceivably find this tedious, but older readers certainly will not.

Dr. Kharr postulates a highly plausible theory to cover cases like Wilder, involving the proportions of adrenalin and heparin in the bloodstream. Ladies, if your husbands are executives, make them read pages 210 and 231.

Hawley being what is nowadays called an "old-fashioned novelist," it remains only to be said that his characters are credible enough to demonstrate his thesis; namely, that too many executives bring on their own heart attacks. His story has a dramatic beginning, an instructive middle, and the traditional happy ending. Incidentally, it also provides the best possible proof of the author's own complete recovery. — M. B.

October Paths and People

are willow washes with hawkweed, aster, goldenrod, clotbur, everlasting and great mullein growing beside them. Hemlock, yew and cottonwood stand sparsely and tiny waterfalls drop from high cliffs covered with moss and fern.

On a mossy bank grow vivid green liverworts, their forked flattish lobes pressed close to the ground. Soon they will be wearing pixie caps of stalked green cones.

Some liverworts I have seen in other place produces dark, shining capsules on long stalks, with violet pods that split when ripe to release snufflike spores from what look like masses of twisted threads. Others resemble nothing so much as umbrellas and some are like the tiny, green gelatinous bubbles which pixies might blow. At Channel Rock they make constellations of emerald stars on the dried mud of my rain pond.

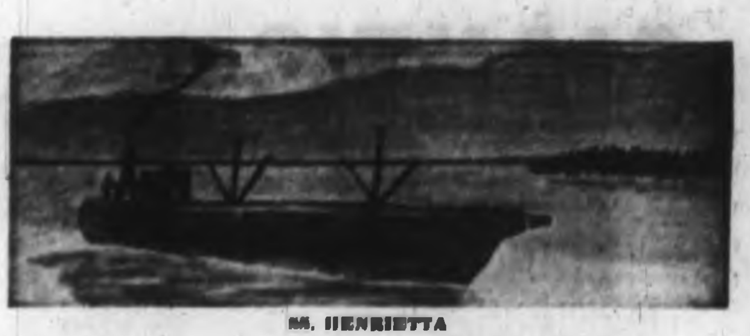
Down at sea level it is more genial still and even the fireweed smoke is not yet blowing. Fireweed, willow-herb, flaunting widow — call it what you will — was uncommon a hundred years ago. Now that there are so many more burned-over places to colonise it has increased rapidly by means of white cottony seeds which are even lighter than thistledown. The bombed and burned cities of the last war knew it well and many a heavy heart was made just a little lighter by this tall, soldier-straight plant with its masses of rosy flowers. Even lovelier, if not as poignant, is the rare sight of a patch of white-flowered willow-herb against dark conifers.

Though ivy and sumach blaze in the forest, though maples light path and hillside, yet I have just eaten a strawberry and heard a robin chirp. Perhaps this year October will drive the black tail up into the high hills. Perhaps there will be no real November and that, to the undiscerning, will seem like victory. But true victory is in the sleeping bulb, in the vital root beneath the withered plant. The earth knows that. It is in compassion, in holding on, in trying to make the way straight. It is in "the evidence of things not seen". October people have known it all the time.



MS. HENRIETTA

THE HENRIETTA

By CUTHBERT M. BROWN

The Henrietta had her masts and rigging removed and auxiliary engines and boiler placed amidships. She was used along the Pacific coast to ferry varied cargoes from place to place, where, you might say, time was no object and cheapness was the essence of the contract.

So it was that on the night of July 13, 1908, this rather ungainly carrier was nosing its way up the coast of Vancouver Island bound for Prince Rupert loaded with general cargo and some horses, to be used in the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

Just opposite The Gap, or space between Protection and Newcastle Islands, the lights of Nanaimo could be seen, where she needed to call for bunker coal. Now the captain, and indeed most of the small crew, had been partaking more freely than wisely of John Barleycorn; though the second in command still retained some sense of direction and protested most vigorously when the skipper attempted to head the boat in this direction.

The mate said the real harbor was farther to the south, which led to an argument, and blows were struck. However, before the altercation could proceed very far the hulk came in violent contact with the rocky reef that guards the way to this false entrance, and all further progress was barred.

Whether the sudden shock tended to sober the captain or not, I cannot say, but the state of the poor horses in the hold below can hardly be imagined. Some had broken legs and were otherwise injured by the impact. Those more fortunate were seized by a terrible fright and in their struggles to get free began to jump and kick, making the already bad situation worse.

Something had to be done quickly, so the distraught crew hoisted the horses out of the hold and over the side into the water. As this was some 500 yards or more from shore, those that could swam to shore and continued to live in a wild state on Protection Island for some years, finally dying off completely. The others drowned and their carcasses washed up on the beaches to become skulls and bones bleaching in the sun in the years that followed.

The ship was floated at high tide some hours later, and as far as I know continued on in a more or less useful career.

Some three or four years later when camping with the Scouts on Newcastle Island, we went across to Protection Island and saw some of the wild horses and, of course, the bones on the beach.

Of the reef in question, this had been and I expect still is, a great headache to the fishermen and other users of these waters, seeing that the authorities had not seen the need to mark it. The local people had marked it with a small fir tree or some sticks, which would be washed away by winter storms and need renewing the following year. The rock itself was rather flat on top and there were only a few feet showing at very low tides. I have seen sacks and boxes of stuff left from small boats thus marooned and their owners seeking to lighten their draft and thus float clear had left these souvenirs of their misfortune behind. One local resident slid his displacement speed boat up on this same reef and spent a most distressing night until with dawn help arrived.

About three miles offshore is another low rocky promontory called Snake Island. How did it derive its peculiar name? It is true that it somewhat resembles a snake when viewed more or less from sea level, but in days long gone by it was inhabited by many snakes.

Living in the holes and cracks in the rock, they came out on warm days to sun themselves and incidentally to eat the seagull eggs, of which there were many. So it was that the seagulls got together and held a pow-wow, or whatever it is that seagulls hold, and decided to put a stop to this most untoward situation.

They took the snakes for a little ride in the sky, suddenly dropping them to the rocks below, which had the desired effect, and soon Mr. Snake was eliminated and the seagulls prospered mightily, and now it was a great breeding ground for them, leading one to the thought that maybe it might be more appropriate for it to be called Gull Island.

Be that as it may, if my memory serves me correctly the island is in the form of a V, with a pebbly beach in between. Above the beach, in the relative shelter of the V, pretty wild flowers grow: camas, buttercups, sea blush, and many others.

It was said that the island was inhabited at one time by an old fisherman or beachcomber, but that was long ago, and it must have been quite a chore for there were no trees so all the firewood and fresh water would have to be brought over. However, Snake Island, though snakeless, lives on, and I have no doubt that the bell on the buoy at its eastern edge utters its melancholy clang while the gulls listen on the lonely rocks.

Not too long ago, one of the B.C. Government ferries "touched in" at Snake Island—but the "touch" was a little heavy and the expense rather high, so like Dr. Foster of the well known nursery rhyme, she never went there again!

GIANT'S HEAD PARK

By ERIC SISMEY

Summerland's Giant's Head Park, which soars nearly 2,000 feet above the waters of Okanagan Lake, has been recognised as one of the most original and worthwhile Centennial projects in Canada.

As long as people live in or visit southern Okanagan they will journey to its crown to revel in the view and enjoy that sense of freedom attained only by lofty adventure.

A time capsule cemented in the base of the commemorative cairn encases photographs, newspapers and other items pertaining to Okanagan living in 1967. It is expected that the capsule will be opened in 2067; but it could well be 3067 since Giant's Head will remain unchanged long after other Centennial projects have tumbled down and fountains squirted their last.

The suggestion that Giant's Head be made a park was not new. It was made by two Summerland pioneers, Magnus Tait and Walter Wright, a long time ago. But cost was always a barrier and not until Federal financial assistance became available for 1967 Centennial projects did Giant's Head receive serious consideration and was finally chosen from a number of other suggestions offered by Summerland people.

Through the years residents and visitors, alike, have followed an old trail to the summit, 2,774 feet in the air, to view the country round. Now a few minutes drive takes, even the elderly, to within a reasonable distance from the top.

The turnoff from Summerland orchards to the park road is not hard to find but it is best to inquire in downtown Summerland just off B.C. Highway 97. The short pitch to the double ornamental iron gates, decorated with our B.C. dogwood emblem is quite steep. In fact, the two-mile road up to the parking area, high on the mountain, is a second gear road which winds upwards in switchbacks through wooded glades and across grassy slopes golden with spring sunflower from May into June.

Two trails from the parking lead to the summit; one is steep, suited for the agile; the other, a gravel footway winds gently upward and along this path comfortable benches are arranged to take advantage of inspiring views.

Guard rails around the summit protect against precipitous cliffs on the south and east and west. A score of engraved viewing tubes aim to identify distant mountain peaks and other interest points.

The commemorative cairn, simple as it should be, consists of a large irregular block of native stone bearing a bronze plaque. It is mounted on the concrete slab in which the time capsule is sealed. And nearby our national flag flutters from a tall staff.

The sun dial near the cairn never fails to attract attention. I was amused by some who leaned to consult its shadow. First by a long studied look at the dial followed by a glance at the timepiece on their wrist. A number then turned away with a shake of the head never realizing that while our earth has been spinning along its course through eternity it was a white invader who invented Daylight Saving Time.

When Giant's Head Park was dedicated on our National holiday in 1967 about 400 attended the ceremonies at the cairn. From that day interest has never lagged. This year, in mid-August, three foreign cars together with several from other provinces were on the parking area and along the road part way up the hill three parties of young folk were cutting across the switchbacks.

The entrance gate is opened for motor travel from May until October. But regardless of the season the view from any point is always breathtaking and may well rival any prospect on the continent. The best way, if one cares to make the effort, is to walk all the way and to take a full day for the outing.

Centennial chairman, Dr. James Marshall and his associates have done a very commendable job. They chose the layout of road and trails wisely. They were wise too in providing markers to identify trees and shrubs which may be strange to those from outside our borders. Happily there are no refreshment stands in the park even though there is no water. And since the round trip from the parking to the summit may be a thirsty hike on a summer day it is well for visitors to carry a full vacuum jug in the trunk of the car.
